Deceased was 15 years of age and the fourth son of Mr. Finch Miller, bandmaster of the Sons of England band, of which organization he was also a member. He had formerly been connected with the 57th Battalion band during his father's leadership.

The management of the Bell Telephone Co., where deceased was employed, speak in the highest terms of his industry and promising business ability. He served one year as night operator and several months as day operator, during which time not one single complaint had been made against him by the company's patrons with whom together with his fellow employees he was exceedingly popular. The Bell company mourn the loss of a faithful servant whom they were about to promote to the position of collector, and whom they feel it will prove difficult to replace.

The bereaved family will have the sympathy of the entire community in this early calling away by death of an exceedingly popular and estimable son.

A SENSATIONAL CASE

In Ashburnham to be Investigated by County Magistrate Edmison.

The quiet little village of Ashburnham is deeply agitated over recent developments which go to show if reports be correct that marriage has proved to be a decided failure in the case of George Quinn and wife, of Fenelon Falls.

It is alleged that Quinn came to town in search of his better half, whom he located at the burg over the bridge residing with Joseph Haines, an employee at the brewery. The husband taking exception to this act of his spouse, procured a revolver and a box of cartridges and started on the war path. Mrs. Quinn states that being threatened by her husband who flourished the dangerous weapon in her presence, she snatched the revolver from him and hid it in the house. She then made her escape through the back door, and lodged a complaint with constable Fitzgerald, who placed the infuriated husband under arrest.

The stories told by husband and wife differ materially. Quinn states that he was the owner of a fine farm near Fenelon Falls, which his wife persuaded him to deed over to her before he took a trip to the old Country about ten months ago. On returning he found that the stock, etc., had been sold off the farm and his son was in possession. He states that since being deserted by his wife he has worked around amongst the farmers of the district but hearing of his wife's intention to sell the farm he resolved to look up his missing spouse. Quinn says also that he warned Hanes off the farm before he went to the Old Country.

The wife's story is truly pathetic. She alleged that her husband deserted her, leaving her with a family of young children to support. She rented the farm and came to town securing employment as house keeper, with Hanes, which course she had to follow in order to provide for her little ones.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Mr. Robert Bull Meets With a Mishap That May Prove Fatal.

Yesterday shortly before noon, while Mr. Robert Bull, blacksmith, was driving in his dog cart, and when ascending the hill on the other side of the locks bridge he stood up to take off his coat, the horse gave a sudden start forward, throwing him out over the back of the rig. The seat, which was loose, fell on top of him. He was picked up and removed to the shade on the side of the road and a hack sent for, when he was taken to the hospital. It was found that the shock caused paralysis of the lower part of the body, but his condition, while very critical, is not by any means hopeless. He is a man of about forty years of age, very hardy and this will go a long way towards pulling him through.

CANADA BEING ROBBED.

Mr. Beckles Willson Explains our Position on Boundary Trouble.

WILL STAND NO TRICKERY.

Canada Will Fight Before She Again Gives Way to Impertinent Pretensions of Her Neighbor.

Mr. Willson Has Written a Strong Letter to the Daily Chronicle, Setting Forth Canada's Position in the Alaska Boundary Claim—Canada Refuses to be Tricked Out of Her Just Rights.

London, Sept. 1.—Mr. Beckles Willson, author of "The Great Company," a book on the Hudson Bay Company, which has attracted general attention, and who recently returned to England from a tour in Canada, with a Canadian bride—Miss Ethel Grace Dudley, of Colborne—has written a strong letter to The Daily Chronicle setting forth the position of Canada on the Alaskan boundary question, answering those who accuse Canada of being unreasonable. He says:

"Canada's attitude in the unfortunate Alaskan controversy would be more readily understood if all who write upon the subject were familiar with the history of the previous negotiations between Great Britain and the American Republic, in which the Dominion was vitally concerned. In every instance Canada is seen to emerge with loss of territory or privilege. It has been confessed by one American statesman of eminence that Maine belonged rightfully to her; her incontestable proof that Rouse's Point lay within her territory was ignored and the command of Lake Champlain given to her enemies, fair Oregon and the islands of the straits, were they not hers—by discovery, occupation, possession!

Gold Discovered.

"And then at last came the discovery of vast quantities of gold in a remote and barren quarter, won through the patience and almost incredible fortitude of the servants of the Hudson's Bay Company. A rise in the importance of the district ensued, only to be discounted by the information that the Americans intended to dispute and forcibly deny Canada's possession of an open port, although every Canadian map shows such port to be hers. Grasp this, and then reiterate, if you can, the charge that Canada is unreasonable. Can you wonder that every patriotic Canadian devotedly concerned in his country's future and chagrined at her past losses should protest in the most emphatic manner against further sacrifice of what he truly believes to be his.

No More Erasures.

"'What!' is the cry, in effect, of the Canadians, 'erase more red from our map. Sacrifice more territory which our primary school geographies call ours! Never! Retreat once more before the impertinent pretensions of our neighbors! We will fight first! We might have submitted to the unjust judgments of the Mother Country in times past; but we are strong er now: and moreover, the sympathy of Britons all over the Empire is on our side, as we are on theirs. We refuse to be tricked or browbeaten out of our just rights."

ROWED ACROSS THE CHANNEL.

Daring Excursion in a Small Boat By Two Englishmen.

London, Sept. 1.—A daring excursion in an open boat has just been successfully accomplished. Messrs. W. B. Andrew and R. Tashers, who some weeks ago back rowed round the Isle of Wight in an open boat in twenty-four hours, a distance of about seventy-five miles, left Sandown on a Thursday afternoon in their own open rowing boat to row across channel to Cherbourg. The estimated distanceof this trip is about 100 miles. They took no gear except two pair of sculls and one pair of oars, a compass and a life-belt each. The start was made at 5.30 p.m., and on Saturday morning a telegram announcing their arrival came from Barfleur, some little distance from Cherbourg, saying that they had put in there owing to heavy weather.

Honor For a Briton.

Rome, Sept. 1.—The office of major-domo to the Pope will be conferred on Mgr. Stoner, titular Archbishop of Trebizond. This well-known English prelate is very popular in the British Catholic colony here as well as in English clerical circles. His elevation to the very important post of major-domo was resolved on in order to make a good impression in England. In Vatican circles, according to the "Messagero," the appointment is a political act, designed to conciliate England, and further the propagation of Catholicism in that country.

THE GREAT TRIAL AT RENNES STILL DRAGS ON.

A Favorable Day for the Accused, Though His Counsel's Bullying Tactics With Witnesses Got a Set-Back.

STRONG EVIDENCE FOR THE PRISONER.

Various Officers Testify That He Could Not Have Written the Bordereau. Labori Accuses the Court of Suppressing Questions.

Rennes, Sept. 1.—At the Dreyfus trial to-day the report asked by M. Labori was read regarding M. Dubreuil, the Parisian friend of M. De Beaurepaire, who testified August 23 to the effect that Dreyfus met a German attache at the house of a mutual friend named Bodson, and whose cross-examination reflected severly on his reputation. The report was to the effect that M. Dubreuil never was a horse dealer as claimed by M. Labori, and that the character of the witness was most respectable, he being held in general esteem.

Anti-Dreyfus Story Refuted.

A groom named Germain then deposed to seeing Dreyfus at the German army manoeuvres in Alsace. Germain declared he saddled a horse for Dreyfus to follow the manoeuvres, and he said that Major Infreville accompanied Dreyfus riding, addingthat the Major told the witness the name of his companion.

Col. Jouaust questioned Dreyfus, and although he did not confound the prisoner in any way, Dreyfus made a weak reply, in declaring that he could not remember whether he hired horses of Germain's employer or not.

The next few witnesses, however, gave strong testimony in favor of Dreyfus, and sadly knocked Germain's testimony about. His employer, a man named Kuhlman, got up and declared that all Germain said was untrue, and Major Infreville followed and declared he never knew Dreyfus, so Germain's allusions to him were baseless.

Dreyfus Knew Germany's Position.

Capt. Lemonnier, who was a probationer on the headquarter's staff at the same time as Dreyfus deposed that the prisoner told him he was well acquainted with a certain German position because he had followed the Alsatian manoeuvres.

Dreyfus replied that Capt. Lemonnier must have mixed up his remarks. The prisoner added that he was acquainted with that part of Alsace, because he had spent his youth there, and not because he was present at the manoeuvres of the German army there.

A witness named Villon then told a tale of how he overheard a conversation, in a Berlin cafe, between two German officers in which a remark was made that mobilization plans was expected from Dreyfus. The cafe, however, has since disappeared, and there are no means of verifying Villon's story.

Dreyfus Scores Again.

Two or three witnesses, in support of Dreyfus on artillery questions were next heard, and Commissary Fischer testified that he was charged to investigate the leakage of documents at the Gunnery School at Bourges, and found nothing to incriminate Dreyfus.

Lieut. Bernheim testified that he lent Esterhazy documents dealing with artillery, and was unable to get them back, and Artillery Lieutenant Brugere, who attended a gunnery course at Chalons testified that it was easy for an outsider to obtain particulars about the guns. He said that he himself had on one occasion lent his firing manual to an infantry officer.

More Talk of Honor.

Gen. Roget asked to be confronted with the witness, and said the latter wrote M. Cavaignac, then Minister of War, a violent letter of resignation, in which he declared it was a dishonor to serve in the French army.

This declaration caused a scene, for Lieut. Brugere, turning to Gen. Roget, cried: "I protest against Gen. Roget's words. I affirm that I never said any such thing."

Gen. Roget replied "Well, that was the general sense of the letter."

A roar came from the audience, and Lieut. Brugere again emphatically declared Gen. Roget was wrong.

Maitre Labori and Col. Jouaust agreed that the letter should be obtained from the Ministry of War and read in court.

No Great Secret Anyway.

The next witness Capt. Carvalho, a handsome young artillery officer proved an excellent reinforcement for Dreyfus. He gave his evidence clearly and boldly, and emphatically declared that there was no special precautions to keep the mechanism of the "120 short" gun secret.

Moreover, he added, from April, 1894, the artillery officers had a description of the hydro-pneumatic brake given them.

"Here," said Capt. Carvalho, "is an actual copy of the manual, which I hand over to the court martial.

M. Labori then had an animated discussion with Col. Jouaust, who at first refused counsel's request to read a letter, which the latter had received yesterday evening signed "Corningue" setting forth that the firing manual had been copied by men referred to as "A" and "B."

Col. Picquart in reply to M. Labori, confirmed the statements named in the letter, and said he thought Major Lauth could say something on that point, whereupon the Major rose and declared he did not know "Corn-

Lawyers Sat Upon.

M. Labori then asked to be allowed to question Major Lauth, but Col. Jouaust refused. Counsel insisted, but Col. Jouaust waved him down, whereupon M. Labori cried: "You suppress all awkward questions." Sensation.

The Government Commissary, Major Carriere said: "I desire to point out that the defence is always asking to speak, while I am always refused permission to do so when I ask."

Col. Jouaust, out of patience, retorted: "I have heard enough; be quiet. The incident is closed."

This cavalier treatment of the Government Commissary caused general laughter.

Ignorance of the Bordereau.

Gen. Sebert followed. He also proved a trump card for Dreyfus, as he declared the wording of the bordereau revealed professional ignorance. He also said that the man who wrote it was not an artillery officer, and said such an officer as Dreyfus could not make the mistakes he referred to. This declaration made a profound impression on the court, which was intensified when Gen. Sebert, who is a venerable looking gentleman, concluded fearlessly: "I am happy to have had the strength to carry here my stone towards the edifice of reparation which the court is building up with so much care and confidence, while holding itself aloof from outside passion."

Major Ducros deposed that he commanded a field battery that he knew Dreyfus, and offered him certain information. But, he pointed out, Dreyfus never asked him a question, although he knew he, the witness, possessed most interesting information, notably particulars about the hydro-pneumatic brake.

Gen. Mercier here intervened and said that at the time Major Ducros was speaking of, the Ducros field-gun had been rejected in favor of the Deport cannon, and, he said Dreyfus therefore could have no object in procuring particulars of the Ducros gun.

More support for Dreyfus was forthcoming in the deposition of Major Hartmann, of the artillery, who expressed the opinion that the author of the bordereau did not know what he was writing about, since he spoke of the "120 short" gun, when he meant the "120 long" gun.

Hartmann's evidence was directed the author of the bordereau, and that theauthor of the bordereau, and that the artillery information mentioned in it was accessible to many officers of all arms in the spring of 1894.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Wm. Spilsbury Arrested on a Charge of Trying to Poison Cattle.

William Spilsbury, a resident of North Monaghan, was arrested on Thursday, and locked up on a charge of attempting to poison a steer. He was subsequently let out on bail and will appear next Wednesday, before County Magistrate Edmison.

It is alleged that Spilsbury was seen in the act with which he was charged. It appears that Jas. Ruth, a cattle dealer, had bought two steers from Mr. A. Dobbin, who lives near Spilsbury, a few miles out of town and he went out on Wednesday to take the cattle away. They had got out of their pasture and were feeding on the road. Ruth drove down the road some distance from Dobbin's house and when he came near the cattle he saw a man whom he believes to be Spilsbury feeding one of them his hands. On Ruth's approach he left the cattle and went over the fence and into the woods. The buyer found that the stuff which was being given the beast was a mixture of some kind of chop and taking it to a house near by, it was found to be heavily charged with Paris green. The case has aroused somewhat of a sensation in the neighborhood.

Rye Seed For Farmers.

The following two sets of winter wheat varieties will be sent free by mail, in one half pound lots of each variety, to farmers applying for them, who will carefully test the three kinds in the set which they choose, and will report the results after harvest next year. The seed will be sent out in the order in which the applications are received as long as the supply lasts. Set 1, Dawson Golden Chaff, Early Genesee Giant, Early Red Clawson; set 2, Dawson Golden Chaff, Diamond Grit, Gold Coin. Each person wishing one of these sets should apply as early as possible, mentioning which set he desires, and the grain, with instructions for testing, and the blank form on which to report, will be furnished free of cost to his address, until the supply of grain for distribution is exhausted. All communications should be addressed to C. A. Zavitz, Experimentalist, Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont.

A Good Appointment.

Mr. John Cameron has been appointed to the position vacated by Mr. Herb Hall in the Peterborough Custom House. Mr. Cameron's friends in Peterborough and the public generally will approve of the appointment. It is said that Mr. Robert Hall will also be appointed to the position at present filled by an outside party in the local Customs House. No more popular appoints could be made than these.

Committed For Trial.

Eugene Bailey, who hired a horse from a Norwood livery man, and then attempted to dispose of it in Peterborough, was before Magistrate Dumble yesterday on a charge of horse stealing. The liveryman was present to identify his horse, and witnesses were produced who testified that the animal had been offered to them at from $25 down to $10. The prisoner offered no defence, and was committed for trial. Mr. W. H. Moore appeared for the Crown, and Mr. E. B. Stone conducted the case for the prisoner.

Resigned His Position.

Mr. "Herb." Hall has resigned his position as landing waiter at the Customs House here, to take a position on the mechanical engineering staff of the Parks' Steel Co., of Pittsburg, Pa. Mr. Hall was a general favorite in Peterborough and hundreds of his friends will be pleased to hear of his future success in his choice of profession. The Times joins in expressing the hope that he will climb to the top of the ladder of fame.

JOE'S GREAT PATIENCE.

The Situation in South Africa Has Become Rather Complicated.

EVIL DAY BEING POSTPONED

The Standard Remarks That Delay Opens the Way for a Severer Conflict.

Col. Hector Macdonald, the Omdurman Hero, Urgently Summoned to the War Office and He Expects to Go to the Cape at Once—South Rhodesia Volunteers Being Sworn In—An Unfounded Statement.

London, Sept. 1.—The situation in South Africa has become rather complicated. The strong feeling of the Dutch element in the Cape Colony evidently influences the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Chamberlain, to do everything possible to avert a rupture and explain the further endeavor for a conference at Cape Town to arrange for the constitution of an arbitration court and to deal with the question of suzerainty, which, rather than franchise, now takes the leading place in the controversy. The Standard says: "Diplomatic dalliance only postpones the evil day and prepares for us a still severer conflict. Until we resort to decisive measures every day adds to the offensive and defensive strength of the Boers, and proportionately fosters their infatuated belief in their own invincibility which lies at the root of their obduracy. Thus we are confronted with an exceedingly grave question."

The Daily News says: "Mr. Chamberlain's despatches exhibit a game of patience almost in the aspect of a comedy."

The special despatches from Johannesburg express the belief that the Volksraad will oppose President Kruger going to Cape Town.

General Joubert is credited with saying: "There will not be war, but Great Britain will not get all she wants."

The Uitlanders are much irritated at the prospect of further delay.

Burghers Excited.

Cape Town, Sept. 1.—Reports received here from various outlying districts of the Transvaal describe them as being in a state of excitement. The burghers, it is said, are watching the developments keenly, but the majority of them hope for a peaceful solution of the crisis. There is a general exodus of British subjects from the larger towns. Orders have been issued to the commandants and field cornets to have themselves and the burghers in readiness in the event of an outbreak of hostilities.

Macdonald Summoned.

London, Sept. 1.—Colonel Hector Archibald Macdonald, the Omdurman hero, has been urgently summoned to report at the War Office. He expects to go to Cape Colony immediately.

Recruits Muster.

Bulawayo, Matabeleland, British South Africa, Sept. 1.—Recruits for Colonel Plumbers' camp are going to that place daily. Sixty South Rhodesia volunteers were sworn in yesterday.

An Unfounded Statement.

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, Sept. 1.—The assertion made yesterday by a local newspaper that orders have been given for the immediate supply of equipment and cartridges to the Orange Free State artillery is declared to be unfounded.

OBITUARY.

The Late John Miller.

Yesterday we chronicled the death of Mr. John Miller, son of Mr. Finch Miller, which occurred the day previously at Nicholls' Hospital. The sad event is regretted by many who knew him in his capacity as night operator in the Bell Telephone Company's exchange here. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 3 p.m. from the family residence, corner of Stewart and Charlotte streets.

The Late William Morgan.

On Thursday evening there occurred the death of Mr. William Morgan, one of the oldest and most widely known residents of Otonabee. Mr. Morgan was 66 years of age. He was born in Hertfordshire, England, and came to Canada with his parents the next year, 1834. Ever since that time, for 65 years, he has lived on the old homestead in Otonabee. Mr. Morgan never married. He was universally respected and had many friends in the community. The deceased had been ailing for about a year and a half, but was not really ill until about two weeks ago.

The surviving members of the family are Messrs. A. P. Morgan, of town, John, of Warsaw, and Arthur, of Otonabee and Mrs. McMartin, of Otonabee.

The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon.

A Bad Spot.

The shallows, known as Yankee Bonnet, a few miles below the locks, should be attended to by the Government. On Thursday the City of Peterborough, on account of the low water, was unable to reach town with the St. Andrews' Sunday school excursion on board without great trouble and delay. Superintendent Rogers should deepen the channel at the place at once.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 1, 1899

AN AMERICAN VIEW.

The Chicago Chronical, one of the most progressive western papers, recently had a lengthy article on Canada's waterways. Here is what it says of the Trent Valley Canal:

Still another project for connecting the waters of the Georgian bay with those of the river St. Lawrence is the Trent valley canal which is already partly constructed and continues to receive government subsidies in every budget. But, unfortunately, the projectors of the Trent valley canal took no account of modern developments in the grain-carrying trade, and its capacity, even when completed, will not suffice for much more than local business.

It will be a sort of Erie canal, passing through thickly populated sections of Ontario, and may in time be deepened and enlarged to formidable prestige as a carrier of through grain to the seaboard. It will connect Georgian bay with the Bay of Quinte, which is an arm of Lake Ontario, and joins the latter at the head of St. Lawrence.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Manitoba harvest is surpassing all records—while the grain is of a superior quality. This means good times for Ontario, because when the prairie farmers have funds they invest largely in the products of our factories.

Grain dealers of Toronto are exercised over the appearance of smut in the new crop of Ontario fall wheat, and at a meeting on Saturday passed a resolution urging farmers to treat their seed by one or other of the methods found successful at the experimental farm.

The Telltale Eye.

"No matter how self possessed a man may appear on the surface," said a close observer, "there are certain involuntary movements by which he will always betray himself to minute scrutiny. To illustrate the point, here's a neat little parlor trick in mind reading:

Seat yourself directly in front of your subject and tell him to hook his finger tips together before his chest and pull as hard as he can, at the same time thinking intently of some letter of the alphabet. Then look fixedly at his right eye and repeat the letters aloud, beginning with A. When you come to the one he is thinking about, a swift, indescribable change will flash across the pupil. It is purely unconscious and involuntary, and no human being alive can prevent it. The purpose of the finger tip pulling is merely to distract his thoughts and keep him from baffling you by concentration of will. Try it some time."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"No," said Mr. Gogblink.

But he went in to see his friend Mr. Nobbler again the very next day.

"Um-m! You're coming in pretty often now, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"Ya-as," said Mr. Gogblink. "I'm sort o' bringing up the average."—New Copper Shares.

Safest Investment, Largest Dividends.

A portion of the full paid and non-assessable capital stock of the Boston & Texas Copper Company is offered for sale at Five Dollars per share (par $10 for Treasury purposes), and is recommended as a safe and highly promising investment.

The company controls twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in North Texas which is also valuable for farming and town site purposes. The tract is some 10 miles long and about three miles wide. It is equivalent in size to five hundred ordinary mining claims.

The property has been developed sufficiently to begin producing at once, large amounts of the richest copper ore (40 to 70 per cent.) taken out and marketed, and inexhaustible quantities of copper marl and clay running from 3 to 15 per cent. copper found. (Calumet and Hecla and other great dividend payers are working on 1 to 3 per cent. ore.)

The property is within 12 miles of a railroad and fuel and water are available. The ores and marl are on the surface and a few feet down, and can be mined and converted into copper cheaper than any other deposits in America. Copper will be produced on the ground and a plant of moderate cost will treat 200 to 500 tons of ore and material per day, and according to engineers' estimates earn $3,000 to $5,000 per day net, with copper at 15 cts per pound. It is now 18 cts. per pound.

The property has a historical reputation and a record in the State Geological Reports. It has been examined and reported upon by the highest engineering, geological and expert authorities, and its merit and value are established beyond all question. It is not an experiment, nor its value speculative, they are proven and demonstrated.

From Report of Prof. Wm. DeRyee, former State Chemist of Texas.

"Such numerous outcrops of copper ore have been traced over the summit and sides of these hills that out of 12,000 acres of land which the company own, hardly a 160 acre tract should be found without ore upon the surface.

A cross-cut to the depth of 15 feet was made upon the Isbell lead, and ten hours' work resulted in the raising of 6,000 lbs. of rich copper ore, averaging about 60 per cent. of copper. (Worth $360, net.)

It is easily smelted and the strata in which it is found can also be more economically excavated than other in which copper ores occur."

From Report of Prof. W. F. Cummins, former Geologist of Texas.

* * * "In order that I might see the condition of this lode after this amount of work had been done, I employed a few hands and cleaned out the tunnels when I found a lode of copper. This is the disulphate of copper and will yield as high as 70 per cent. of copper. I drove the tunnel twenty feet further into the hill, following the lode. When I had gone about twelve feet I struck another lode of copper eighteen inches east and six inches below the second lode. In three feet more we struck another lode below the second lode. Immediately below the lower sandstone is a stratum of cupriferous marl schists extending the entire width of the tunnel, say four feet, and is probably much wider. This marl will yield about 15 per cent. of copper."

From Report of Prof. Gustave Westman, Mining Engineer.

"I beg to express my entire satisfaction with and confidence in the report made by Prof. W. F. Cummins.

I only had to remove one foot of earth from the surface on the three spots already mentioned in order to find large deposits bedded into the clay. After washing, this clay was found to contain 15 per cent. of copper ore of same value as above. These ores could of course be taken out and made available at a relatively small expense.

The cupriferous marl situated below the sandstone, containing 15 per cent. of copper, can be estimated worth at the place at least $10.00 per ton, net."

From Report of George F. Rendall, Mining Engineer.

"It is a self-evident fact deducible from every report that on this property large bodies of copper ore exists and that hundreds of tons have been shipped of high grade ore.

That a deposit of this nature can at a very small expense be made to yield handsome profits, from all existing reports, appears not only likely but certain."

From Report of Francis Arthur Reall, Superintendent.

"This property is all right and there is all the copper you want here. I think it is the best in Texas and it seems to have been selected as such for copper. It is near the top of a water shed and the hills crop out here. I think there is oil here because there is coal. Oil has been found at Corsicana. The property is adapted to general farming purposes which seems to be very profitable here and a town could be laid out on it and a railroad built to Dundee, 12 miles, to great advantage."

The Great Boom in Copper Shares.

Copper mining has proved the safest and most profitable industry in America, and the largest and most conservative capitalists in the world have recently become large investors in copper stocks.

This company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world. It is capitalized the lowest of any in proportion to its acreage, and at the price of copper-bearing land in Michigan ($400 per acre) containing a much less per cent. of copper, has a large value in excess of its low capitalization ($2,500,000.)

Receipts for ore and assays by the leading chemists and assayers in the country are on file in the company's offices.

The officers and directors of the company are men of the highest standing and business capacity, and include:

Hon. Emery M. Low, manufacturer, mayor of Brockton, Mass., President.
George W. Russell, Esq., paper manufacturer, Boston, Vice-President.
Maj. F. M. Spaulding, 2d Vice-President.
Col. Edward B. Robins, Boston, Treasurer.
Col. James. M. Wheaton, Boston, Secretary.
Hon. Jas. W. Bennett, Ex-President Erie Telephone Co.

Only a limited amount of the stock will be sold at the price of $5.00 per share and those wishing to secure shares should act at once. As stated the stock is full paid and non-assessable. As soon as this allottment is sold the price will be advanced.

Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, nearness to transportation, favorable climate for continuous work the year around, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment. It can easily earn 50 per cent. per year on the price at which the stock is here offered.

Stock may be ordered through your banker or broker, or direct as below.

FROM REPORT OF T. BURTON EVERETT, MINING ENGINEER AND EXPERT.

ARCHER CITY, TEXAS, MAY 8, 1899.

Hon. Emery H. Low, President, and others, Boston, Mass.: * * Gentlemen:—There is abundant evidence of rich copper deposits, not only at the mines already opened, but at various other parts of the property, and it is my opinion that this will prove to be one of the exceptionally rich copper-bearing fields of the United States.

* * The ores found in these deposits are immensely rich in copper values and the cupriferous clays that are also found here in immense beds, while not as rich, will undoubtedly prove of great value on account of the cheapness with which they can be mined and reduced.

The mines are accessible at every point; the cost of mining will be very small, as the ore is not in hard formation; and there is no deep work.

I have examined the various reports made by others, and confirm them.

* * As far as I have been able to investigate, and I have done so carefully, I am of the opinion it is one of the richest copper fields in the country.

Very respectfully yours,
T. BURTON EVERETT, M. E.

Mr. G. H. Savage, Mine Examiner of Butte, Montana, after gaining sample of ore from the property, says: "The ore is the richest in the country. If you have the field you can pay $1,000,000 dividends per year."

Major F. M. Spaulding, of Boston, and C. F. Crosby, Esq., of Lowell, Mass., who returned June 16th from an examination of the property on behalf of the Company's stockholders and intending investors, report that they found the property as represented and confirm the expert reports. They visited and examined the mine mines and explored the entire property.

The Company is thoroughly organized with substantial business men in the management. It has such extensive acreage of land, rich in copper, and so easily and cheaply mined and converted, that dividends can be earned and paid during the current year. Now is the time to make a safe and profitable investment, and those who take advantage of this opportunity to buy stock at the low price offered will reap the benefit.

Remit by P. O. Order, Registered Letter, Check or Express to Edward B. Robins, Treasurer, Tremont Building, Boston, Mass. Price $5.00 per Share, Subject to advance.

THE MUNITIONS SENT ON

Portuguese Authorities Allow the Consignment to Leave Delagoa.

BOER AGENTS ARE FREED.

Emissaries of the Transvaal Arrested by Portuguese Authorities Now Set at Liberty.

Mr. Chamberlain Suggests a Second Conference—His Reply to President Kruger—Statement Made That the Royal Artillery Reserves Have Been Ordered to be in Readiness for Active Service.

Lourenzo Marques, Delagoa Bay, Aug. 30.—The two Transvaal police officers who were arrested on their arrival here yesterday have been released.

Instructions have been received from Lisbon to release the consignments of ammunition for the Transvaal. An additional large amount of ammunition arrived here to-day on the steamer German.

The British steamer German sailed from Hamburg July 15 for Delagoa Bay Bay via Southampton. She was at Table Bay August 15.

Another Conference Suggested.

Pretoria, Aug. 30.—The Government to-day considered the reply of Mr. Chamberlain, the British Colonial Secretary to the latest Boer proposals, which were substantially the granting of a five-years' franchise to the Uitlanders, a share in the election of the President of the Republic and increased representation, probably eight seats for the Goldfields. In his reply, Mr. Chamberlain again urged the appointment of a commission of enquiry to effect reforms. He refused to discuss the question of suzerainty, but finally suggested a second conference between President Kruger and Sir Alfred Milner, the British High Commissioner, to be held at Cape Town, to arrange for the constitution of an Arbitration Court to arrange all the outstanding differences. It is believed that the Transvaal does not regard these suggestions as constituting a reply to her proposals. After handing Mr. Chamberlain's reply to the Transvaal Secretary of State, Mr. Conyngham Greene, the British diplomatic agent here, had a long audience with the State officials.

The Last Time.

London, Aug. 31.—The Times says it believes that this will be almost the last occasion when England will ask President Kruger whether or not he is in earnest in his promises of voluntary concessions.

The Cape Town correspondent of The Times says there is the strongest feeling throughout South Africa that the announcement of Prime Minister Schreiner in which he practically said that Cape Colony would observe neutrality in the event of hostilities between Great Britain and the Transvaal, means that he will allow the Orange Free State to mass troops against the British, while the Republic's own borders will be secured by the neutrality of the Cape Colony.

Kruger Prepares.

"The ammunition which Mr. Schreiner allowed to pass through Cape Colony came direct to Pretoria. It was never intended for the Orange Free State. President Kruger does not hesitate to express the view that war is inevitable. He has stocked the Presidency with ample provisions to secure his own person from [illegible], and he is often heard repeating the 83rd Psalm. The Matabeles are showing signs of unrest. The Boers are energetically engaged in poisoning the minds of the natives against the British, and they have approached the Zulu Chief Dinisulu, who appears undecided what cause to espouse. But the Zulus are prepared for the expected fighting, and it must be remembered that Dinuzulu was deported to St. Helena with several other chiefs and kept prisoner there for several years by the British."

The Daily Mail this morning says it learns that a large consignment of cartridges manufactured for the Boers, has recently been shipped through German agents.

Reserves Ordered Out.

It is stated to-night that the reserve of the Royal Artillery has been instructed to hold itself in readiness for service in South Africa. This is the most serious military announcement since the beginning of the crisis. It has been reasonably alleged that previous movements were merely preparatory for eventualities. This points to early action in the field, and to the certainty of a conflict. The artillery next to the engineers, is the strongest branch of the land forces. War is now discussed here as a certainty. It is the consensus of opinion that Kruger is proving himself a great man at his country's expense.

HE TOOK NAILS.

It Was All the Same to the Man Who Was Treating.

Individuality is lost sight of in the cities. It is swallowed up, as it were, in the mob. In a village it stands out with surprising distinctness. The odd characters of the place are known to everybody, and their queer sayings and doings are told from mouth to mouth.

In a certain little town not a great ways from Cleveland there are probably as many of these peculiar people as any place of its size can boast. One of them is an ancient man who longs for the good old times that followed the war and is a firm believer in the criminal weakness of the present financial system. He is a man of considerable property, but nevertheless is economical to an extreme degree. In fact, he was never known to spend a penny that didn't go for some actual necessity.

There is another character in the town who keeps the village general store. He is a good hearted fellow, who, after a long course of bachelorhood, finally married. In this little town it is the custom for the happy bridegroom to set up the cigars for all the congratulating males who drop in to wish him joy. So the bridegroom in this instance had a box on the counter, and most of his patrons were regaled from it.

Pretty soon the ancient gentleman first referred to lounged in. The storekeeper, who felt friendly to all [illegible] them, pushed the box toward the newcomer.

"Have a cigar, Uncle Jim," he smilingly said.

Uncle Jim looked at the box and looked at the storekeeper.

"What's this fer?" he asked.

The storekeeper slightly blushed.

"Been gettin married."

"Who? You?"

"Yep. Me."

"An you're standin treat, eh?"

"Yep," said the storekeeper.

The old man picked up a cigar.

"How much did these seegars cost ye, Ab?" he inquired.

"Oh," replied the storekeeper, "they cost me 'bout 4 cents. They're nickel cigars."

The old man dropped the cigar back in the box. Then his gaze wandered around the store.

"Well, Ab," he slowly drawled, "ef it's all the same to you, I'll take a pound o' nails."

And he got them.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HE VOTED FOR STONE.

And For One of the Most Remarkable Reasons on Record.

Theodore Bolton of Henry county tells this good story. "I was a strong Stone man," said Bolton, "when the ex-governor was a candidate for governor. One day while the campaign was at its hottest a Democrat from an outlying township came to see me. He called me out from my store and took me into a back alley. I thought he wanted to borrow $5 or ask me to go on his note. Finally, when he got to a selected place, away from the crowd, the old fellow laid down his cob pipe and said:

"'Say, Bolton, I can't vote for your man, Stone.'

"'Why, Uncle Billy?' I inquired.

"'Well, they tell me, The, that Bill Stone beats his wife, beats her twice a week.'

"I looked the old man squarely in the eyes and never smiled and said, 'Now, Billy, you wouldn't vote against a man for beating his wife—and you a married man too.'

"'The, you don't beat your wife, do you?'

"'Whenever she needs it, Uncle Billy.'

"'Well, I didn't think that of you, The. The, I like you, but I can't vote for your man, Stone.'

"So we parted, and Uncle Billy went back to his home in the back township.

"Three weeks later the county convention to select delegates to the state nominating convention met in Clinton. The first man I met on the streets was Uncle Billy.

"'What are you doing here today, Uncle Billy?' I asked as the old fellow shook hands with me.

"'Why, I am a delegate from my township to this here convention.'

"'And how do you stand on the Stone question now?'

"'Well, I tell you, The. I have been thinking about what you told me, and it's all right. I'm a married man myself, and I am going to vote for Stone.'

"And he did," added Bolton, "and to this day believes Stone beat his wife twice a week, and that's why Stone got his vote in the Henry county convention."—Kansas City Journal.

Campaigning With a Fiddle.

When a young man, the late ex-Governor Oglesby worked in the old Macon tavern. There he met the lawyers riding the circuit and formed the acquaintance of Judge Robbins of Springfield, with whom he studied law two years. Returning to Decatur, he began practicing in a town of 400 inhabitants. He soon became popular as a speaker. On one occasion he was making a Whig speech on one side of the square, while a Democrat was making an opposition speech on the other side. The Democrat was fast getting the crowd when Mr. Oglesby, who was an old fashioned fiddler and played as well as he spoke, borrowed a fiddle from a man in the crowd and began to play. That broke up the opposition meeting, and the Democrat, left without an audience, came over and joined the crowd that was dancing to Oglesby's music.

Buffalo Bill's Fine Shooting.

Colonel Cody, better known as "Buffalo Bill," is one of the finest shots in the world. One of his most wonderful feats was not generally performed in public, for the reason that its failure or success could not be discerned at any great distance. It consisted in driving into a white board five short, flat headed tacks with five successive shots, from a distance just short enough to allow the tacks to be accurately sighted. So great was Colonel Cody's skill with the light rifle he used for this feat that, given favorable light, he could generally perform it six or seven times without a miss.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It Is a Fact.

"What are you sighing for?" asked the registry department of the dead letter office.

"No one has so many rejected addresses as I," was the sorrowful reply.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Any one can distinguish a poisonous serpent from a harmless one, for a venomous snake invariably possesses a triangularly shaped head and a blunt nose, while its tail is correspondingly blunt and stubby.

is to be incorporated under the Ontario Companies' Act to acquire as going concerns the businesses, as manufacturers and dealers in Bicycles and Bicycle Parts, now carried on by the following well known Companies:

MASSEY-HARRIS COMPANY, Limited,
H. A. LOZIER & COMPANY (Cleveland Bicycles),
WELLAND VALE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Limited,
GOOLD BICYCLE COMPANY, Limited,
GENDRON MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Limited,

including the Plant, Machinery, Tools, Stock-in-Trade, Fixtures, Patent Rights, Trade Marks, Trade Names, Copyrights, Good-will and Leaseholds of the above-named Companies in connection with their said business; and including also all the real property of H. A. Lozier & Company, and The Goold Bicycle Company, Limited.

THE COMPANIES.

The bicycle industry is one of great importance and magnitude in Canada. The constituent Companies are the leaders in the trade. Their Trade Marks and Brands are everywhere popularly known, and by reason of their world-wide reputation for unrivalled excellence some of the Companies enjoy a large and growing foreign trade which offers a favourable field for development, and which this Company proposes to extend.

The Companies give employment to about 1,700 men. Their outputs for the past year aggregated about 38,500 bicycles. The plant and machinery are of the latest and best equipment, and capable of twice that production with but small additional outlay in tools. The factory sites to be acquired by the Company are especially adapted for manufacturing purposes; have advantageous shipping facilities, and will permit of ample extensions to the existing buildings.

Each of the above-named Companies has covenanted not to engage for long periods of years in any business competing with the bicycle business of this Company.

NET EARNINGS.

The steadily progressive character of the business of the constituent Companies is shown by the following Accountants' certificate:

We certify that the combined net profits in the business of Bicycles and Bicycle Parts of the Massey-Harris Co., Limited, H. A. Lozier & Co. (Cleveland Bicycles), Welland Vale Manufacturing Co., Limited, Goold Bicycle Co., Limited, and Gendron Manufacturing Co., Limited, for the past three years, are as follows:—

1897-8 - - - -	$304,907.03

ADVANTAGES.

Amongst the advantages to be gained by this amalgamation of interests, the following may be enumerated:—

FIRSTLY—Reduction in selling and distribution expenses and advertising.
SECONDLY—The economies and improvements in production arising from the practical knowledge of the members forming the Board of Directors, which will be available for each branch of the business.
THIRDLY—The economies due to consolidation of management, manufactories, office work, and of buying, distributing, and financial arrangements.

The Directors are fully alive to the desirability of conserving the individuality and initiative of the various businesses, and will not allow consolidation to act detrimentally in these matters, but there are obvious advantages to be gained, as, for example, in buying in large quantities in the best markets, in the supply of ample capital, and in the manufacture of a large output of high-grade wheels at prices to meet the demands of the public.

MANAGEMENT.

The Management of the Company will be in the hands of experienced manufacturers, who have been identified with the leading bicycle companies of Canada in the past, and have made a success of the business.

WORKING CAPITAL.

The Company will commence business without any bonded or mortgage debt and with a working capital in excess of $1,000,000, exclusive of the additional capital available from the issue of the Preference Stock in the treasury ($500,000).

DIVIDENDS.

The Preference Shares shall confer the right to a fixed cumulative preferential dividend of 7 per cent. per annum accruing from the date of payment by subscribers, to be provided for out of the net earnings of the Company before any dividends are paid upon the common stock, and the further right to repayment of capital in priority to the common stock, but they will not be entitled to further participation in profits or assets.

If in any one year dividends amounting to 7 per cent. are not paid on the preference stock the deficiency shall be a first charge upon the net earnings of the Company and shall be paid subsequently before any dividend is paid upon or set apart for the common stock.

Dividends will be payable half-yearly on the 1st days of May and November, or such other half-yearly dates as the Directors may determine.

RESERVE ACCOUNT.

The Charter of the Company will provide that 25 per cent. of the balance of the net earnings, after payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on the Preference Stock, shall be annually transferred to a reserve account in the books of the Company, the better to secure to the Preferred Shareholders the payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on their preferred shares, and such annual transfers shall be continued until the amount of said account reaches $500,000, at which sum it is to be maintained, and if it is at any time drawn upon it is to be in like manner restored and maintained.

The amount required to pay 7 per cent. on the preference stock already taken by the Directors and that now offered to the public being $175,000, it is considered that such dividends are amply assured, and the above reserve account of $500,000 has been stipulated for in order that the position of the preferred shares may be rendered independent of any possible contingency.

AUTOMOBILES.

It is intended that an important part of the Company's undertaking will be the manufacture and sale of motors and motor vehicles. This branch of business is a natural outgrowth of the Bicycle industry, and is believed to offer a profitable investment for the capital and the large and successful experience in manufacturing which this Company will command.

Arrangements have been made to have the books of the Company regularly audited by Chartered Accountants.

Application will be made in due course to have the stock of the Company listed upon the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges.

$2,000,000 7 per cent. Preference Stock in the above Company will be offered for public subscription at PAR on WEDNESDAY, the 6TH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1899, payable as follows: 5 per cent. on application and the balance of 95 per cent. on allotment. The right is reserved to reject or reduce any application, and subscription carries with it an agreement to accept such reduced amount. The failure to make payment when due forfeits the previous payment. In case no allotment is made the amount deposited on application will be returned.

Subscription lists will open at the chief offices of the National Trust Company, Limited, Toronto and Montreal, and at the Head Office and Branches of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, the 6th September, '99, and close at 3 o'clock on the following day.

A SENSATIONAL CASE

In Ashburnham to be Investigated by County Magistrate Edmison:

The quiet little village of Ashburnham is deeply agitated over recent developments which go to show, if reports be correct that marriage has proved to be a dismal failure in the case of George Quinn and wife, of Fenelon Falls.

It is alleged that Quinn came to town in search of his better half, whom he located at the burg over the bridge residing with Joseph Haines, an employee at the brewery. The husband taking exception to this act of his spouse, procured a revolver and a box of cartridges and started on the war path. Mrs. Quinn states that being threatened by her husband who flourished the [illegible] weapon in her presence, she snatched the revolver from him and hid it in the house. She then made her escape through the back door, and lodged a complaint with constable Fitzgerald, who placed the infuriated husband under arrest.

The stories told by husband and wife differ materially. Quinn states that he was the owner of a fine farm near Fenelon Falls, which his wife persuaded him to deed over to her before he took a trip to the old Country about ten months ago. On returning he found that the stock, etc., had been sold off. The farm and [illegible] was in [illegible]. He states that since being deserted by his wife he has worked around amongst the farmers of the district but hearing of his wife's intention to sell the farm he resolved to look up his missing spouse. Quinn says also that he warned Hanes off the farm before he went to the Old Country.

The wife's story is truly pathetic. She alleged that her husband deserted her, leaving her with a family of young children to support. She rented the farm and came to town securing employment as house keeper, with Hanes, which course she had to follow in order to provide for her little ones.

BUFFALO A TINY HAGUE

International Arbitration Committee Lauds Foreign Peace-Makers.

DEEP GRATIFICATION FELT.

Delegates Urged to Further the Good Work in Their Respective Countries.

The Committee Wish to Procure Ratification of Hague Conference Relative to Settlement of International Differences and to Promote Treaties Between States Agreeing to Settle Their Differences by Arbitration.

Buffalo, Aug. 31.—At the opening session to-day of the conference of the International Law Association the Hon. Sherman S. Rogers, of Buffalo, delivered an address of welcome to the delegates. The opening session was presided over by Hon. Sir William R. Kennedy, Judge of the High Court of Justice, England.

The International Arbitration Committee made the following report at the session to-day:

1. The conference accepts the report, adopted by the Executive Council on July 18, 1899, of the special committee appointed at the London Conference of 1893, which has, in accordance with the doctrine of the Brussels Conference in 1895, presented a scheme for the formation of a court of international arbitration. The conference cordially thanks the committee for the care with which it has thus completed the work entrusted to it, directs that the scheme be printed in the proceedings of the conference, and commends it to public notice as the association's contribution to the further elucidation of the question.

Specially Valuable Features.

2. This conference expresses its deep gratification at the adoption by the Hague Peace Conference of a scheme of international arbitration, which carries out one of the main objects of the association, as expressed in reiterated resolutions, from the time of its opening conference in 1873. The conference recognizes as specially valuable the following leading features of the scheme, viz., First, the nomination of a body of men of recognized competence in questions of international law, and enjoying public esteem, who will be ready to act as arbitrators.

Second, the selection by the parties to any international dispute from amongst the members of the above named body of arbitrators and an umpire to form an arbitral tribunal.

Third, the creation of a permanent administrative council, composed of the diplomatic representatives at the court of The Hague, with the Netherlands Minister of Foreign Affairs as its president.

Fourth, the establishment, under the direction of the above-named council, of a permanent bureau, whose services will be at the disposal of all arbitral tribunals.

Missionary Work Recommended.

The conference, therefore, urges the members of the association to use their influence in their respective countries:

(a) To procure the early ratification of The Hague Convention, relative to the settlement of international differences:

(b) To promote treaties between two or more States agreeing to submit their differences to arbitration under the provisions of the convention.

3. The conference decides that a special committee be appointed to examine in detail the provisions of The Hague conventions, and to prepare a report thereon for the next conference.

Mr. Frank Darling, a Lindsay architect, has just completed plans for a large hotel to be built near one of Muskoka's popular resorts. The building will contain 200 rooms and will be thoroughly first-class and up to date in every respect. A number of Hamilton capitalists are interested, and it is expected that the negotiations for the site will be concluded with success this week. Building operations will commence as soon as the purchase of the site is accomplished.

AN AMERICAN VIEW.

The Chicago Chronicle, one of the most progressive western papers, recently had a lengthy article on Canada's waterways. Here is what it says of the Trent Valley Canal:

Still another project for connecting the waters of the Georgian bay with those of the river St. Lawrence is the Trent valley canal which is already partly constructed and continues to receive government subsidies in every budget. But, unfortunately, the projectors of the Trent valley canal took no account of modern developments in the grain-carrying trade, and its capacity, even when completed, will not suffice for much more than local business.

It will be a sort of Erie canal, passing through thickly populated sections of Ontario, and may in time be deepened and enlarged to formidable prestige as a carrier of through grain to the seaboard. It will connect Georgian bay with the Bay of Quinte, which is an arm of Lake Ontario, and joins the latter at the head of St. Lawrence.

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. May Leave Samoa to England.

Auckland, New Zealand, Aug. 31.—It is believed in Government circles at Wellington, that the Samoan question is on the eve of solution, and that the problem will be solved along lines most satisfactory to this colony. It is believed that America and Germany will retire from the tripartite protectorate, leaving Great Britain alone in the field. This arrangement will involve the occupation by Germany, in the way of compensation, of either the Gilbert islands, the Marshall archipelago or the portion of the Solomon islands not already under Germany authority. The Gilbert islands are now in the hand of Great Britain, while Germany exercises over the Marshall archipelago only a protectorate, established in 1885. According to the same report the United States will be willing to content itself with a coaling station at Pango-Pango harbor, which it has occupied since 1872.

It is reported that Grover Cleveland has purchased a plover field. This will furnish amateur poets with another base of attack on Mr. Cleveland's first name.—Chicago Democrat.

Ingersoll has been sued for $125 for breaking a statue of Charles Dickens in a house that he rented furnished. The owner has only himself to blame, for Colonel Ingersoll is a notorious iconoclast.—Boston Traveler.

Russell Sage gave a little flower girl whom he accidentally jostled a $5 bill, and Hetty Green has leased a cottage at Newport. Is the millennium in the offing, or have those New York reporters been stringing us about these worthy people?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Settlers and summer cottagers are fighting bush fires in the neighborhood of Lovesick Lake. Mr. Alfred Parker's charming summer cottage has been destroyed by the fire fiend.

Enameline is the Modern Stove Polish, which means UP-TO-DATE; that is, labor-saving, brilliant in effect, no dust and no odor. It makes a rusty old stove look as good as new in a minute. Put up in paste, cake or liquid form.

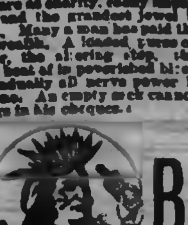
VIVID HEALTH

Nothing so rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is—vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness to the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the [illegible] step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fuel of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.



CO BO

Stimulants and Purgatives cannot cure you, but The GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will

Every bottle of this universal blood maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. Evidence sickness tells of hidden disease. A deranged stomach will undermine the entire system. CO-BO, in its direct action on the liver, kidneys and stomach, cures every phase of mal-nutrition, makes blood and carries food and strength to every tissue, and gives back health when once lurked death. ENLARGED—REBUILT—REFITTED—REFURNISHED
IDYL WYLD SUMMER RESORT
RICE LAKE, ONTARIO

THIS Breezy and Beautiful Island Summer Resort will re-open for the season 1899 on June 12th, under entirely new and up-to-date management. Important new additions to the building and hotel equipment have been effected. Twenty new Bed Rooms, Sitting Rooms and Waiting Rooms have been added, and entirely refurnished in modern style. Broad balconies extend around each of the two new stories erected, afford picturesque views of the surrounding scenery.

The cuisine will be a special feature—fresh meat, fresh fish, fresh eggs, milk and butter, as well as wholesome vegetables and fruits in abundance, supplemented by a robust appetite, sharpened by the ozone and continual breeze of this idyllic spot.

Good bass and maskinonge fishing all along the shore and lake. No charge for American fishing—no permits required. Boats and competent guides furnished. The island steam-launch "Ontio Queen," can be engaged for cruising and sailing parties. The Park is open for excursion parties, whether public or private. Tables and seats for picnic parties, are all over the ground in shady groves. Come and spend your summer vacation at Idyle Wyld, and for your life don't miss it.

Daily boat and mail to and from Harwood Peterborough and Hastings. Parties can be met at either points when requested.

Special rates for families and for the season. Rooms may be secured in advance by letter, telephone or telegram addressed to R. S. MACDONALD, Manager, Harwood P. O., Ont.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Bella Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $600 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

It is said that rustics who live on a bread and milk diet nearly always have thick hair to an advanced age, while people who lunch and dine on meat rarely have thick hair after 30.

HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

Peculiar Experience of the Man Who Dealt in High Explosives.

"Nitroglycerin, sir; high explosives accomplished it," said a well dressed man with a youthful face and snow white hair to a chance acquaintance at the Great Northern.

"But your face is not scarred? It would seem that an explosion—"

"An impending explosion it was. Two years ago I was the most successful well shooter in America. I could make the oil loosen up where others had failed. The secret lay in the explosives I employed. I made them myself and had the business down fine. At that time I went to New York to figure on a big blasting contract that would have made me a pile. I failed to make the arrangement, and the very day the negotiations fell through I started suddenly for England on a similar mission.

"'Is there such a thing as high explosives ripening?' asked the Englishman I was accompanying on the second day of our voyage.

"The question brought me to my feet and caused an exclamation of horror to escape from my lips. Many explosives undergo a ripening process, which adds greatly to their destructive power, at the same time decidedly increasing the danger of handling them. That made by me was this character. Indeed, 25 days after it compounded it was almost certain to explode of its own volition, so to speak. On the upper shelf of the checkroom of my New York hotel I had left a large grip containing a 20 pound can of this compound, the ripening of which meant destruction and death.

"For an hour I was almost in a state of frenzy, freely denouncing myself as a multimurderer. In vain I drew an awful picture of the devastation that would overwhelm a certain New York hotel in exactly 17 days and called upon the captain to put his ship about. He promised to transfer me to a west bound steamer if an opportunity presented itself, but fortune failed me, and I was obliged to cross the ocean. On the morning of the twenty-fifth day of the life of my ripening high explosive I sprang from a carriage and rushed into the hotel.

"No reprieved murderer ever experienced greater joy than I did as I saw the last of the terrible fluid disappear in a catch basin. Ten minutes later I started back from the mirror of the hotel bar, where I had gone for a 'bracer,' in absolute dismay. My jet black hair had turned white as snow."

VETERANS UNDER FIRE.

The Reason They Don't Stoop When the Bullets Are Flying.

"The temptation to stoop when under fire is almost irresistible," said a veteran, "and that accounts for so many of the wounds received by raw troops. You see, when a man happens to be hit in a stooping posture the chances are that the bullet plows right through his body from end to end. On the other hand, if he is standing erect, the probabilities are in favor of the wound being slight, anyhow not mortal. Old soldiers are well aware of this, and while they will drop flat and hunt cover every chance they get they never stoop.

"After a soldier has been in a few engagements he learns such tricks, and, as far as the rest of it is concerned, he becomes simply a fatalist. There is nothing strange about it, for almost all his experiences appear to lend color to that doctrine. For instance, he never dodges, because he has seen men dodge and get killed when it really seemed as if they had reached for the bullet. In fact, the strangest things are continually happening, all apparently the pure whim of chance.

"I remember near Petersburg a comrade of mine, as brave a fellow as ever lived, took refuge behind a little hut. He was wornout under fire and wanted to get a moment's breathing space. Twenty feet in the rear and a little to one side was a pile of crossties full of wrought iron nails. A bullet came along, splintered a tie and drove out one of the nails at right angles. The jagged iron struck my chum in the side, penetrated his kidneys and killed him.

"That's the blind chance of war, and after getting a few such object lessons a fellow is apt to acquire a sort of sang froid that is immensely impressive to a recruit. It isn't because he has a contempt for danger; he has merely learned the folly of trying to evade it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Misunderstood.

A dentist on the South Side advertises on a large scale that he pulls teeth without pain by the "animal magnetism system."

Yesterday an Irishman came into the dentist's office suffering with a toothache.

"Faith, and I must have me tooth pulled, but I'd like to see the animals first."—Chicago Democrat.

MEN OF MARK.

President McKinley finds little leisure for light reading, but is a careful student of the newspapers.

Joseph Leiter has by no means decided to drop the stock market. He is a constant visitor to Wall street.

J. Pierpont Morgan is an expert pool player and an evening rarely passes when he does not enjoy an after dinner game.

Joel Chandler Harris, Georgia's famous author, breeder and poet, is to have an exhibit of Jersey cattle at the Paris exposition.

Senator Clark has just bought in Paris, for his Washington house, an old stained glass window, once the property of the Countess de Jaune, for $20,000.

Sims Reeves says he lost $400,000 during his career as a public singer because he was too conscientious to appear on the stage unless sure he could do his best.

Ex-Representative Ben T. Cable is to furnish much of the money for the building of a chapter house for the Zeta Psi fraternity at the University of Michigan.

John Stuart, superintendent of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, was formerly a telegraph operator at Hokendauqua, Pa. He is now receiving $15,000 a year.

The Russian Prince Cantacuzene, whose betrothal to Miss Julia Grant has just been announced, has retired to his Russian estates to make preparations for the reception of his bride.

Before Rear Admiral Kautz left for Samoa a young woman asked him whether he had ever "felt afraid in battle." "Once," he answered. "A stray ball knocked my cigar out of my mouth and there wasn't another aboard."

The late ex-Governor Flower was once asked by a less successful financier how to succeed in Wall street. "By working harder than at any other trade or profession on earth," was the answer. "But won't that wear you out?" "Not before your time."

Mayor Moir of Scranton was years ago a journeyman tailor in Philadelphia. John Ross of the former city needed a workman, and Mr. Moir, being recommended, was offered inducements to go to Scranton. In February last Mr. Moir was elected chief executive of the city.

Henry G. Kittredge, editor of the Textile World, Boston, has been appointed assistant director of textiles for the commissioner general of the United States to the Paris exposition of 1900. Mr. Kittredge has long been identified with the textile industries of the United States.

Russell Sage is no friend of the camera, and very rarely is it that a photographer is quick enough to get a snap shot of the millionaire. As for sitting for a picture, that has probably occurred less frequently during the millionaire's long life than that of any other equally prominent man in the country.

TOWN TOPICS.

The curfew bell was rung last night at 8:30 o'clock. Nothing sensational resulted. It just rang; that was all.—Freeport Bulletin.

Abilene is getting to be a front porch town. Nearly every resident improvement includes a porch.—Abilene (Kan.) Reflector.

The companies are selling their gas so cheaply in New York that several of the metropolitan newspapers are filled with it every day.—Detroit Journal.

Buffalo is to have a new union station to cost $5,000,000, with a waiting room 85 by 235 feet, that will be the largest in the world. How about this, Boston?—Gardiner Reporter-Journal.

Buffalo is in a flutter over an extremely wicked Midway that it expects to have at the Pan-American exposition, and can't think of a suitable name for it. Why not call it Hamburg Paradise?—Rochester Democrat.

All because of a blessed war to the knife squabble between rival companies New York is now enjoying 55 cent gas. Father Knickerbocker will be a weak old gentleman if he lets them restore the higher rate.

MOTIVES AND METHODS.

A Missouri girl killed herself because her sweetheart had gone to the war.

Robert F. Hayes, a Boston clerk, hanged himself with his necktie as the noose.

Because his mother would not let him go in swimming an Arkansas boy cut his throat.

Forked branches of an apple tree were used as a noose by a Stroudsburg (Pa.) suicide.

Champagne with arsenic in it was used by a San Francisco man as a means of self destruction.

Her husband wanted to move, and she did not. That led a Connecticut woman to drink poison.

Fearing that his wife would scold him for getting home late a newly made London bridegroom committed suicide.

"Ah, to see the moon at a distance of one meter," was the note left by a Paris suicide explaining his motive for death.

THE CYNIC.

After a man has told you his troubles you know more about his kin.

You will find a loafer leech attached to every industrious man or woman.

An honest man is one who admits that his baldness is due to old age and not to sickness.

Every bridegroom finds an excuse to return from his wedding journey sooner than originally planned.

Every circus man lays all his plans on the assumption that the people are chumps. Every circus man gets rich.

After the people have worked themselves to death to raise a preacher's salary, he decides that he can do better elsewhere and resigns.

It would be interesting to know how much longer the week should be, in order that the men may find their Sunday underwear ready without fussing.—Atchison Globe.

ELECTRIC SPARKS.

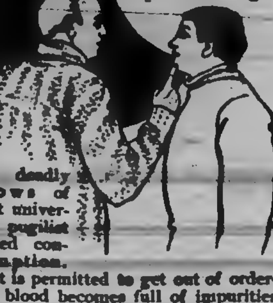
Work of laying the cable from Vancouver to Fanning island and thence to Australia and New Zealand will begin this summer, it is announced.

The new Nernst electric light dispenses with the usual vacuum bulb and replaces the hairlike filament with a short bar of refractory material, thereby greatly increasing the light and cheapening the cost.

Experiments have been made lately by French government officials with a new telephone, which enables persons to converse without putting their mouth and ear to the apparatus, the words being distinctly audible in any part of the room.

THAT VITAL SPOT.

The prize fighter always aims for the vital spot in the body. When he reaches it, as Fitzsimmons did with Corbett, the other man is knocked out. To protect the vital points of the body is the first care of the fighter. The stomach is the vital spot to be protected against the deadly blows of that universal pugilist called consumption.



If it is permitted to get out of order—if the blood becomes full of impurities, if the system is allowed to run-down—it won't be long until consumption will find the "opening" and deal its fatal blow. Protect yourself with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the non-alcoholic remedy for the stomach, blood and nerves. Take it for lingering coughs, colds, bronchitis, weak and bleeding lungs. It has cured so many thousands that it will also cure you. Don't under any circumstances permit the medicine dealer to induce you to take some other remedy. There are many substitutes on the market, but none of them possess the power to cure like "Golden Medical Discovery."

"After using about five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery my boy seems to be all right," writes Mr. J. W. Price, of Ozark, Monroe Co., Ohio. "He was very bad when I commenced to give him the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' The doctors claimed he had consumption and we doctored with them until he was past walking. It has been ten months since he stopped taking your medicine and he is still in good health."

To knock out constipation and biliousness, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

Canada Cycle and Motor Co.

The above is the name of the latest union of industrial interests in the Dominion which marks the growth among us of the system of combining the ability and capital of separate and rival enterprises in large and powerful organizations, which is the most striking and characteristic feature of recent development. The new company represents an amalgamation of the leading bicycle manufacturers of Canada, viz.: the Massey-Harris Co; H. A. Lozier and Co. (Cleveland bicycles), the Welland Vale Manufacturing Co., the Goold Co., and the Gendron. These companies are well known as producers of first-class articles. Their goods are in universal use, and their industrial success under competitive conditions is the strongest possible assurance of the brilliant future which is before them now that their forces are united. As in other similar cases the profit-earning power of the coalescing factors is increased by reducing the cost of advertising, selling and distributing; by the improvements suggested by the varied talent of the directors; by the control of a large number of patents, special processes, and trade secrets; and by economies due to consolidation of the management, manufactories, office work, and financial arrangements. The Canadian Cycle and Motor Co., is offering two million dollars worth of cumulative seven per cent. preference stock to the general public at par on Wednesday, September 6th. The stock is to be guaranteed by a special rest of half a million dollars, and is of so high a character that the amount offered is likely to be subscribed many times over.

Purse Lost.

A Baby's Testimonial for

Grape-Nuts

Amateur photographers recognise the difficulty in securing good "interiors."

One of the most perfect specimens of this sort of photography was received by the Postum Cereal Co. a short time ago, showing in perfect light and with the cleanest lines, a baby in a high chair at the table, the mother in the act of feeding baby some Grape-Nuts with a spoon and is evidently "gobbling" the food. A package of Grape-Nuts rests on the table, and that, together with all the utensils, are perfectly outlined. The picture contains much detail, but could not be successfully reproduced on newspaper, otherwise it would be given here.

The mother writing, states: "I take pleasure in sending you a photo of Mabel Anita Bennett, who is very fond of Grape-Nuts. Among all the prepared foods we find Grape-Nuts especially fine for children beginning to eat solids; they are so easily digested and nourishing. Little Mabel is always very eager when she sees us preparing Grape-Nuts for her and you see by her face how thoroughly satisfied she is with her meal. She seems to think her mamma needs help in getting the Grape-Nuts to her mouth and the picture is true to life. I want to thank you for placing such a delicious and delicate food on the market. Respectfully, Mrs. L. M. Bennett, Forrest, Illinois.

No stomach is too delicate to receive and digest Grape-Nuts, for the reason that the food is really pre-digested by the process through which it passes in the manufacture, and by these processes the starch is transformed into grape-sugar which is ready at once to go into rich blood and build up the tissue of both muscle and brain.

All first-class grocers sell Grape-Nuts and the Postum Cereal Co. Ltd. make them at their factories at Battle Creek.

KRUGER IS BARGAINING.

He Will Sell the Franchise to Uitlanders on Conditions.

A German Corps, 900 Strong, Has Been Formed in Johannesburg to Co-operate With the Boers in Event of War—More British Troops to go.

London, Sept. 2.—The present Transvaal crisis shows a radical change in the diplomatic methods of the Secretary of State of the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain. In the negotiations following the Jameson raid, Mr. Chamberlain was properly critized for the novel and indiscreet procedure of publishing diplomatic notes even before they had time to reach the persons to whom they were addressed. Now the public here is left in the dark until the publication of mutilated despatches from Pretoria force the Colonial Office to issue correct versions.

The Transvaal despatches of August 19 and 21, and the reply of the Imperal Government on August 28, the text of which was published last evening, except that they emphasize the sharp contrast between the heat of Mr. Chamberlain's last public speech and the moderation and the concilatory tone of the despatches add little to the essentials of the situation. President Kruger, of the Transvaal Republic, has practically offered to concede the demands of Sir Alfred Milner, the Governor of Cape Colony, and British High Commissioner of South Africa, regarding the question of franchise, but only on condition of getting impossible concessions regarding suzerainty.

Milner's Flat Refusal.

Sir Alfred, in his conference with the Transvaal Executive recently held at Bloomfontein, Orange Free State, told President Kruger in the plainest language, that "I do not intend to buy the franchise with any other questions."

That remark accurately represents the position to-day. Hopefulness lies in the fact, however, that Kruger seems to be in a yielding mood and that the Imperial Government is not anxious to force matters unduly.

The Spectator takes a sympathetic view of the attitude of Premier Shreiner, of Cape Colony It says he is in a very difficult position, and his efforts to keep the Dutch residents of Cape Colony in hand must not be misrepresented or misunderstood, The situation, the paper adds, is similar to that of the doubtful States at the outbreak of the American civil war. "What Schreiner means," says The Spectator, "by keeping the Cape neutral is keeping the Cape Dutch from supporting the Boers, a very loyal and sensible part."

Germans Will Assist Boers.

London, Sept. 2.—The Standard and Diggers News to-day received a cablegram from the Johannesburg office dated yesterday, saying that the German corps, 900 strong, had been formed there to co-operate with the Boers in the event of war with Great Britain. The despatch adds that the Boers could mobolize 20,000 in three days, while the Orange Free State could muster 10,000 men in the same period.

Continuing, the despatch says: "Mr. Chamberlain's reply upholding the suzerainty of Great Britain was received by the Rand with a demonstration which unmistakably indicated the intention of the Transvaal to repudiate Great Britain's pretensions. The Raad, on hearing the five year franchise proposal, gave every sign of strong dissent and of a determination not to go beyond the seven years' limit."

It must not be forgotten that these statements come from an excessively pro-Boer source.

LIQUOR IN DRUG STORES.

The Government License Department Sends Out Orders to Inspectors to Prosecute.

The License Department of the Ontario Government has decided to begin a campaign against druggists who sell liquor illicitly. The definition of liquor is said to include many of the malt extracts which are now being sold in drug stores, and the license inspectors have been furnished with the following circular:

"Representations have been made to this branch to the effect that very many of the druggists throughout the Province do not comply with the provisions of the law and are in the habit of selling liquor as a beverage.

"I am directed by the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer, to bring this matter to your notice and to express the hope that you will give the matter your special attention and see that there are no further grounds for complaint in your district."

ANOTHER GOOD DAY FOR THE PRISONER.

A Witness in His Behalf Confronted by One of the Generals To-day, But Sticks to His Story.

INFORMATION REGARDING THE ARMY EASILY GOT

Possibility of Others Than Artillery Officers Getting Information Discussed. Major Hartmann Declares the Writer Ignorant of Artillery Matters.

Rennes, Sept. 2.—At the Dreyfus court martial to-day Major Hartmann, a defence witness, resumed his testimony regarding artillery matters, and bringing out points and phraseology in the bordereau, indicating that the writer could not be Dreyfus.

The witness wished to enter into the question of the Robin shell, but on Gen. Deloye objecting to a statement on the subject in open court, it was decided to hear this part in secret.

Replying to defence counsel, Major Hartmann said any officer attending the Chalons camp could have obtained sufficent information to write notes on the covering of troops and Madagascar matters.

Dreyfus' Witness Contradicted.

M. Labori then recalled Gen. Mercier's denial of Capt. Freystatter's declaration that the secret dossier contained a document concerning a shell, and Major Hartmann affirmed that it was quite possible that particulars about this shell should have leaked out in 1894.

Gen. Deloye declared he did not believe the Major was keeping strictly to the truth and proceeded to point out inaccuracies in Major Hartmann's testimony. He insisted that Dreyfus, in the course of conversations with artillery officers, could have secured information on the subjects mentioned in the bordereau.

The Major retorted that if any artillery officer had been questioned by Dreyfus he would already have come forward to say so, as a matter of strict duty.

Gen. Deloye said the inventor of the Robin shell told him Dreyfus never asked him for particulars about his shell, except on a minor point. The General added that he came as a technical witness to show that Dreyfus could be guilty. He could only say that Dreyfus' contention that it was impossible for him to know certain matters referred to in the bordereau was untrue.

M. Labori asked Gen. Deloye if he knew whether the documents which could have been betrayed by the traitor, especially by the writer of the bordereau were important, whereupon the General turned to counsel and excitedly cried: "Don't ask me! Don't ask me!"

These exclamations created a sensation in court, which was doubled when Gen. Deloye added that there was sufficent in the bordereau to establish that the traitor knew the importance of the documents he was giving up. The witness said: "When I read the bordereau I was dismayed."

Major Hartmann, in reply to Gen. Deloye, reiterated that the author of the bordereau was ignorant of artillery matters.

"For," the Major pointed out, "if he meant the 120 hydraulic brake he gave particulars of what was long known, while if he meant the 120 short, he employed a wrong expression."

Hartmann's Evidence Weakened.

Gen. Mercier here mounted the stage and remareкd that the writer of the bordereau might very well employ the term hydraulic brake, because that was the term used by the Germans for such brakes. This ended the deposition of Major Hartmann, who certainly was a very valuable witness for the defense, although the effect of his testimony was somewhat weakened by Gen. Deloye's statement in reply to M. Labori.

Blames Esterhazy.

The next witness, M. Navet, a member of the Institution took up the bordereau from a grammatical point of view, declaring it to be his conviction, after studying closely the styles of Dreyfus and Esterhazy, that the latter wrote it. The witness entered into an interesting analysis of the phraseology of the bordereau, pointing out that certain phrases in it were met with in Esterhazy's letters, but never in those of Dreyfus.

The letters exchanged between Col. Picquart and Gen. Gonse at the time the Colonel wanted a thorough investigation into the case, were then read, and M. Labori pointed out to Gen Gonse that these letters never alluded to the alleged commission of Dreyfus.

Gen Gonse replied that it was because he always advised Col. Picquart not to mix up the Esterhazy and Dreyfus cases. Dreyfus, he added, had been condemned, and his case could not be re-opened, but they were bound to see if there were not another traitor.

Letters Given Away.

The General then made a bitter complaint at the fact that his letters had been communicated to M. Scheurer-Kestner, former Vice-President of the Senate, who published them in a book entitled "Pontius Pilate."

Replying to M. Labori, Gen. Gonse insisted that Dreyfus having been condemned, it was not his duty to go back to his case.

A scene between Gen. Gonse and Col. Picquart followed. The latter, being called, said he gave Gen. Gonse's letters to his lawyer, when he realized that he was to be the object of abominable intrigues, and when he received in Tunis a letter of threats from the late Lt.-Col. Henry, sent with the assent of Generals Gonse and De Boisdeffre. Col. Picquart added that he was not responsible for the subsequent publication of the letters.

In reply, Gen. Gonse said he had not given his consent to Henry's letter, and that Col. Picquart perceived machinations against him everywhere.

Picquart then declared that he showed him the secret dossier. Therefore, he claimed, Gen. Gonse could easily have acquainted himself with the probability that Dreyfus was innocent.

Picquart's Letters Opened.

M. Labori then took Gen. Gonse in hand on the subject of tampering with Col. Picquart's correspondence, while the Colonel was in Tunis, and Gonse admitted that one letter was opened, and that the words of this letter were used in forging the telegram which was intended to destroy the value of the petit bleu. The General insisted, however that only suspected letters addressed to Col. Picquart were opened.

Picquart replied emphatically that all of his letters were opened.

Proof Against Dreyfus.

Counsel then questioned General Gonse on the subject of the late Col. Henry's forgery and the General replied that he considered it an unfortunate [illegible] against Dreyfus and not against Picquart. Henry desired to furnish fresh proof against Dreyfus of which there was really no need, the witness added, as the diplomatic dossier contained sufficient proofs.

ITALIAN TONGUE SUPPRESSED.

Agitation Against Chamberlain's Most Recent Action.

Rome, Sept. 2.—There have appeared several articles in the Italian press calling the attention of the people and the Government of Italy to the substitution which is going on in Malta of English for Italian, as the official and written language of the island.

The Liberal Stampa, of Turin, the organ of Signor Giolitti, and the Clerical Unita Cattolica, of Florence, opened the campaign deploring that Mr. Chamberlain, by decree-in-council and against the vote of the Maltese Legislative Council, is suppressing the Italian language in the tribunals of Malta and imposing new taxes on the island.

The Tribuna, of Rome, has also dedicated a leader to the "question," and the officious Popolo Romano, in a temperate article, and the opposition paper, Don Chicotte, in stronger language, disapprove of what is being enacted in Malta.

The last-named paper demands that Italy should not leave Malta singlehanded in this struggle to retain her secular language and customs, and that an appeal should be made by Italy to England not to allow this substitution, which is called a scandal to take place.

It concludes by remarking that there is not fear that Italy will ever try to retake Malta, but Italy might discover that her friendship for England is not even appreciated to the extent of allowing a Mediterranean island to retain the Italian language.

I am informed that it is proposed to hold meeting in different cities of the peninsula on this Maltese question.

TO AID POOR DRUNKARDS.

Scheme Outlined by the Medical Association

Toronto, Sept. 2.—At the Medical Association last evening Dr. Thorburn presented the report of the special committee on the economic treatment of pauper inebriates. It decided that the Ontario Medical Association had approved the following scheme:

The appointment by the Provincial Government of an inspector of inebriate institutions. This inspector should be a qualified medical practitioner, who has made the medical treatment of inebriety a special study.

The inspector should organize in the city of Toronto a hospital for the treatment of pauper inebriates of the more hopeful class, and in the other cities of the Province an inebriate department in the existing general hospitals.

The inspector should also arrange in connection with such institution where inebriates are received and treated an organization or agency for the adoption of the probation system and giving a helping hand to the patient, subsequent to treatment for inebriety.

BIG CONSERVATIVE RALLY.

An Offset to Sir Richard Cartwright to be Sounded at the Fair Grounds.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—As an offset to the Sir Richard Cartwright meeting in Massey Hall, local Conservatives are arranging for a big gathering of the faithful for a mass meeting to be held on Sept. 18th, the anniversary of the victory of the N. P. in 1878.

The meeting, which is to be held under the auspices of the Ward Six Conservative Association, of which Mr. A. Claude Macdonald is president, will take place in the Exhibition grand stand or one of the other large buildings. Arrangements are being made for an unusual attendance. Special railway rates are being obtained in order to enable Ontario members of both Houses to be present—which would seem a needless trouble, as all the members have passes and can travel free.

The star speaker of the evening will be Hon. George E. Foster. Mr. Whitney will be present and possibly Mr. Hugh John Macdonald. Hon. N. Clarke Wallace will not be present, as he leaves on September 7th for the Pacific Coast.

AN ACQUITTAL DECIDED UPON.

English Lawyer Says the Judges Have Made Up Their Minds.

London, Sept. 2.—Mr. Thos. Terrell, Q. C., who is at Rennes, has been giving his impressions of the great court-martial. To his mind, the president of the inquiry has already decided in favor of the acquittal of the accused. This opinion of the well known barrister is, however, opposed to the view of the English journalists who have attended the proceedings from the outset. In the private communications received from them in London, Colonel Jouaust is stated to have shown in a variety of ways a marked bias against the accused. His unfriendly attitude towards Dreyfus was noticed particularly in the earlier stages of the trial, and this, coupled with the bad effect of M. Labori's absence upon the defence, gave rise to the idea that a verdict of "Guilty" against Drepfus was not improbable. Until M. Bertulus and Col Picquart came forward, a tendency had undoubtedly set in which was unfavorable to the accused. Mr. Terrell has, however, seized a most important point in pointing out that instructions from the authorities of the State will outweigh any legal evidence produced at the court-martial. The future of the prisoner rests entirely with M. Loubet, even if Colonel Jouaust and his colleagues decide upon a verdict of "Guilty" against Dreyfus. The great indirect influence which a succession of generals and ex War Ministers must exert upon a body of officers much inferior in rank has no weight with M. Waldeck-Rousseau. The French Premier has given several indications that he is a fairly strong man. The real test of his strength will come when the final liberation of Captain Dreyfus has to be settled.

COMPLIES GRUDGINGLY

English Ritualist Leader Unwillingly Obeys the Bishop.

THIS GUN IS A TERROR.

No Range is Long Enough to Test a New British Weapon.

A Turkish Cruiser Wrecked Off the Coast of Asia Minor—An English Paper Takes Up the Cause of Mrs. Maybrick—The Prince Digged in the Ribs—The British are Not Afraid of the Plague.

London, Sept. 2.—Public interest in both the Dreyfus court martial and the Transvaal crisis rather flagged during the week and is not yet keen on the yacht race, though the papers give good accounts of the Shamrock's doings. Sandwiched in between these is the church question. Letters from the clergy and others are constantly appearing in the press. Lord Halifax, the most prominent lay leader of the ritualists, has issued a manifesto counselling grudging compliance with the archbishop's decision, that incense and lights are not to be used, if it is insisted by the diocesan bishop, and declaring the ritualists will fight to the bitter end to secure a repeal of the decision.

Turkish Vessel Wrecked.

London, Sept. 2.—A despatch from Constantinople says that the Turkish crusier Ismir has been wrecked in Besika Bay, between the coast of Asia Minor and the north end of the Isle of Tenedos. It is possible that the wrecked vessel is the Turkish transport Ismirli formerly the State of Indiana, built in Glasgow in 1874, and purchased by the Ottoman Government in 1892. None of the standard naval authorities includes a cruiser of the name of Ismir among the Ottoman warships.

"Hanged or Freed."

London, Sept. 2.—A weekly paper again brings up the Maybrick case, saying the injustice done to Dreyfus is nothing when compared to that done to Mrs. Florence Maybrick, the American woman. undergoing penal servitude for life after having been convicted of poisoning her husband, basing its remarks on the old theory that she ought to have been hanged or freed.

This Gun is a Terror.

London, Sept. 2.—An astonishing report is going the rounds about the new gun made at Woolwich, which is said to be so powerful that no range is long enough to test it, so a new range is to be built. It is seriously stated that the first shot went out of sight, and that, thus, it was impossible to get the exact range. But the range was conservatively estimated at fifteen miles. As the extended testing grounds will not be ready for some time, it is said the gun is being shortened so that it can be tested,

Prince Digged in the Ribs.

London, Sept. 2.—Many stories are current about the Prince of Wales' recent visit to Marienbad, where he was most democratic, It is said that a Polish Jew, sitting on a park beach next to the Prince, not knowing his identy, began to question him about what he paid for his rooms, doctors, etc., ending with digging His Royal Highness in the ribs and telling him he looked to healthy to need the water cure.

Not Afraid of Plague.

London, Sept. 2.—The reports of the plague abroad created uneasiness here, and the authorities have taken a few regulation precautions at the ports. But the bulk of the English are far too satisfied with their sanitary superiority to seriously consider the possibility of an outbreak in this country.

SAME OLD TALE.

A Marvellous Victory Alleged to Have Been Achieved by the United States Troops.

Washington, Sept. 2.—General Otis today cabled the War Department a despatch which he received from General Hughes, commanding the American forces at Iloilo. General Hughes said:

"Lieut.-Col. Byrne, on Aug. 31st, destroyed Argo Gula, most important bandit stronghold, killing 21, wounding many, capturing large quantities supplies, complete outfit reloading shells, bolos, spears, etc. Feat remarkable as to when accessible only by road, almost perpendicular slope, constantly under fire for one thousand feet; one officer and two men struck by boulders rolled down on them, but not seriously; no casualities reported; bandits' strength four hundred.

Explosion Killed Three.

Manistee, Mich., Sept. 2.—The boiler in Chapman and Sargent's bowl factory at Copemish, 30 miles north of here, exploded yesterday afternoon, killing three men and fatally injuring four others. The building was totally wrecked. Charles Handy, who was the fireman, was found with his head blown off.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 1, 1899

WHAT WAS THE MOTIVE FOR THE PERSECUTION OF DREYFUS?

Should the outcome of the Rennes court-martial be an acquittal of Dreyfus, it now seems probable that the leaders in the conspiracy, of which he has been made the victim, will be tried in their turn. Indeed, Deroulede, warned the General Staff to expect such a result, with the sinister purpose, apparently, of suggesting the most desperate measures to secure a second conviction. His advice was followed, and, thus far, the Generals, who have been connected with the affair at one or another of its stages, have combined to protect one another and to cast suspicion on the accused. Should the time ever come, however, when these men are placed on the defense, they are likely to fall out, and then some light may be thrown on what is at present a mystery, namely, the origin of the conspiracy which has had such wide ramifications and such a disastrous effect on the reputation of the French Army. We know, of course, that Dreyfus was selected for a scapegoat because he was a Jew and, therefore, certain to be condemned in advance by Anti-Semitic sentiment. But why was any scapegoat needed? That is the fundamental question, and, should Dreyfus be set free an answer to it may be looked for.

THE LUMBER QUESTION.

Doubtless the Michigan lumbermen make out a strong case on the face of it, in their action to upset Ontario's embargo on logs, but they should not delude themselves with the belief that by quashing that regulation they will win their case. Canada has a stronger measure in reserve, and just as sure as faith it will be invoked not only to compel the manufacture in Canada of logs cut from Crown lands, but to enforce the same provisions regarding logs in land owed by private individuals. Just the other day Ontario's legislation is upset—if it be upset—that day the Dominion Goveenment will be compelled to impose an export duty on logs and an import duty on lumber—a policy which will be of imense benefit to Canada, and of great injury to Michigan. Canada has the best end of the argument, however you look at it.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Theresa," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondaines, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Caesar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 56-year-old baldheaded Caesar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

Comparative Suffering.

Author—You have noticed, of course, that the suffering of the heroine is intended to be terrible in the first act.

Critic (who has just read the play)—Still it'll be as naught in comparison with the suffering of the audience along toward the last act.—Chicago News.

Appearances.

Griggs—Yes. A [illegible] can never tell just how much it is going to cost to keep them up.

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

JOE'S GREAT PATIENCE.

The Situation in South Africa Has Become Rather Complicated.

EVIL DAY BEING POSTPONED

The Standard Remarks That Delay Opens the Way for a Severer Conflict.

Col. Hector Macdonald, the Omdurman Hero, Urgently Summoned to the War Office and He Expects to Go to the Cape at Once—South Rhodesia Volunteers Being Sworn In—An Unfounded Statement.

London, Sept. 1.—The situation in South Africa has become rather complicated. The strong feeling of the Dutch element in the Cape Colony evidently influences the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Chamberlain, to do everything possible to avert a rupture and explain the further endeavor for a conference at Cape Town to arrange for the constitution of an arbitration court and to deal with the question of suzerainty, which, rather than franchise, now takes the leading place in the controversy. The Standard says: "Diplomatic dalliance only postpones the evil day and prepares for us a still severer conflict. Until we resort to decisive measures every day adds to the offensive and defensive strength of the Boers, and proportionately fosters their infatuated belief in their own invincibility which lies at the root of their obduracy. Thus we are confronted with an exceedingly grave question."

The Daily News says: "Mr. Chamberlain's despatches exhibit a game of patience almost in the aspect of a comedy."

The special despatches from Johannesburg express the belief that the Volksraad will oppose President Kruger going to Cape Town.

General Joubert is credited with saying: "There will not be war, but Great Britain will not get all she wants."

The Uitlanders are much irritated at the prospect of further delay.

Burghers Excited.

Cape Town, Sept. 1.—Reports received here from various outlying districts of the Transvaal describe them as being in a state of excitement. The burghers, it is said, are watching the developments keenly, but the majority of them hope for a peaceful solution of the crisis. There is a general exodus of British subjects from the larger towns. Orders have been issued to the commandants and field cornets to have themselves and the burghers in readiness in the event of an outbreak of hostilities.

Recruits Muster.

Bulawayo, Matabeleland, British South Africa, Sept. 1.—Recruits for Colonel Plumbers' camp are going to that place daily. Sixty South Rhodesia volunteers were sworn in yesterday.

An Unfounded Statement.

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, Sept. 1.—The assertion made yesterday by a local newspaper that orders have been given for the immediate supply of equipment and cartridges to the Orange Free State artillery is declared to be unfounded.

How They Used to Kill.

In repairing an old house in Dartford, England, not long ago the workmen found several ancient death warrants, bearing the signature of the Duke of Portland, minister of King George III. One of them, dated June, 1798, gives an idea of what legal hanging and quartering were like in those days. It runs:

"Whereas, James O'Coigley, having been attainted of high treason and had sentence passed upon him to be drawn upon a hurdle to the place of execution and to be there hanged by the neck, but not until he is dead, but that, being alive, he shall be taken down and his bowels taken out and burned before his face, that his head shall be severed from his body and his body divided into four parts, and that his head and body shall be disposed of as we think fit, and whereas we think fit to remit that part of the sentence directing the burning of his bowels and dividing the body into four parts, our will and pleasure is that he shall be drawn and hanged and have his head severed from his body."

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore!" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the [illegible] first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of [illegible], which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is little but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed; and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

THE CANADA CYCLE AND MOTOR COMPANY, Limited,
is to be incorporated under the Ontario Companies' Act to acquire as going concerns the businesses, as manufacturers and dealers in Bicycles and Bicycle Parts, now carried on by the following well known Companies:

MASSEY-HARRIS COMPANY, Limited,
H. A. LOZIER & COMPANY (Cleveland Bicycles),
WELLAND VALE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Limited,
GOOLD BICYCLE COMPANY, Limited,
GENDRON MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Limited,

including the Plant, Machinery, Tools, Stock-in-Trade, Fixtures, Patent Rights, Trade Marks, Trade Names, Copyrights, Good-will and Leaseholds of the above-named Companies in connection with their said business; and including also all the real property of H. A. Lozier & Company, and The Goold Bicycle Company, Limited.

THE COMPANIES.

The bicycle industry is one of great importance and magnitude in Canada. The constituent Companies are the leaders in the trade. Their Trade Marks and Brands are everywhere popularly known, and by reason of their world-wide reputation for unrivalled excellence some of the Companies enjoy a large and growing foreign trade which offers a favourable field for development, and which this Company proposes to extend.

The Companies give employment to about 1,700 men. Their outputs for the past year aggregated about 38,500 bicycles. The plant and machinery are of the latest and best equipment, and capable of twice that production with but small additional outlay in tools. The factory sites to be acquired by the Company are especially adapted for manufacturing purposes; have advantageous shipping facilities, and will permit of ample extensions to the existing buildings.

Each of the above-named Companies has covenanted not to engage for long periods of years in any business competing with the bicycle business of this Company.

NET EARNINGS.

The steadily progressive character of the business of the constituent Companies is shown by the following Accountants' certificate:

We certify that the combined net profits in the business of Bicycles and Bicycle Parts of the Massey-Harris Co., Limited, H. A. Lozier & Co. (Cleveland Bicycles), Welland Vale Manufacturing Co., Limited, Goold Bicycle Co., Limited, and Gendron Manufacturing Co., Limited, for the past three years, are as follows:—

1898-9	$330,115.35

Toronto, Canada,

ADVANTAGES.

Amongst the advantages to be gained by this amalgamation of interests, the following may be enumerated:—

FIRSTLY—Reduction in selling and distribution expenses and advertising.
SECONDLY—The economies and improvements in production arising from the practical knowledge of the members forming the Board of Directors, which will be available for each branch of the business.
THIRDLY—The economies due to consolidation of management, manufactories, office work, and of buying, distributing, and financial arrangements.

The Directors are fully alive to the desirability of conserving the individuality and initiative of the various businesses, and will not allow consolidation to act detrimentally in these matters, but there are obvious advantages to be gained, as, for example, in buying in large quantities in the best markets, in the supply of ample capital, and in the manufacture of a large output of high-grade wheels at prices to meet the demands of the public.

MANAGEMENT.

The Management of the Company will be in the hands of experienced manufacturers, who have been identified with the leading bicycle companies of Canada in the past, and have made a success of the business.

WORKING CAPITAL.

The Company will commence business without any bonded or mortgage debt and with a working capital in excess of $1,000,000, exclusive of the additional capital available from the issue of the Preference Stock in the treasury ($500,000).

DIVIDENDS.

The Preference Shares shall confer the right to a fixed cumulative preferential dividend of 7 per cent. per annum accruing from the date of payment by subscribers, to be provided for out of the net earnings of the Company before any dividends are paid upon the common stock, and the further right to repayment of capital in priority to the common stock, but they will not be entitled to further participation in profits or assets.

If in any one year dividends amounting to 7 per cent. are not paid on the preference stock the deficiency shall be a first charge upon the net earnings of the Company and shall be paid subsequently before any dividend is paid upon or set apart for the common stock.

Dividends will be payable half-yearly on the 1st days of May and November, or such other half-yearly dates as the Directors may determine.

RESERVE ACCOUNT.

The Charter of the Company will provide that 25 per cent. of the balance of the net earnings, after payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on the Preference Stock, shall be annually transferred to a reserve account in the books of the Company, the better to secure to the Preferred Shareholders the payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on their preferred shares, and such annual transfers shall be continued until the amount of said account reaches $500,000, at which sum it is to be maintained, and if it is at any time drawn upon it is to be in like manner restored and maintained.

The amount required to pay 7 per cent. on the preference stock already taken by the Directors and that now offered to the public being $175,000, it is considered that such dividends are amply assured, and the above reserve account of $500,000 has been stipulated for in order that the position of the preferred shares may be rendered independent of any possible contingency.

AUTOMOBILES.

It is intended that an important part of the Company's undertaking will be the manufacture and sale of motors and motor vehicles. This branch of business is a natural outgrowth of the Bicycle industry, and is believed to offer a profitable investment for the capital and the large and successful experience in manufacturing which this Company will command.

Arrangements have been made to have the books of the Company regularly audited by Chartered Accountants.

Application will be made in due course to have the stock of the Company listed upon the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges.

$2,000,000 7 per cent. Preference Stock in the above Company will be offered for public subscription at PAR on WEDNESDAY, the 6TH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1899, payable as follows: 5 per cent. on application and the balance of 95 per cent. on allotment. The right is reserved to reject or reduce any application, and subscription carries with it an agreement to accept such reduced amount. The failure to make payment when due forfeits the previous payment. In case no allotment is made the amount deposited on application will be returned.

Subscription Lists will open at the chief offices of the National Trust Company, Limited, Toronto and Montreal, and at the Head Office and Branches of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, the 6th September, '99, and close at 3 o'clock on the following day.

ROWED ACROSS THE CHANNEL.

Daring Excursion in a Small Boat By Two Englishmen.

London, Sept. 1.—A daring excursion in an open boat has just been successfully accomplished. Messrs. W. G. Andrew and B. [illegible], who some weeks ago rowed round the Isle of Wight in an open boat in twenty-four hours, a distance of about seventy-five miles, left Sandown on a Thursday afternoon in their own open rowing boat to row across channel to Cherbourg. The estimated distance of this trip is about 100 miles. They took no gear except two pair of sculls and one pair of oars, a compass and a life-belt each. The start was made at 5.30 p.m., and on Saturday morning a telegram announcing their arrival came from Barfleur, some little distance from Cherbourg, saying that they had put in there owing to heavy weather.

Honor For a Briton.

Rome, Sept. 1.—The office of majordomo to the Pope will be conferred on Mgr. Stonor, titular Archbishop of Trebizond. This well-known English prelate is very popular in the British Catholic colony here as well as in English clerical circles. His elevation to the very important post of majordomo was resolved on in order to make a good impression in England. In Vatican circles, according to the "Messagero," the appointment is a political act, designed to conciliate England, and further the propagation of Catholicism in that country.

CANADA BEING ROBBED.

Mr. Beckles Willson Explains our Position on Boundary Trouble.

WILL STAND NO TRICKERY.

Canada Will Fight Before She Again Gives Way to Impertinent Pretensions of Her Neighbor.

Mr. Willson Has Written a Strong Letter to the Daily Chronicle, Setting Forth Canada's Position in the Alaska Boundary Claim—Canada Refuses to be Tricked Out of Her Just Rights.

London, Sept. 1.—Mr. Beckles Willson, author of "The Great Company," a book on the Hudson Bay Company, which has attracted general attention, and who recently returned to England from a tour in Canada, with a Canadian bride—Miss Ethel Grace Dudley, of Colborne—has written a strong letter to The Daily Chronicle setting forth the position of Canada on the Alaskan boundary question, answering those who accuse Canada of being unreasonable. He says:

"Canada's attitude in the unfortunate Alaskan controversy would be more readily understood if all who write upon the subject were familiar with the history of the previous negotiations between Great Britain and the American Republic, in which the Dominion was vitally concerned. In every instance Canada is seen to emerge with loss of territory or privilege. It has been confessed by one American statesman of eminence that Maine belonged rightfully to her; her incontestable proof that Rouse's Point lay within her territory was ignored and the command of Lake Champlain given to her enemies; fair Oregon and the islands of the straits, were they not hers—by discovery, occupation, possession?

Gold Discovered.

"And then at last came the discovery of vast quantities of gold in a remote and barren quarter, won through the patience and almost incredible fortitude of the servants of the Hudson's Bay Company. A rise in the importance of the district ensued, only to be discounted by the information that the Americans intended to dispute and forcibly deny Canada's possession of an open port, although every Canadian map shows such port to be hers. Grasp this, and then reiterate, if you can, the charge that Canada is unreasonable. Can you wonder that every patriotic Canadian devotedly concerned in his country's future and chagrined at her past losses should protest in the most emphatic manner against further sacrifice o what he truly believes to be his.

No More Erasures.

"'What!' is the cry, in effect, of the Canadians, 'erase more red from our map. Sacrifice more territory which our primary school geographies call ours? Never! Retreat once more before the impertinent pretensions of our neighbors! We will fight first! We might have submitted to the unjust judgments of the Mother Country in times past: but we are stronger now: and moreover, the sympathy of Britons all over the Empire is on our side, as we are on theirs. We refuse to be tricked or browbeaten out of our just rights."

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his hand by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of indecision he drew $570 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

Reciprocal.

"Yes, sir," remarked the amiable man. "I look to see an Englishman come over here and drop his h's once in awhile."

"Yes," answered the man who has been to Epsom downs, "and he likes to see us go over there and drop our R's and V's."

WILLING TO PAY FOR IT.

What Uncle Bill Wanted the Newspaper Publisher to Do.

A number of newspaper men were exchanging reminiscences a few days ago in a Court street inn. One of them, by the way, was an ex-publisher—that is to say, he once owned and edited a paper in the upper section of the state. One of his subscribers was William Makepeace Thackeray Willington, whose neighbors called him "Uncle Bill" to save time and labor.

"One day Uncle Bill walked into my office," said the former publisher. "He placed his whip in a corner and removed his hat. He asked if I was the editor. I pleaded guilty. 'Shake,' said he. 'I am glad to know ye. When I was a young feller, I used to do some writin myself.'

"Uncle Bill lapsed into silence and did some solid thinking for several minutes. Then he resumed the conversation. He said he liked the appearance of The Banner of Freedom mighty well and hoped it was not only bringing me fame, but money also. Naturally my bosom swelled with pride. The old man said he had only a few minutes to spare, and, before leaving, he wished to ask a favor. I supposed that he was about to spring a little poem which he had dashed off all by himself, but that wasn't the case. Uncle Bill said:

"'My son, I want to ask you a special favor. My eyes are not as strong as they were, and I would like to have you print my copy of the paper in a type two or three sizes larger than you use in the regular edition. Now, mind, I don't want you to do this for nothin. I'm willin to pay for it. Here's the money, and if that isn't enough let me know when my subscription is due again and I'll pay what's owin.'

"The old man dove his right hand into his pocket, fished out a silver half dollar and planked it on my table, saying: 'There's the money. If that isn't enough to cover the extree expense, let me know when I call in next spring, and I'll make it good. I'm willin to pay for any little favors.' Before I could explain the impossibility of his scheme he jumped into his buggy and started off for Deep Hollow."

Comparative Suffering.

Author—You have noticed, of course, that the suffering of the heroine is intended to be terrible in the first act.

Critic (who has just read the play)—Still it'll be as naught in comparison with the suffering of the audience along toward the last act.—Chicago News.

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

A FAITHFUL DOG.

Its Owner Realized Its Worth, as Well He Might.

"Well, I wouldn't have believed it," exclaimed Jones in astonishment as he dropped in to see Smith the other evening and was met in the hall by a St. Bernard dog.

"Wouldn't have believed what?" asked Smith.

"Why, that you'd have a dog in your house," continued Jones. "It belongs to one of your neighbors, I suppose?"

"No, sir; that's my dog," replied Smith proudly.

"You don't really mean it, old man? Why, I've known you now for five years, and you've always had a marked aversion for dogs."

"Yes, I did have until lately, but I wouldn't be without one now. This brute is a noble, faithful fellow, and I wouldn't take $100 spot cash for"—

But at this juncture he was interrupted by his wife calling down over the banister: "Henry Smith, who was it that scattered these cigar ashes all over my dresser?"

"It must have been the dog, my dear," was his reply.

"And who was it that dropped these apple peelings on the floor?" she demanded.

"The dog, my dear," answered Smith.

"And there's a bottle of mucilage spilled on the hall carpet up here too. Is that some of your work, Henry?"

"No, my dear; the dog's to blame for that."

"And, goodness gracious," she continued angrily, "if some one hasn't been whittling up here again! How many times have I told you not to do that in the house?"

"But I had nothing to do with it, my dear. The dog's been up there probably chewing a stick."

"Well, it's a burning shame the way this house is mussed up. Your collars and ties are scattered all over the rooms."

"Are they, my dear? That dog's been up there again then. Yes," continued Smith as he drew his friend into the parlor, "I wouldn't take a big pot of money for that dog. Why, the noble fellow saves me about 20 jawings a week."

"So I see," chuckled Jones, "and you bet I'll have one before noon tomorrow."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. R. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you dubs 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my derndest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

The men-of-war of the ancient Romans had a crew of about 225 men, of which 174 were oarsmen working on three decks. The speed of these vessels was about [illegible] an hour in fair weather.

No joy or pleasure on this earth quite equals that which comes into the home when baby arrives. Who can describe the happiness of man and woman, joined in wedlock, as they look upon the fragile, delicate mite that is blood of their blood and flesh of their flesh? And who can depict the hopelessness and dejection that hover about the house where the wife is incapable of becoming a mother? Barrenness proceeds from some derangement of the distinctly feminine organs. Many of the common ailments known as "female troubles" cause it. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription overcomes barrenness by stamping out diseases of women, and by healing and curing ulceration. It tones up the system, stops drains, and restores strength. During gestation it modifies morning sickness, gives elasticity to the overstrained parts concerned, makes the hour of baby's coming short and almost painless, and gives wonderful recuperative power to the patient. By making the mother strong and cheerful, it makes the little one healthy, vigorous and good natured. Insist upon the medicine dealer giving you Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription when you ask for it. Substitutes are often dangerous.

Mrs. James W. Blacker, of 629 Catherine St., Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "Your medicines have done wonders for me. For years my health was very poor; I had four miscarriages, but since using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Favorite Prescription' I have much better health, and now I have a fine healthy baby."

For 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of customs and mailing only, you can get a free copy of that celebrated doctor book, the Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, illustrated. Cloth-bound, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Tells The Times Something About His Spiritualistic Ideas.

Rev. Dr. Austin, M.A., D.D., who has has received a certain amount of prominence because of his avowed belief in spiritualism and his subsequent expulsion from the Methodist church, was in town Saturday on his way to Toronto. A Times' representative met the reverend gentleman and had a short interview with him regarding his secession from the Methodist communion, and also on the matter of spiritualism. He states that he has just made a tour through the North-west, and delivered a number of lectures that were well received. Among the places he addressed meetings at were Battle Creek and Detroit, Mich. He says that there are now ten million of people in the United States who believe in spiritualism, which he terms a religion of the Bible. He said that he had been investigating the phenomena of spiritualism for eight years and had been closely identified with its principles for two years. All truth is sacred; every man, the doctor thinks, should in this intelligent age investigate for himself. Especially should ministers who deal continually with questions of the soul make themselves familiar with the psychic phenomena.

The reverend doctor referred to his expulsion from the Methodist church because of a sermon he preached on Jan. 6th, 1899, in the Parkdale Methodist church, and said that a man is not killed when he is expelled. He said he never slept better or had a better appetite than at present. The doctor then gave a short statement of his belief in spiritualism and said he had had many communications from the spirit world.

In concluding Doctor Austin stated that he had been offered the pastorate of an independent church in Toronto, and had the acceptance of it under consideration at present.

SCHOOLS OPEN TUESDAY.

To-morrow All the Public and High Schools Begin the Fall Term.

The public and high schools throughout the Province open to-morrow, although in a few cases the opening took place on Sept. 1st, which was Friday last. On account of Labor day falling on Monday, a great majority of the schools postponed their opening until Tuesday.

The pupils of the local schools will assembly asusual at 9 a.m., and take their places, after which they will be dismissed for the day. There is naturally much confusion in organizating after summer vacation, and for the next week Inspecter. Walker will be the busiest man in town.

A Chance for Investment.

Among the opportunities for investment which have recently been offered to the Canadian public, none has had more attractive features than the seven per cent. cumulative preference stock of the Canadian Cycle and Motor Company, of which two million dollar's worth are now open for subscription at the Toronto and Montreal offices of the National Trust Company and at the head offices and branches of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. People who have been forced to content themselves with the three per cent. allowed on bank deposits are now able to place their money at seven per cent. in a security which possesses the highest commercial value in stability and solidity. The leading bicycle manufacturers of Canada, whose businesses, absorbed by the new concern, have been together with the accompanying goodwill, patents and franchises, have been rewarded for their skill and enterprise by large and increasing profits. The immense economics to be effected by combination will still further increase the returns upon the invested capital, and thus raise the value of the shares. The president of the new company is Mr. Walter E. H. Massey of the Massey-Harris Company, the vice-president, Senator George A. Cox, and these gentlemen are assisted by a thoroughly competent board. If any assurance of provident and skillful management were required it is furnished by the character of the men who control the new organization.

No Paper To-morrow.

There will be no issue of the Times to-morrow, so that our employees may have a holiday to-day. Our subscribers, therefore, will please make a note of this.

Arrested in Tweed

Detective Ross, of the C.P.R. brought a prisoner to town yesterday morning, whom he arrested in Tweed, charged with throwing stones at the trains near Havelock, and breaking some car windows. He was remanded until Wednesday.

A Parent's Plea.

Editor Morning Times:

Sir,—The schools of the country will now be throwing open their doors and the question of books and grades and routine will again come up. The bookmakers and the booksellers have had their way so long that the average curriculum is so overloaded as to make it worse than useless to the average school child. Little boys and girls may be seen nowadays trundling to school bowed down beneath a weight of more books than our fathers ever saw until after their majority. Not only is the whole range of human knowledge incorporated, but to render the teacher's work more slavish the resultless each branch is divided into infinitesimal groups. The little automatons must trudge to school with books enough to start a circulating library, and into these books they peep and gain a superficial knowledge of many things without knowing anything definitely.

To compel a child to follow the modern school routine is positive torture and many parents deliberately keep their children at home now and then to break the tension. Under the present extended curriculum of the public schools it is impossible for scholars to acquire more than the merest superficial knowledge of the studies over which they are compelled to labor.

A RICH MINING PROPERTY.

A British Columbia Property That is Very Rich.

We publish elsewhere an advertisement of the Scottish-Canadian Mining and Development Co., of London, Ont. Mr. A. E. Welch, manager of the company, who personally visited the mines in British Columbia, says in his report:

To sum things up, I would say that from direct observation of both myself and experts, together with outside opinion and testimony, we can rest assured that we have one of the finest partially developed properties in an immensely rich country.

We have every indication of having a vast body of highly valuable ore, carrying gold, silver and lead. Our transportation problem is good now; it may (and altogether likely will) be vastly improved and cheapened next summer. Our water power is more than ample for all the mining and milling we can do. Our base of supplies is convenient, and our need of money is small as it takes vastly less to operate a property such as ours than is the case in most instances.

Having affairs in the shape we have, I would recommend the sale of a block of stock at a price low enough to ensure a very speedy sale, and as soon as we have realized enough to guarantee our winter's work I would advise the summary withdrawal of the remainder, and the raising of the price to a figure more commensurate with its value.

I have inspected mine after mine, and I candidly would not exchange places with companies asking four times the price we have been holding stock at.

The purchaser of stock to-day takes very little risk, absolutely none beyond the ordinary business risk he would run if he put his money into any other business enterprise, and I feel convinced that you, gentlemen, who have already placed your money and your faith in this property, will be amply repaid.

The money already spent by the Company in development work has been most advantageously expended, and every dollar has been made to count.

The Directors, acting on the above suggestion, have directed an issue of 50,000 shares, to be placed on the market, for sale up to October 1st, 1899, at ten cents per share, subject to withdrawal at any time, without notice.—The Scottish-Canadian Mining and Development Co. of British Columbia, Limited.—Non-Personal Liability.

Ashburnham Notes.

The Ashburnham public school opened Friday last. The attendance was quite small, as many are not returning until Tuesday, Sept. 5th, as Monday will be Labor Day.

The next regular meeting of the Ashburnham School Board will be held to-morrow evening.

Two Engine Drivers Indulge in a Conquest for Supremacy.

BUEFERS WERE LOCKED

And Now One Driver is to be Tried for Endangering Public Safety.

One Man Wanted Water for His Engine, but the Other Declined to Move His Iron Steed Out of the Way, the Two Engines Locked, With the Result That One Was Derailed.

London, Sept. 5.—Drivers Edwards and Hopkins had an extraordinary contest for supremacy at the Cyfarthfa Steel Works. The droll but exciting story was told at the Merthyr Police Court of how two locomotives under the guidance of their enraged drivers repeatedly charging each other, striving for the mastery of the railway track.

Driver Edwards wanted water fo his engine, but Driver Hopkins declined to move his iron steed out of the way till he had finished taking in coal.

Driver Edwards, however, advanced with the object of pushing Hopkins ahead so as to admit of getting past him out to a crossing.

Hopkins, however, opposed this movement, and steaming against Edwards' engine, drove it back on to another line. Edwards returned to the charge, and was again defeated; a third time he returned, Hopkins declaring that he preferred death to dishonor. On this occasion the buffers of the two opposing engines became locked, and, after a final wrestle, Hopkins' engine went off the rails, leaving Edwards master of the road.

Hopkins was committed for trial to the assizes on a charge of endangering public safety.

LEM FELCHER'S LOST MONEY.

Harry L. Spence Charged With Defrauding Him.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Harry L. Spence was charged with having on April 16 1896, defrauding Lem Felcher of diamond fame, now of Peterborough, out of $168. Spence entered a plea of not guilty in the Police Court, and was remanded on bail until to-morrow.

HOW TO SCARE A LION.

London, Sept. 5.—Mr. Edward North Buxton is at present bicycling with his daughter along the high road to Uganda, which is now good enough through most of its course to make an adequate bicycling track. In one of his letters home he describes an amusing adventure. As Mr. Buxton and his daughter were riding along, they found that a lion had taken up a position right across the track. People with less than iron nerves would have perhaps got off, and the lion might have plucked up heart to attack them. But Mr. North Buxton and his daughter took a simpler course. They violently rung their bells, and the king of the beasts, appalled by such a novel sight and sound in the silences of mid-Africa, just rose and slunk away.

HAS CANADA BACKED DOWN?

Washington, Sept. 3.—A new and satisfactory turn has been given to the Alaska boundary negotiations within the past few days, and it is not unlikely that there will be developments early this week that will justify the announcement that a temporary agreement is in sight, and perhaps that a partial settlement has been effected. There is reason to believe that the Canadian authorities have shown a disposition to abandon or modify some of their claims.

Only a Canard.

London, Sept. 4.—The British Foreign Office denies the statement cabled to a New York newspaper that concessions in the Alaskan boundary question have been decided upon.

FOURTEEN STEPCHILDREN.

London, Sept. 5.—Not very long ago Alice Chard, a young woman of twenty-three, married an omnibus driver, whom she understood to be a bachelor. To her dismay, she found that he was a widower with fourteen children, and to crown her troubles, her spouse shortly afterwards died, leaving the family on her hands.

Some kind friends assisted her and relieved her of a portion of her burden, but her desperation was such that she tried to commit suicide by swallowing carbolic oil. She was removed to the London Hospital, where restoratives were administered, and she recovered. She is now in custody.

TAXATION OF MACHINERY.

Montreal, Sept. 6.—The right of the city of Montreal under its new charter to tax machinery, etc., as real property is likely to be contested by some of the large companies doing business here. The street railway company has sent in a valuation of its plant, putting "junk" values upon the different articles in accordance with a recent judgment [illegible] in Ontario respecting the taxation of poles, wires, etc. This the assessors refuse to accept. The company has given notice of appeal. The Grand Trunk and the Bell Telephone Company also question the validity of the tax.

THE WAR CLOUD DARKENING EVERY HOUR!

The Flower of Britain's Army Ordered to be in Readiness to Embark for Scene of Action at 24 Hours' Notice.

WAR NOW REGARDED AS ABSOLUTELY CERTAIN

The Admiralty Have a Number of Transports Waiting to Convey the Troops to Cape Colony. The Boers Are Also Making Every Preparation.

London, Sept. 5.—The latest news received in this city from various points in West Africa is vague and contradictory. The afternoon papers follow the lead of the morning papers in taking an extremely grave view of the situation, although the War Office denial somewhat tends to allay the widely alarmist reports current late last night.

The Boer organ here, The Standard and Digger News to-day prints a despatch from Pretoria saying that the tension there was apparently less severe, and it was believed arrangements for the proposed conference at Cape Town were completed, although President Kruger, of the Transvaal Republic, was unlikely to attend. The opinion of those who regard the beginning of a war between Great Britain and the Transvaal as only a matter of a short time is voiced by the St. James Gazette, which says to-day: "The news concerning the crisis is very grave. We learn that three more infantry brigades have been ordered to Cape Colony, including the Gordons, of Darghai fame; one battalion of the Highland infantry who fought in Crete, the second battalion of the Black Watch, and the second battalion of the Camerons. These regiments are under orders to be ready to leave at twenty-four hours' notice. The officers and men are delighted at the prospect of active service.

Transports Ready.

"In service circles war is considered absolutely certain. The Admiralty have a number of transports ready to convey troops to Cape Colony. The Boers, while procrastinating in regard to their reply have been making every preparations for war, and are contemplating raiding the Natal frontier. Laing's Neck, which is the sole route from the Transvaal to Natal, is undefended."

Cape Town despatches say that the Afrikander papers print what purports to be a semi-official account of the recent pourparlers. But as these credit Mr. Conyngham Greene, the British Agent in the South African Republic, with saying that Great Britain was willing to abandon the question of British suzerainty if the proposals made at the Bloemfontein conference by Sir Alfred Milner, the Governor of Cape Colony and British High Commissioner to South Africa, were accepted, they are not credited either at Cape Colony or here.

Kruger's Reply.

Cape Town, Sept. 5.—The news received from Pretoria yesterday begins to show the situation in a clear light. It appears that the Transvaal's reply, which was handed on Saturday to the British diplomatic agent at Pretoria, Mr Conyngham Greene, was only to Mr. Chamberlain's proposal respecting a conference at Cape Town, and that another reply will be delivered to-day to Mr Chamberlain's original proposal for a joint inquiry into the franchise bill. This method of splitting the negotiation by the Transvaal is unfavorably commented upon here. The Cape Argus officially denies that the Government of the South African Republic has agreed to a conference at Cape Town.

OFFERS CONCESSIONS.

Pretoria, Sept. 5.—In the course of an interview to-day State Secretary Reitz said the Transvaal Government was waiting until Saturday's despatch reached the Imperial authorities before making its contents public.

Without, however, entering into details he could say that in his judgment the proposals of the Government offered Mr. Chamberlain an opportunity of coming to a settlement regarding the franchise and other outstanding questions.

He could also say that the Transvaal would take part in the suggested conference and was now awaiting the Imperial Government's reply in order to arrange the details as to a place of meeting.

A MODUS VIVENDI.

London, Sept. 5.—The second edition of the Times issued this morning contains a despatch from Pretoria under date of Sept. 4, saying: "The predominent view is that the last despatch opens up the way to a modus vivendi, inasmuch as the proposals of Mr Chamberlain, relating to the seven years' franchise have been practically complied with. This is the result of the influence of Herr Fischer (special agent of the Orange Free State) with the Raad."

This despatch, however, is at variance with the editorial views on the matter expressed by the Times this morning.

PREPARATIONS FOR WARTIME.

Cape Town, Sept. 5.—Arrangements are being completed for safeguarding telegraphic communication with the Cape in case of war between Great Britain and the Transvaal.

Refugees to the number of 147 have arrived here.

A million cartridges have been forwarded to Pietermaritzburg capital of the British territory at Natal.

Many Dutch farmers are leaving Bechuanaland for the purpose of forming a laager across the frontier.

SAVE THE NATION'S COAL.

London, Sept. 5.—A new departure of an important character has been decided upon by the Admiralty. As soon as the battleship Canopus, now being prepared for sea at Portsmouth, has completed her contractor's trials a large sum of money wil be spent upon altering her auxiliary machinery, so as to decrease her consumption of coal. The alteration will consist of so rearranging the machinery that the exhaust steam from the main engines, instead of going back to water, will be utilised to work the vessel's evaporators.

This will be the first time that such an arrangement has been introduced into the machinery of a British battleship, although exhaust steam is already made use of in up-to-date steamers. It is understood that this alteration will be extended to all battleships of the Canopus class.

THE QUEEN GENEROUS.

London, Sept. 5.—The Queen has allowed her Balmoral tenantry a rebate of fifteen per cent. owing to the deficiency of straw on last year's crop.

Board of Works.

Ald. McWilliams, chairman of above works, presented the following report:—

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

Gentlemen,—Your Board of Works beg leave to report as follows;—

1. That tenders were received for the construction of granolithic sidewalks on portions of Hunter, Simcoe, Aylmer and Charlotte streets as follows:

J. E. Hays, 14 3-10c per foot; R. Sheehy, 13 95-100; Evans & Langford, 15 20-100, J. Bogue and T. E. Wade, 15 57-100.

Your Board recommend that the construction be given to R. Sheehy.

2. Your Board recommend that a cheque for $20 40 for the taxes on lot 8, north London, north George st., be given to the collector of taxes.

3. Your Board examined a petition from R. E. Wood and others for the construction of a pipe sewer on Gilmour st., from the present manhole to the westerly limit of lot 35, plan 73, and find that it is sufficiently signed, and recommend that the engineer be instructed to prepare plans and advertise for tenders for the work.

4. That a petition was received from J. B. McWilliams and others for a granolithic walk on both sides of London st., from George to Harvey sts., and have examined and found it sufficiently signed. Your Board recommend that the petition be granted, the walk on south side to be four feet wide, and five feet wide on the north side, and that the work be done by day labor under the superintendence of F. Bartlett. Also that Mr Bartlett superintend the construction of a sidewalk on Dalhousie st., as advertised, and that Adam Dawson be appointed inspector instead of Mr. Bartlett, at $2 50 per day, to be paid on the certificate of the engineer.

5. That George Rose, when he has completed granolithic sidewalk on Park st., proceed to construct granolithic sidewalk on Charlotte st., and on completion of this work to then construct the granolithic walk on Belmont avenue, from Hunter st. to Homewood avenue, as asked for by A. J. Gough and others, the petition having been examined and found to be sufficiently signed. And that Mr. Rose also construct the granolithic sidewalk on Reid and Simcoe sts. as advertised.

6. That the Treasurer be authorized to pay the expenses of constructing these granolithic sidewalks that have been, or may be done by day labor on the certificate of the Town Engineer, and that the Mayor and Treasurer be authorized to arrange for the loan or loans for this purpose until the work is completed, the necessary assessment to be made after the completion of said sidewalks.

7. That notice of the intention of Council to construct sewers on the following streets be given: Aylmer st., from Park to Perry st., and on Perry st. from Aylmer to George sts.; on Park st., from Hunter to Weller st., and on Weller st., from Park to the westerly limit of lot 5, plan 49; on Harvey st., from McDonnel to Dublin; on Water st., from Dublin to Smith; on Smith st., from Water to Dennistoun avenue; on George st., from Dublin to Smith st.; on Smith st., from George to Water st., and on Antrim st., from George to Water street.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted as read, after which Council adjourned.

HIS ENEMIES ON TOP.

The Strongest Blow So Far Dealt at Captain Dreyfus.

INVITATION TO GERMANY

Who Will be Asked to Elucidate the Mystery of the Dreyfus.

Several Scenes in This Morning's Court Martial—M. Trarieux, a Former Minister of Justice, Testifies Strongly in Favor of the Prisoner—Examination of the Secret Dossier.

Rennes, Sept. 5.—M. Cernuschi, the political refugee and reputed scion of Servian royalty, who appeared yesterday before the Dreyfus court martial as a witness for the prosecution, was not examined by the court during the time it sat behind closed doors on this, the second day of the fifth week of Captain Dreyfus' trial on the charge of treason in communicating army secrets to a foreign government. Examination of the secret dossier was the sole occupation of the court during its sitting in camera, the decision having been reached, probably in view of the message telegraphed here by General de Gallifet, Minister of War, to hear the rest of Cernuschi's evidence in open court. When the open session of the court martial began M. Labori presented a formal application to the court for an order upon Major Carriere, the Government Commissary, to request that interested foreign Governments, through diplomatic channels, communicate to the court various documents relating to the bordereau. M. Labori explained the purpose of the application by citing the fact that the court was now in an extremely delicate situation and added that he had pointed out to Major Carriere, Col. Schwartzkoppen and Signor Panizzardi was witnesses he deemed necessary to summon. M. Labori said he thought this step would worry nobody and that it was in conformity with precedents.

Carriere Objects.

Maj. Carriere replied that he did not think the Government would ask another Government for the restoration of documents. He suggested that the defence should obtain and submit the papers semi officially to the court. He saw no objection to hearing Colonel Schwartzkoppen and Signor Panizzardi if they consented to come.

M. Paleologue said that while M. Labori's request appeared quite logical and just, there were diplomatic considerations which made it inadmissable for the Government to take such initiative as was proposed by counsel for defence.

Colonel Jouaust said the court would decide the matter later, and meanwhile proceed with the taking of evidence.

Prosecution's Trump Card.

Rennes, Sept. 5.—Yesterday was a day of dramatic events in connection with the Dreyfus trial. The prosecution played trump card by producing a new witness named Eugene Cernuschi, who is said to be a scion of the Servian royal house.

His deposition, in a single sentence, amount to this: That in June, 1894, he became acquainted with Col. Schneider, the Austrian military attache at Paris, who, at their first meeting, volunteered the information that Dreyfus and three other officers of the French army whom the witness had not yet named, were a band of traitors, who systematically supplied the enemies with all the military secrets of France.

Schneider a Fool.

A month later, according to the witness, Colonel Schneider opened an envelope in his presence, and took therefrom plans for the mobilization of the French army at the same time explaining that they came from Dreyfus. The witness added that he told this story to French agents after Dreyfus had been arrested, and signed a statement which was reduced to writing. He further said that this statement should now be in Government files.

Labori's Demand.

At the conclusion of his evidence Maitre Labori passionately demanded that the Government should request Austria and the other powers to furnish evidence confirming or denying these terrible allegations. There was no response to the appeal.

Nothing has been done to test the credibility of the witness, and although the prosecution has known for some time that he would testify his name has been carefully withheld from the list of witnesses.

The other dramatic feature of the evidence was an announcement by one of the headquarters underlings that there was still another secret dossier at the War Office, of which nobody had heard before. He described it as a general espionage dossier. M. Labori promptly demanded that this be produced, and later in the day the court acquiesced, ordering a secret session for the purpose tomorrow.

Fired On By Strikers.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 5.—While five men were entering the mine at Stephens' colliery at Pittston to-day for the purpose of making repairs, they were fired on by a gang of strikers. One of the men was killed, and two others injured. The mine has been idle for some time owing to a strike.

PROFIT-SHARING DECLINES.

London, Sept. 5.—Profit-sharing is not advancing by leaps and bounds in the British Empire. From a report issued by the Board of Trade, it appears that in 1898 there were eighty-five profit-sharing British firms (including colonial firms); in the previous year there were ninety-three. The number of work-people interested, however, showed a slight increase. In the case of seventeen firms no bonus was earned for the workers at all; in the case of the others the bonus worked out at about 11 per cent. on wages.

Crowded Out.

A considerable quantity of local matter is crowded out of our present issue, including reports of the meetings of the Board of Education and the Ashburnham council.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 6, 1899

TO IMPROVE OUR MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

The Municipial Convention to be held in Hamilton next week says the Herald, will be a most important gathering, and its conferences ought to be productive of far-reaching results. Perhaps no other country in the world has such a well-organised system of municipal government as that which exsist in Ontario. It forms the government nursery or kindergarten through which most of our parliamentarians pass on their way to their way to the Legislature, and it places in the hands of the people of the several municipal districts wide powers of dealing with their own local affairs. It is exceedingly important that it should be founded on sound principles and work smoothly, and it is in the interest of its perfection that the delegates will confer.

One disturbing question with which the delegates may concern themselves is that of municipal bonuses,; but recent statutory amendments have to a great extent anticipated the work of the conference in this particular and tended to prevent the abuse of the power conferred on municipalities to tax a minority against their will to bonus a private institution.

Perhaps the weakest and most inconsistent of all the municipal provisions of Ontario is the assessment system. Although a separate act it is essentially municipal in its operation, and is a most inequitable and unscientific law, a thing of shreds and patches. Perhaps when the delegates attempt the work of improving upon it they will find it easier to to begin anew than to amend it. It is by all odds the most important question likely to come before them.

The election of aldermen for a longer term than one year; election by the cumulative system of voting; payment of aldermen; boards of control; municipal financing; municipal auditing, and many other questions offer themselves, and an exchange of ideas will be beneficial. Hamilton is the prettiest city in Canada, and the delegates have done well to choose it as their place of meeting. It is to be hoped that so much good will result from their deliberations that they will decide to meet here annually to forward the cause of good municipal government.

TOO MANY DOCTORS.

The doctors assembled in convention in Toronto, last week recognise the fact that the medical profession is overcrowded. There is in Metropolitan city of this Province one qualified medical practioner to each four hundred of the population. And while the percentage throughout the province will not agerage so high, as in Toronto, it is by far too high for the comfort of the member of the profession. The overcrowding causes many of them to exhaust their energies in a mere struggle for existence, instead of having incomes which would free them from all anxiety regarding the necessaries of life for themselves and their families, and enable them to devote their powers to the calling for which they have been specially trained.

Nor is it to be supposed that the abundance of physicians results in a betterment of the physicial condition of the people. For, as Dr. Cameron, the president of the association, remarks, the struggle consequent on too great numbers results in the adoption of practices that are degrading to the medicals and injurious to the public.

The means suggested to bring the desired relief are not likely to succeed. Increasing the carriculum of studies in medical colleges has been already tried in this department, and in others, too, without materially lessening the number of matriculants or graduates.

NOTES AND COMMENT

Good morning.

Sarnia is to have a new industry in the shape of wire nail works says the Hamilton Times. Even the Canadian, which has been in the dumps ever since the Liberals succeeded to office, mingling its surprise at such a practical condradiction of its blue-ruin prophesies with a little cheerful hope.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase!" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion;

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how the mournful crocodile

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—"2, Henry VI.," 1, 182.
—"Poet's Lore."

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more hanging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproar of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

Verdict as Rendered.

"Gentlemen of the jury," asked the clerk of the court, "have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman. "The verdict of the jury is that the lawyers have mixed this case up so that we don't know anything at all about it."—Philadelphia North American.

ITALIAN TONGUE SUPPRESSED.

Agitation Against Chamberlain's Most Recent Action.

Rome, Sept. 2.—There have appeared several articles in the Italian press calling the attention of the people and the Government of Italy to the substitution which is going on in Malta of English for Italian, as the official and written language of the island.

The Liberal Stampa, of Turin, the organ of Signor Giolitti, and the Clerical Unita Cattolica, of Florence, opened the campaign, deploring that Mr. Chamberlain, by order-in-council and against the vote of the Maltese Legislative Council, is suppressing the Italian language in the tribunals of Malta and imposing new taxes on the island.

The Tribuna, of Rome, has also dedicated a leader to the "question," and the officious Popolo Romano, in a temperate article, and the opposition paper, Don Chisciotte, in stronger language, disapprove of what is being enacted in Malta.

The last-named paper demands that Italy should not leave Malta singlehanded in this struggle to retain her secular language and customs, and that an appeal should be made by Italy to England not to allow this substitution, which is called a scandal to take place.

It concludes by remarking that there is no fear that Italy will ever try to retake Malta, but Italy might discover that her friendship for England is not [illegible] appreciated to the extent of allowing a Mediterranean island to retain the Italian language.

I am informed that it is proposed to hold meetings in different cities of the peninsula on this Maltese question.

TO AID POOR DRUNKARDS.

Scheme Outlined by the Medical Association

Toronto, Sept. 2.—At the Medical Association last evening Dr. Thorburn presented the report of the special committee on the economic treatment of pauper inebriates. It decided that the Ontario Medical Association had endorsed the following scheme:

The appointment by the Provincial Government of an inspector of inebriate institutions. This inspector should be a qualified medical practitioner, who has made the medical treatment of inebriety a special study.

The inspector should organize in the city of Toronto a hospital for the treatment of pauper inebriates of the more hopeful class, and in the other cities of the Province an inebriate department in the existing general hospitals.

The inspector should also arrange in connection with such institution where inebriates are received and treated an organization or agency for the adoption of the probation system and giving a helping hand to the patient, subsequent to treatment for inebriety.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 30 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,[illegible]

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two years!

ANIMAL LIFE.

The smallest camels belong to Persia. They are not more than 30 inches high.

Animal trainers say the most intelligent animals for their purpose are the walrus, elephant, monkey, seal and sea lion. A young walrus that is bought for $500, when carefully trained is worth fully $5,000.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Sorely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 30 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wus when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be sp'iled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never forgit of I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wus only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves perticklerly on, for they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wus yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wusn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wus feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wus a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wusn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wus gittin anxious, though she wusn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 300 yards from the upper turn, and there wus no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wus Jim a-comin lickety spit. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wus comin after us wus like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let em go for all they wus wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wus fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wus comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wus.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wusn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned 'way forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there for a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wus in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wus, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wus dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wus killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hunderd pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wus, and so wus Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wus up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wus ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wus only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all these golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

THE CANADA CYCLE AND MOTOR COMPANY, Limited,

is to be incorporated under the Ontario Companies' Act to acquire as going concerns the businesses, as manufacturers and dealers in Bicycles and Bicycle Parts, now carried on by the following well known Companies:

MASSEY-HARRIS COMPANY, Limited,
H. A. LOZIER & COMPANY (Cleveland Bicycles),
WELLAND VALE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Limited,
GOOLD BICYCLE COMPANY, Limited,
GENDRON MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Limited,

including the Plant, Machinery, Tools, Stock-in-Trade, Fixtures, Patent Rights, Trade Marks, Trade Names, Copyrights, Good-will and Leaseholds of the above-named Companies in connection with their said business; and including also all the real property of H. A. Lozier & Company, and The Goold Bicycle Company, Limited.

THE COMPANIES.

The bicycle industry is one of great importance and magnitude in Canada. The constituent Companies are the leaders in the trade. Their Trade Marks and Brands are everywhere popularly known, and by reason of their world-wide reputation for unrivalled excellence some of the Companies enjoy a large and growing foreign trade which offers a favourable field for development, and which this Company proposes to extend.

The Companies give employment to about 1,700 men. Their outputs for the past year aggregated about 38,500 bicycles. The plant and machinery are of the latest and best equipment, and capable of twice that production with but small additional outlay in tools. The factory sites to be acquired by the Company are especially adapted for manufacturing purposes; have advantageous shipping facilities, and will permit of ample extensions to the existing buildings.

Each of the above-named Companies has covenanted not to engage for long periods of years in any business competing with the bicycle business of this Company.

NET EARNINGS.

The steadily progressive character of the business of the constituent Companies is shown by the following Accountants' certificate:

We certify that the combined net profits in the business of Bicycles and Bicycle Parts of the Massey-Harris Co., Limited, H. A. Lozier & Co. (Cleveland Bicycles), Welland Vale Manufacturing Co., Limited, Goold Bicycle Co., Limited, and Gendron Manufacturing Co., Limited, for the past three years, are as follows:—

1897-8 - - - -	$304,907.03
1898-9 - - - -	$330,115.35

ADVANTAGES.

Amongst the advantages to be gained by this amalgamation of interests, the following may be enumerated:—

FIRSTLY—Reduction in selling and distribution expenses and advertising.
SECONDLY—The economies and improvements in production arising from the practical knowledge of the members forming the Board of Directors, which will be available for each branch of the business.
THIRDLY—The economies due to consolidation of management, manufactories, office work, and of buying, distributing, and financial arrangements.

The Directors are fully alive to the desirability of conserving the individuality and initiative of the various businesses, and will not allow consolidation to act detrimentally in these matters, but there are obvious advantages to be gained, as, for example, in buying in large quantities in the best markets, in the supply of ample capital, and in the manufacture of a large output of high-grade wheels at prices to meet the demands of the public.

MANAGEMENT.

The Management of the Company will be in the hands of experienced manufacturers, who have been identified with the leading bicycle companies of Canada in the past, and have made a success of the business.

WORKING CAPITAL.

The Company will commence business without any bonded or mortgage debt and with a working capital in excess of $1,000,000, exclusive of the additional capital available from the issue of the Preference Stock in the treasury ($500,000).

DIVIDENDS.

The Preference Shares shall confer the right to a fixed cumulative preferential dividend of 7 per cent. per annum accruing from the date of payment by subscribers, to be provided for out of the net earnings of the Company before any dividends are paid upon the common stock, and the further right to repayment of capital in priority to the common stock, but they will not be entitled to further participation in profits or assets.

If in any one year dividends amounting to 7 per cent. are not paid on the preference stock the deficiency shall be a first charge upon the net earnings of the Company and shall be paid subsequently before any dividend is paid upon or set apart for the common stock.

Dividends will be payable half-yearly on the 1st days of May and November, or such other half-yearly dates as the Directors may determine.

RESERVE ACCOUNT.

The Charter of the Company will provide that 25 per cent. of the balance of the net earnings, after payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on the Preference Stock, shall be annually transferred to a reserve account in the books of the Company, the better to secure to the Preferred Shareholders the payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on their preferred shares, and such annual transfers shall be continued until the amount of said account reaches $500,000, at which sum it is to be maintained, and if it is at any time drawn upon it is to be in like manner restored and maintained.

The amount required to pay 7 per cent. on the preference stock already taken by the Directors and that now offered to the public being $175,000, it is considered that such dividends are amply assured, and the above reserve account of $500,000 has been stipulated for in order that the position of the preferred shares may be rendered independent of any possible contingency.

AUTOMOBILES.

It is intended that an important part of the Company's undertaking will be the manufacture and sale of motors and motor vehicles. This branch of business is a natural outgrowth of the Bicycle industry, and is believed to offer a profitable investment for the capital and the large and successful experience in manufacturing which this Company will command.

Arrangements have been made to have the books of the Company regularly audited by Chartered Accountants.

Application will be made in due course to have the stock of the Company listed upon the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges.

$2,000,000 7 per cent. Preference Stock in the above Company will be offered for public subscription at PAR on WEDNESDAY, the 6TH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1899, payable as follows: 5 per cent. on application and the balance of 95 per cent. on allotment. The right is reserved to reject or reduce any application, and subscription carries with it an agreement to accept such reduced amount. The failure to make payment when due forfeits the previous payment. In case no allotment is made the amount deposited on application will be returned.

Subscription Lists will open at the chief offices of the National Trust Company, Limited, Toronto and Montreal, and at the Head Office and Branches of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, the 6th September, '99, and close at 3 o'clock on the following day.

Forms of Power of Attorney to subscribe may be had on application to any branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, or to

BIG CONSERVATIVE RALLY.

An Offset to Sir Richard Cartwright to be Sounded at the Fair Grounds.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—As an offset to the Sir Richard Cartwright meeting in Massey Hall, local Conservatives are arranging for a big gathering of the faithful for a mass meeting to be held on Sept. 18th, the anniversary of the carrying of the N. P. in 1878.

The meeting, which is to be held under the auspices of the Ward Six Conservative Association, of which Mr. A. Claude Macdonald is president, will take place in the Exhibition grand stand or one of the other large buildings. Arrangements are being made for an unusual attendance. Special railway rates are being obtained in order to enable Ontario members of both Houses to be present—which would seem a needless trouble, as all the members have passes and can travel free.

The star speaker of the evening will be Hon. George E. Foster. Mr. Whitney will also be present and possibly Mr. Hugh John Macdonald. Hon. N. Clarke Wallace will not be present, as he leaves on September 7th for the Pacific Coast.

OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on the alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was "out after elephants" and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fell the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

RAILROAD TIES.

It is proposed to construct a railway in French Guinea.

Khartum will be reached by the railroad by November next, barring accidents. The railroad is now 60 miles south of the Atbara river.

The original capital of the Pennsylvania railroad was $350,000. The system on its fifty-third birthday represented an investment of $900,000,000. Last year it carried 71,000,000 passengers.

An "improvement" introduced by the Great Eastern railway, England, consists in widening the cars to the limit of safety in order to allow six passengers to wedge themselves into one seat.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. ANOTHER GOOD DAY FOR THE PRISONER.

A Witness in His Behalf Confronted by One of the Generals To-day, But Sticks to His Story.

INFORMATION REGARDING THE ARMY EASILY GOT

Possibility of Others Than Artillery Officers Getting Information Discussed. Major Hartmann Declares the Writer Ignorant of Artillery Matters.

Rennes, Sept. 2.—At the Dreyfus court martial to-day Major Hartmann, a defence witness, resumed his testimony regarding artillery matters, and bringing out points and phraseology in the bordereau, indicating that the writer could not be Dreyfus.

The witness wished to enter into the question of the Robin shell, but on Gen. Deloye objecting to a statement on the subject in open court, it was decided to hear this part in secret.

Replying to defence counsel, Major Hartmann said any officer attending the Chalons camp could have obtained sufficient information to write notes on the covering of troops and Madagascar matters.

Dreyfus' Witness Contradicted.

M. Labori then recalled Gen. Mercier's denial of Capt. Freystatter's declaration that the secret dossier contained a document concerning a shell, and Major Hartmann affirmed that it was quite possible that particulars about this shell should have leaked out in 1894.

Gen. Deloye declared he did not believe the Major was keeping strictly to the truth and proceeded to point out inaccuracities in Major Hartmann's testimony. He insisted that Dreyfus, in the course of conversations with artillery officers, could have secured information on the subjects mentioned in the bordereau.

The Major retorted that if any artillery officer had been questioned by Dreyfus he would already have come forward to say so, as a matter of strict duty.

Gen. Deloye said the inventor of the Robin shell told him Dreyfus never asked him for particulars about his shell, except on a minor point. The General added that he came as a technical witness to show that Dreyfus could be guilty. He could only say that Dreyfus' contention that it was impossible for him to know certain matters referred to in the bordereau was untrue.

M. Labori asked Gen. Deloye if he knew whether the documents which could have been betrayed by the traitor, especially by the writer of the bordereau were important, whereupon the General turned to counsel and excitedly cried: "Don't ask me! Don't ask me!"

These exclamations created a sensation in court, which was doubled when Gen. Deloye added that there was sufficient in the bordereau to establish that the traitor knew the importance of the documents he was giving up. The witness said: "When I read the bordereau I was dismayed."

Major Hartmann, in reply to Gen. Deloye, reiterated that the author of the bordereau was ignorant of artillery matters.

"For," the Major pointed out, "if he meant the 120 hydraulic brake he gave particulars of what was long known, while if he meant the 120 short, he employed a wrong expression."

Hartmann's Evidence Weakened.

Gen. Mercier here mounted the stage and remarked that the writer of the bordereau might very well employ the term hydraulic brake, because that was the term used by the Germans for such brakes. This ended the deposition of Major Hartmann, who certainly was a very valuable witness for the defence, although the effect of his testimony was somewhat weakened by Gen. Deloye's statement in reply to M. Labori.

Blames Esterhazy.

The next witness, M. Navet, a member of the Institution took up the bordereau from a grammatical point of view, declaring it to be his conviction, after studying closely the styles of Dreyfus and Esterhazy, that the latter wrote it. The witness entered into an interesting analysis of the phraseology of the bordereau, pointing out that certain phrases in it were met with in Esterhazy's letters, but never in those of Dreyfus.

The letters exchanged between Col. Picquart and Gen. Gonse at the time the Colonel wanted a thorough investigation into the case, were then read, and M. Labori pointed out to Gen. Gonse that these letters never alluded to the alleged confession of Dreyfus.

Gen. Gonse replied that it was because he always advised Col. Picquart not to mix up the Esterhazy and Dreyfus cases. Dreyfus, he added, had been condemned, and his case could not be re-opened, but they were bound to see if there were not another traitor.

Letters Given Away.

The General then made a bitter complaint at the fact that his letters had been communicated to M. Scheurer-Kestner, former Vice-President of the Senate, who published them in a book entitled "Pontius Pilate."

Replying to M. Labori, Gen. Gonse insisted that Dreyfus having been condemned, it was not his duty to go back to his case.

A scene between Gen. Gonse and Col. Picquart followed. The latter, being called, said he gave Gen. Gonse's letters to his lawyer, when he realised that he was to be the object of abominable intrigues, and when he received in Tunis a letter of threats from the late Lt.-Col. Henry, sent with the assent of Generals Gonse and De Boisdeffre. Col. Picquart added that he was not responsible for the subsequent publication of the letters.

In reply, Gen. Gonse said he had not given his consent to Henry's letter, and that Col. Picquart perceived machinations against him everywhere.

Picquart then declared that he showed him the secret dossier. Therefore, he claimed, Gen. Gonse could easily have acquainted himself with the probability that Dreyfus was innocent.

Picquart's Letters Opened.

M. Labori then took Gen. Gonse in hand on the subject of tampering with Col. Picquart's correspondence, while the Colonel was in Tunis, and Gonse admitted that one letter was opened, and that the words of this letter were used in forging the telegram which was intended to destroy the value of the petit bleu. The General insisted, however that only suspected letters addressed to Col. Picquart were opened. Picquart replied emphatically that all of his letters were opened.

Proof Against Dreyfus.

Counsel then questioned General Gonse on the subject of the late Col. Henry's forgery and the General replied that he considered it an unfortunate manoeuvre against Dreyfus, and not against Picquart. Henry desired to furnish fresh proof against Dreyfus of which there was really no need, the witness added, as the diplomatic dossier contained sufficient proofs.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. E. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Mrs. Driver—You're hungry, eh? What are you, anyway? A professional tramp, I suppose.

Roads Walker—No, lady, I'm not a professional. Only an ammytoor, lady. I never ask for money. Something to eat and drink is all I have ever entered fer yet.

A FAITHFUL DOG.

Its Owner Realized Its Worth, as Well He Might.

"Well, I wouldn't have believed it," exclaimed Jones in astonishment as he dropped in to see Smith the other evening and was met in the hall by a St. Bernard dog.

"Wouldn't have believed what?" asked Smith.

"Why, that you'd have a dog in your house," continued Jones. "It belongs to one of your neighbors, I suppose?"

"No, sir; that's my dog," replied Smith proudly.

"You don't really mean it, old man? Why, I've known you now for five years, and you've always had a marked aversion for dogs."

"Yes, I did have until lately, but I wouldn't be without one now. This brute is a noble, faithful fellow, and I wouldn't take $100 spot cash for'—

But at this juncture he was interrupted by his wife calling down over the banister:

"Henry Smith, who was it that scattered these cigar ashes all over my dresser?"

"It must have been the dog, my dear," was his reply.

"And who was it that dropped these apple peelings on the floor?" she demanded.

"The dog, my dear," answered Smith.

"And there's a bottle of mucilage spilled on the hall carpet up here too. Is that some of your work, Henry?"

"No, my dear; the dog's to blame for that."

"And, goodness gracious," she continued angrily, "if some one hasn't been whittling up here again! How many times have I told you not to do that in the house?"

"But I had nothing to do with it, my dear. The dog's been up there probably chewing a stick."

"Well, it's a burning shame the way this house is mussed up. Your collars and ties are scattered all over the rooms."

"Are they, my dear? That dog's been up there again then. Yes," continued Smith as he drew his friend into the parlor, "I wouldn't take a big pot of money for that dog. Why, the noble fellow saves me about 20 jawings a week."

"So I see," chuckled Jones, "and you bet I'll have one before noon tomorrow."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Philadelphia North American.

The Unattainable One.

THE HORSE REVIEW.

Robert B, 2:14¼ trotting and 2:12 pacing, stands 17½ hands high.

Harry Pennington, 2:15½, is on the road at Philadelphia, being driven by Tom Tunney.

Notwithstanding his severe lameness last season, Hans McGregor, 2:11¼, is reported in first rate form.

The Toledo Driving club will employ a regular starting judge this year, J. T. Dewey having been chosen.

Cora Tell, a 3-year-old filly by Axtell, out of Cora Belle, pole record 2:19¼, has been bred to Margrave, 2:15½, and will be trained this season.

Irish Lassie, 2:16, the pride of the Hawaiian Islands, is being prepared at Honolulu for the June races. She is being trained by Jack Gibson.

It is said that Henry Fleischman will bring Derby Princess, 2:08¼, back from Austria. She has not done well since leaving Henry Sanders' stable.

Valney French has signed another year's contract with C. H. Anthony, Muncie, Ind., and will remove to that city. He will handle about 16 matinee horses for the local club.

W. B. Fisk, Coldwater, Mich., who owns Great Heart, 2:12½, has sold Latitude, 2:15, to Mr. Johnson, Hubbard, O. Latitude is a great knee actor and may appear later in a bangtail costume.

George Dougherty, who trained Marion Mills, the late guideless pacing queen, has been engaged by E. R. Bulkley, Philadelphia, to educate the chestnut mare Lizzie Meyers and the bay mare Ravenwood to do the guideless act.

Helen K, 2:18¾, and mate, May K, who won the blue ribbon in the class for pairs to wagon at Boston horse show, are owned by W. M. V. Hoffman, New York. Helen was purchased by her present owner from the Forest City farm, Cleveland, and is a daughter of Patron.—Horseman.

FUNSTON AND HIS MEN.

General Funston has been in the swim.—Boston Herald.

Hail to General Funston, the unosculated Hobson of the orient!—Detroit Free Press.

Ten to one, when Aguinaldo gets his last ditch ready, that man Funston will be on hand to swim it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

General Fred Funston, the Kansas cyclone in the tropics, is not a Chicago man. He didn't stop to boil the water.—Omaha Bee.

Judging by the elegant fight he puts up, Fred Funston must have been a member of some Kansas church choir.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Twentieth Kansas is showing itself ambitious, ambidextrous and amphibious. It is right in the swim all the time.—Topeka Capital.

General Funston can have anything he wants in Kansas when he gets home, even Jerry Simpson's socks, if he can find them.—St. Paul Globe.

We will soon be hearing from the chaps who attended swimming school with General Fred Funston and tied knots in his clothes.—Washington Post.

General Luna is the first to see the sea serpent this season. Some observers say it was the Kansas regiment using a rope for a ferry.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

No wonder the Twentieth Kansas volunteers have invariably swept the Filipinos before them. Their battlecry is the Kansas university football yell of "Rock chalk! Jayhawk! K. S. U.!"—St. Louis Republic.

THE CYNIC.

All of us are very clever in finding excuses for not working more.

The most sensible woman will "put on" a little before a preacher.

A man is not really prominent until he has officiated at three prominent funerals.

Some women who never work for anything else will work like slaves for a church.

An old maid dearly loves to watch a quarrel between a husband and wife to see how it comes out.

If a man truly loves his wife, he is very apt to become confidential and tell her a lot of stories on the other fellows.

In talking it is well to know that people will not remember what you are saying unless they can use it against you.

A man always rises in his own estimation when he gets on familiar terms with a person of whom he once stood in awe.

There probably never was a woman too good to try to pass her children off as under age when traveling on the railroad.—Atchison Globe.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Peacocks are reliable weather prophets. Before a storm the gaudy birds become restless and clamorous.

The green woodpecker is said to laugh his "Ya-ha-ha" in different, more liquid tones when rain is coming, and especially gifted persons claim his cry really changes to "rain, rain, rain!"

In Dorsetshire, England, they foretell storms by the flight of the rooks. When they are pitch falling or playing at tumbling, diving and wheeling in the air, they say a storm is due.

Sea fowl are very clever in foretelling a storm. To a sailor bad weather means wind, and to a landsman it means rain, but the screaming of the water birds usually foretells a change of some sort for the worse in the prevailing weather.

SISTERLY CITIES.

Minneapolis has lost a dam, but then the town was never worth one.—St. Paul Dispatch.

What is being done for art in Chicago is not much. What is being done for art by Chicago is infinitely less.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

If the New York gas war keeps on at its present rate of progress, consumers will soon get the stuff for nothing, with a chromo and a pound of tea thrown in.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

New Yorkers are talking of having a self propelling fire engine. Come up this way, neighbors, and see what the metropolis of Connecticut can show you in that line. You're years behind us.—Hartford Courant.

FOUL TIPS.

For Sale—One baseball team. Answers to the name of "Giants." Any offer will be accepted.—New York Herald.

The ex-prides of Von der Ahe haven't as yet had their batting eyes forwarded from St. Louis.—Cleveland Leader.

As in previous years, the Washington team, as a matter of strict courtesy, will be known as a baseball club.—Chicago Record.

Wake Up! You are an energetic man—an ambitious one. But it is hard to get up in the morning. You feel that you could take just one more nap, and one more and still more. Your head is heavy. You hate to get up. Your mouth tastes bad. Your breakfast does not suit, and you are irritable. When you go to work you don't feel like it. You fight the feeling all day, and a couple of hours before closing time you turn in and work like a good fellow. When it's time to stop, you are just warmed up for a six day's go-as-you-please. But it is too late, and the next morning it is the same thing over again.

That isn't laziness—it's sickness—real, serious sickness. And later it will develop into something worse—liver trouble, consumption, blood disease, or nervous prostration. There is a remedy that will put you on your feet—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It will wake up your stomach, give you an appetite, and put vim in your blood. It will make a new man of you. It contains no alcohol and will not create appetite for stimulants.

Mr. Charles Hunwick, of Lenox, Macomb Co., Mich., writes: "I have never felt better in my life than I do now. I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery right along. I can now walk quite well with a cane and hope to throw even that away before long, and as I have had to use crutches for nearly two years. I think I am doing fine. I do not cough now and I can sleep like a school boy. I have been treated in two hospitals and by three doctors besides, and received no benefit; so I think your medicine is the only medicine for me."

Do not let any one induce you to take a substitute in place of "Golden Medical Discovery." Buy of reliable dealers. With tricky ones, something else that pays them better will probably be offered as "just as good." Perhaps it is for them; but it can't be for you.

Mr. Richardson Returns.

Mr. Isaac Richardson of Millbrook, who was extensively advertised by a number of newspapers, has returned to his home in Millbrook. As the Times stated, when the report first appeared in a local contemporary, Mr. Richardson was the last man to leave under a cloud. He simply was away on a holiday trip. It is more than probable that heavy damages will be demanded from the papers who published that he left the country. The Times is requested to state that Mr. Richardson will continue his business as drover.

Cheeky, Very Cheeky.

A man went into one of our town hotels yesterday, and asked the propietor for some envelopes and note paper which he received, and then asked to have two letters written for him, which was done; he then asked for two stamps which were also given him. Then he asked the propietor to have a cigar, handing 5 cents, saying he did not smoke himself. When asked for the price of the stamps he exclaimed: "I have bought you a cigar, and that ought to be enough." How is that for cheek?

Death of Daniel Hopkins.

The funeral took place on Monday, of the late Mr. Daniel Copeland Hopkins, youngest son of the late Daniel Hopkins and only surviving brother of Mrs. (Hon.) Geo. A. Cox, of Toronto. The deceased was 48 years of age and had resided in Smith since his removal from Peterborough, where he formerly resided. Mr. Hopkins for some years back has been in declining health, but his death was unexpectedly sudden, although a hemorrhage in April last had placed his health in a precarious condition. The funeral [illegible] were conducted by Rev. A. J. Sharey, the pall-bearers being Messrs. Geo. E. Elliott, Jas. Davidson, Ed. Graham, J. G. Armstrong, J. Brownlee and Thos. T. Milburn. Hon. Senator Cox, Mrs. Cox and three sons, of Toronto, were in town attending the funeral.

PROMINENT MEN LOCKED UP.

Mr. John Green and Detective Ross Deprived of Their Liberty.

A peculiar experience took place yesterday afternoon by which Mr. John Greer, barrister, and Detective Ross of the C.P.R., were deprived of their liberty for a short time. It appears that these two gentlemen called at Judge Edmison's office, and in the absence of the magistrate were shown in his private room and told to be seated until Mr. Edmison's return, which the clerk said, would not be long. They waited probably an hour, and they decided to take their departure. When they reached the outer door, they found to their horror that the clerk had gone and locked them in.

They vainly tried the door, and afterwards the windows, but all to no purpose. Mr. Greer, it is said, even attempted to escape by way of a small transom, but the opening was not sufficiently large. Finally, after consulting together, they decided to make one more dash for liberty or death, and plunge from a window, but just as they were figuring out which of the two would constitute the forlorn hope, they espied a telephone, and the fire brigade were asked to send the hook and ladder department around. This, however, was not necessary as a key was found that opened the door to liberty. Mr. Greer says that there should be a law passed making fire escapes from lawyers offices.

SPORTNG ITEMS.

Baseball.

The Park Nine who went to Lindsay on Labor Day and played a match with the Lindsay Seconds, were beaten by a score of 32 runs to 7.

Two excellent games between the Oshawa and Peterborough nines were played on Labor Day. The morning game was won by the local men by a score of 12 to 5 and an innings, but was defeated in the afternoon, the score being 13 to 9 in favor of the visitors.

Lacrosse.

Hastings lacrosse team is in the finals for the junior championship, having won from Cannington, Labor Day, by the big score of seven to nothing. Mr. Alf. Terrill was referee. The Hastings team played a strong game and being on their own grounds had a decided advantage. This was the last of the semi-final games and the village team will meet Stouffville for the final struggle. They have strong hopes of landing the championship.

A Chance for Investment.

Among the opportunities for investment which have recently been offered to the Canadian public, none has had more attractive features than the seven per cent. cumulative preference stock of the Canadian Cycle and Motor Company, of which two million dollar's worth are now open for subscription at the Toronto and Montreal offices of the National Trust Company and at the head offices and branches of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. People who have been forced to content themselves with the three per cent. allowed on bank deposits are now able to place their money at seven per cent. in a security which possesses the highest commercial value in stability and solidity. The leading bicycle manufacturers of Canada, whose businesses, absorbed by the new concern, have been together with the accompanying goodwill, patents and franchises, have been rewarded for their skill and enterprise by large and increasing profits. The immense economics to be effected by combination will still further increase the returns upon the invested capital, and thus raise the value of the shares. The president of the new company is Mr. Walter E. H. Massey of the Massey-Harris Company, the vice-president, Senator George A. Cox, and these gentlemen are assisted by a thoroughly competent board. If any assurance of provident and skillful management were required it is furnished by the character of the men who control the new organization.

Why Cheese is High.

The reasons for the rapid advance in in the price of cheese are numerous. The excellence of the Canadian cheese has become known in the British market, and the article is in great demand. There was very little cheese in stock in England last fall. This year has not been a good year for the manufacture of the article in England, on account of an unusually dry season. All these and other reasons have combined to advance prices to the present good figure. A peculiar thing is that although so far this year less cheese have been marketed in Montreal than up to this time last year, still owing to the advanced state of the market the returns have been greater.

Ten New and Original Songs Which Can Be Had Free.

What will the great metropolitan papers do next? This is the question some one asks nearly every day. But there is one which leads all others. It has gained the sobriquet of "America's Newspaper" by just such remarkable pieces of the enterprise as the one which has just now attracted the attention of the press all over the country.

Last week the New York Sunday World announced that it would give away an album of new and original music, consisting of ten of the up-to-date class of songs that are now so popular, such as songs of sentiment, "coon" songs, "cakewalks," etc. These ten songs the Sunday World proposes to distribute one each week, with every copy of the Sunday World. When it is considered that the average price of new music, written and composed by popular authors, is from 30 to 45 cents, the unparalleled enterprise of The World in giving the song away with a big Sunday newspaper, for which only 5 cents is charged, is apparent. The World requests that we publish the following announcement:

A Music Album free. From Sept. 3 to Nov. 5, the Sunday World will issue weekly a song in sheet music form, with handsome colored covers. The entire set will be mailed, postage paid, for [illegible] received after Sept. 3 will get the back numbers and each new number issued. Besides the song, The World will also send its colored Art Portfolio, which is a marvel of journalism; its Sunday Magazine, which equals the monthly periodicals, and its Comic Weekly, which exceeds every comic weekly in the United States except two, and in its comic scope equals these two 10-cent publications.

Write a postal card to the Sunday World Music Editor, Pulitzer Building, N.Y., for a list of the songs.

Tory Organizer Here.

Mr. Thad. W. H. Leavitt, late acting Inspector of Customs, has resigned that position, and been appointed to the post of organizer of the Conservative party. For several days Mr. Leavitt has been in town looking after the party interests and no doubt will enthuse new life into the old and young Conservatives of this county. He is the right man for the job, being a strong party man with an abundance of experience, having at one time been the editor of a Conservative paper. Mr. Leavitt is well known in Cobourg, having been in charge of the Cobourg Customs House prior to the appointment of Mr. G. F. Jones. From the distressing condition of the Conservative party in this riding we predict that Mr. Leavitt will earn his salary while here.—Lindsay Post.

SOUTH BEACH PICNIC.

Highly Successful Gathering at Young's Point on Labor Day.

The picnic in aid of the Roman Catholic church at Young's Point, held on Monday at South Beach, the property of Major Bellasis, about half a mile above the Point, was like all the events of such character that have been held in the parish of Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, a genuine success. The attendance was large, the weather was delightful and pleasure seemed to abound. An important consideration is that it was a success financially and thus was satisfactory to the parishioners as well as to the visitors.

The people from Lakefield and the Point and the vicinity thereof were present in large numbers but the town of Peterborough was also well represented. A considerable number went up on the morning train but the majority left by the twelve o'clock train, which left at one o'clock. There were about three hundred in all from town or perhaps more. The passengers were transported from Lakefield to the picnic grounds by the steamer Majestic, Mr. Young, the proprietor, having generously placed it at the disposal of the committee. The sail from Lakefield and return was pleasant and not too long.

South Beach is a delightful spot for a picnic, commanding a beautiful view up Clear Lake. The visitors were much pleased with this feature and praised it highly. It also affords good facilities for sport both by land and water.

Meals were served in the large building on the grounds and were both appetising and satisfying. Dancing was carried on all day and a large number of the young people diverted themselves with it.

Among the visitors present were Rev. Father Maguire, of Hastings, Rev. Father McColl, of Ennismore, Rev. Father Jas. O'Sullivan, of town, Mr. Jas. Kendry, M. P., and Mrs. Kendry. Mr. Geo. McHugh, M.P., of South Victoria, and Mr. George Fitzgerald, county councillor.

DOWNEYVILLE.

(Correspondent of the Times.)

Mr. Taylor, the well known organ agent and repairer, of Peterborough, accompanied by Mr. J. D. Thornton, of Omemee, paid a flying visit to Downeyville friends one day last week and during their short stay there Mr. Taylor repaired an organ at the village which does much credit to Mr. Taylor's work, and we hope to see him in this neighborhood often in the future.

BETHANY.

Correspondence to the Times.

Harvesting operations are about over in this section. With the exception of wheat everything else is a abundant crop, with peas above the average. The rain, which has been so much needed, has come at last and will assure a fairly good root crop.

Dr. C. H. Brereston and family returned home from a months' outing at Stoney Lake, where the doctor went in search of health. He reports himself somewhat improved.

We regret the departure from our village of one of our most respected young men, in the person of Harry Griffin, who has been employed in the general store of Ivory and Sons for the last six years. By his upright, honorable conduct he has gained the respect of the entire community as a worker in the Sabbath School, and in connection with the work of the English church, of which he is a worthy member, he will be very much missed. Harry has secured a good position in one of the leading stores in Lindsay at a largely increased salary. While we regret his departure, we wish him the best success possible in his new home. What is our loss is Lindsay's gain.

Wesley Lee, son of our townsman, John Lee, Esq., who is occupying the position of head clerk for the past three years in a large drug house in one of our western towns, returned to spend a few days in the old home, and his many friends are pleased to welcome him again to the village.

All Indications in Britain Are That the Cloud is About to Burst.

PAUL KRUGER'S REPLY.

Admits Britain's Right to Protect Her Subjects But Denies Her Suzeranity.

The Signs Are All Those Which the English Are Accustomed to See Just Previous to War—All Depends Upon the Cabinet Meeting—An Ultimatum Probable.

London, Sept. 6.—This morning's news sheds no new light on the Transvaal crisis.

The signs which the English are accustomed to see just previous to a war continue.

General opinion tends to the belief that the Cabinet Council will result in an ultimatum, followed by an immediate backdown on the part of the Boers or the commencement of hostilities by Great Britain.

The Pall Mall Gazette to-day says:—"It is feared that during the past 24 hours the probability of war has become appreciably greater."

But unless the Boers take the initiative, which at present is improbable, it is pretty certain that the issue of peace or war lies solely in the result of Friday's Cabinet Council, hence public attention is centered more upon the signs of the times as exhibited at the army stations and dock yards, than in the South Africa itself.

It is reported this afternoon that Mr. Chamberlain has sent a reply to the Transvaal Government's latest proposition, but it seems improbable that Mr. Chamberlain has done this.

The Times publishes a despatch from Newcastle, Natal' which says that during yesterday's debate in the Raad regarding the proximity of British troops to the Transvaal territory, Herr Delarey, a member of the Raad, said: "The Boers only require half a day's notice to fight."

The correspondent of the Times, continuing, says: "Many conclude that the defiant tone of the speeches are not unconnected with the fact that the Mauser ammunition which had been stopped at Delagoa Bay, has now been received. The Pretoria Government admits that a consignment of cannon is now on its way from France. It is the evident aim of the Boers to secure [illegible] and water are plentiful, the burghers fully recognizing that a peaceful settlement of the difficulty is out of the question.

Kruger's Reply.

Pretoria, Sept. 6.—The latest reply of the Transvaal Republic to the British demands has been published.

Regret is expressed that the proposals of Great Britain are unacceptable. The Transvaal Government admits Great Britain's rights under the convention and international law to protect her subjects, but denies a claim of suzerainty.

The reply agrees to a further conference regarding the franchise representation.

CHICAGO'S FETE.

Lord Minto and Sir Wilfrid Expected to Decorate the Event.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—The corner stone of the new Federal building will be laid on October 10 by President McKinley and a Supreme Court justice will give an oration.

The parade will be headed by President McKinley and President Dias of Mexico, and others in carriages will be the Governor-General of Canada, Lord Minto, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Admiral Dewey and General Miles.

At night there will be a banquet, at which President McKinley, Lord Minto and Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be among the speakers.

Stabbed With a Pin.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—A peculiar complaint was made to the police yesterday. A young man from Western Ontario left his seat in the grand stand to get an article for his mother, who sat beside him. While passing out of the row of seats a middle-aged woman, exceptionally well dressed, and wearing valuable jewellry, drew a hat pin from her bonnet and stabbed the boy in the thigh. The pin reached the bone, and several young men who sat beside the woman witnessed the act of cruelty, and summoning a policeman, demanded the woman's arrest. The policeman took the woman's name and address. The boy was taken to the ambulance tent where the pain was relieved by an injection of morphine.

A TILT BETWEEN COUNSEL AND JUDGE

Three Witnesses Against Captain Dreyfus, and His Counsel Waxes Wrath and Rants.

COLONEL PICQUART IS NOT AN ANGEL.

Colonel Paty du Cam Falls to Give the Expected Good Evidence for the Prisoner. Report That Labori Wishes to Retire from the Case.

Rennes, Sept. 6.—Two hours were spent behind closed doors hearing the testimony of De Cernuski, the Servian refugee and witness for the prosecution, the length of whose examination was the subject of much remark, as being indicative of the fact that the court found this witness to be worthy of more consideration than the correspondents supposed he deserved.

The largest audience yet assembled was present when the opening session began. Senator Trarieux, former Minister of Justice, took up the testimony of Savignaud, the witness for the prosecution, who had claimed to have seen letters addressed to M. Scheurer-Kestner, formerly a vice president of the Senate, by Lieut.-Col. Picquart, while Savignaud was Picquart's orderly in Tunis.

Called Him a Perjurer.

Trarieux declared that Savignaud was a perjurer, and that two officers visited Savignaud before the court-martial opened and drilled Savignaud on the testimony he was to give.

Savignaud reiterated the truth of his previous testimony.

Col. Picquart repeated his denial of Savignaud's story.

M. Trarieux said the petit bleu was authentic and commented upon the questionable role played by Commandant Lauth in the affair.

Picquart Accused of Fraud.

Commandant Lauth declared that he had acted honestly throughout, and that he had not the least doubt of Lt.-Col. Picquart's falsification of the petit bleu in order to incriminate Major Esterhazy.

Commandant Lauth asserted that Lt.-Col. Picquart had always showed the greatest contempt for the officers of his bureau, and on one occasion brought to the general staff, in the presence of Madame Henry and Lauth, a woman, Madame D——, who was the wife of a magistrate, and Picquart's mistress.

Col. Picquart arose and cried: "I protest absolutely."

At the same time there arose from the spectators a chorus of indignant cries of O! Canaille! Cochon! and Miserable!

Prosecution of Picquart.

Gen. Zurlinden, formerly Minister of War, spoke in justification of his prosecution of Col. Picquart, taking the ground that the measure was absolutely necessary in order that the court should clear up the charge of forgery brought against Picquart. Moreover Gen. Zurlinden said, the Minister of Justice had persuaded him to send Col. Picquart before a military court.

M. Trarieux replied to Gen. Zurlinden, reproaching him with Col. Picquart's ten months in prison.

Col. Jouaust, president of the court-martial, said that the court was engaged in the trial of Dreyfus and not of the Picquart affair.

M. Labori, however, insisted, taking the ground that the petite bleu demonstrated the guilt of Major Esterhazy, and that consequently it was very important for Dreyfus.

The Petit Bleu Authentic.

Gen. Zurlinden admitted that the magisterial enquiry showed that the petit bleu was not tampered with when it first arrived at the Intelligence Department, and that consequently Picquart could not have been guilty of distorting the document.

M. Paleologue, the expert of the Foreign Office, admitted the existence of a document establishing the authenticity of the petit bleu. this document recounted a conversation between Premier Delcasse and Count Von Munster-Ledenburg, German Minister to Paris, wherein Count Von Munster-Ledeburg said Col. Schwartzkoppen admitted that he sent Major Esterhazy a number of telegraphic cards of petits bleu.

M. Paleologue said the document belonged to the diplomatic dossier, and he believed it was sent by Colonel Schwartzkoppen.

This Witness a Defence Counsel.

M. Trarieux again entered upon a long statement, in the course of which he said Major Esterhazy was acquitted, not judged.

Col. Jouaust stopped M. Trarieux, saying he must not speak that way of judges.

M. Trarieux replied that he had not referred to judges, but to La Chose Jugee.

Col. Jouaust then pointed out that M. Trarieux was taking M. Labori's place, and making a regular speech for the defence.

Gen. Billot declared that M. Trarieux had delivered an eloquent oration, but that it was special pleading for Dreyfus and Picquart, and an arraignment of former Ministers.

Lost Confidence in Picquart.

Gen. Billot praised Col. Picquart for his services in the army, and declared that he had the greatest confidence in him—a confidence, which, however, he had since been compelled to withdraw. Then, investigating Picquart's investigations of the suspicions against Major Esterhazy, Gen. Billot said: 'Even if Esterhazy should be proved a traitor, that would not prove Dreyfus innocent; for in cases of espionage it very often occurs that there are several accomplices.'

M. Labori again insisted that he be allowed to question Gen. Bilot. Col. Jouaust still refused, and a heated wrangle once more ensued. M. Labori made a passionate protest against the attitude of Col. Jouaust, who then said: "I decline to allow you to speak.

M. Labori retorted excitedly; "I bow to your ruling, but I take note that every time I put a question which is irresistable you refuse to allow it.'

This declaration counsel for defense delivered in a ringing voice, punctuating his utterance with striking gestures. The audience burst into loud applause, and the greatest excitement prevailed.

Col. Jouaust said: "If this demonstration is repeated, I will have the court room cleared. Have you anything more to say, Maitre Labori?

Labori Constantly Rebuked.

M. Labori replied: "No, because—and I speak with the utmost respect—I am prevented from putting any questions touching the core of the affair. I reserve the right to take such action as regard for my responsibility compels me to take up."

This scene was the climax of the strained relations which have prevailed between Col. Jouaust and M. Labori almost from the very outset of the trial. M. Labori has many times bitterly complained that Col. Jouaust prevented him from putting pro[illegible] fearing that by so doing he might do more harm than good to his client. In view of the manifest irritation displayed by the president of the court whenever M. Labori has risen to his feet in the last few days, however, the advocate resumed his former aggressive cross-examination methods resulting in to-days crisis. M. Labori was extremely excited, and hardly able to contain himself with indignation; and, when afterwards asked if he had any questions to put to other witnesses he replied, pertly: "No, nothing at all."

It is doubtful, however, if this attitude on the part of the counsel will assist Dreyfus.

LABORI TO QUIT!

Rennes, Sept. 6.—As a result of this morning's scene between Col. Jouaust president of the Dreyfus court martial, and M. Labori, leading counsel for the defence, the latter wishes to retire from the case.

He is convinced that the judges are utterly hostile to him, and it is said that he has conceived the idea of a dramatic withdrawal at the opening of to-morrow's session. A meeting of M Labori's friends will be held this afternoon to decide whether such a step is advisable.

RAISES IN THE YUKON.

All Round Increases in Salaries of the Government Employees.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—There was a meeting of the Cabinet yesterday afternoon, but a bare quorum was present, consisting of Hon. Messrs. Scott, Paterson, Borden and Sir Henri Joly.

Some matters in connection with the Yukon were up for consideration. The Government decided some time ago to increase the salaries of the officials in the Klondike, and to prevent any of them from speculating in mines. It has been already stated that Commissioner Ogilvie is to get $6,000 a year, instead of $5,000, as at present.

It is now learned that the salary of Gold Commissioner Senkler will be increased to $5,000.

W. P. Clement, the legal adviser of the Council, will get a similar amount. Mr. Clement at present has the privilege of practising his profession and also of speculating in mines, if he so desires, but in future he will have to give his entire service to the Government, and cannot dabble in mining business.

As a recompense for this he will likely be made Public Administrator, and can have such fees as may arise therefrom.

All other officials in the Yukon will receive an increase. There are at present two vacancies in the Yukon Council, in addition to two for which provision was made last session, to give representation to the mining element and the people of the district generally.

An Old Lady Cremated.

Hamilton, Sept. 6.—A very hot fire broke out in the cottage owned by Mr. C. G. Carlson, on the north side of the piers, at Hamilton Beach, early this morning, and five cottages are in ruins together with most of their contents.

The fire is supposed to have originated in the kitchen of Mr. Carlson's cottage, and the inmates had scarcely time to make their escape. The mother of Mrs. Carlson, an old lady who slept in a room alone, was cremated, and Mrs. Carlson was severly burned in getting out of the house.

Mrs. J. H. Horning, whose cottage adjoins Carlson's, was also severly burned and her cottage destroyed.

The other cottages were owned and occupied by D. Rae, C. M. Judd, and T. M. Williamson. No fire-fighting apparatus of any kind is kept at the Beach and the cottagers were compelled to pull down a shack to save the remaining buildings.

A Costly Scheme.

Montreal, Que. Sept. 6. — Major-General Hutton, in command of the Canadian militia, is in the city to-day, having attended the banquet to Major Girouard, of Soudan railway fame, last evening, and has made the announcement of a big scheme he has under way for next September, when he expects to have twenty-five thousand troops in Montreal for two weeks. The troops will represent the different arms of the British army and the Colonial militia, Australia, India, New Zealand, South Africa, etc., being representated.

There will also be detachments from the United States. The Major-General intends to have a big military tournament. The expense of travel and rations will be borne by the Canadian Government. A subscription list is now being opened to cover other expenses.

ANOTHER SESSION.

The Government Will Not Bring on the Elections Till Parliament Meets Again.

Quebec, Sept. 6.—I am assured in the most positive manner by a Ministerial member of the House of Commons that it has been definiately decided by the Government to postpone the general elections until next year.

There will be another session of Parliament before the issue of the writs, but only one more.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will spend the latter part of this week here in an endeavor to ally the discontent existing among the Liberals of this city and district, and may during his stay arrange for the reassembling here of the Joint High Commission in October, now that the Alaskan boundary dispute has been settled and put out of the way for the time being.

TO PREPARE CANADA'S CASE.

Ministers and Officials Gather at Quebec to Give Sir Louis Davies Pointers.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—Major Gourdeau left to-day for Quebec to have an interview with Sir Louis Davies before the latter sails for England.

Hon. Clifford Sifton, who is with his family on St. Lawrence, above Brockville, leaves for Quebec, where he will meet the Premier to-morrow.

HAS UNCLE SAM WON?

A Washington Story Has it That Great Britain Has Given Way

ON THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY

And That in a Temporary Agreement Canada Gets No Port on Lynn Canal.

The Direct Lie Given to the Story—British Government Deny any Knowledge of Rumored Agreement—No Negotiations on the Subject Pass Through Embassy.

New York, Sept. 6.—The Herald's Washington correspondent sends his paper the following regarding the Alaskan boundary:—

The negotiations for a modus vivendi defining a temporary boundary line between the Dominion and Alaska will be concluded within a very few days unless unforseen circumstances intervene.

Facts which came to my attention today show that Secretary Hay has convinced Great Britain of the impregnable character of the position he assumed and that Great for this country has caused her to make concessions which enable an agreement to be reached as to the location of the temporary line. The proposed line, I understand, will be located at the fork of Chilkat River, just above the Indian village of Kluchwan. Other points where the line will be located were agreed upon some months ago and are not under discussion at this time.

Canada Gets No Port.

The effect of the location of the boundary line as fixed by the Secretary and practically agreed to by Great Britain will be that the entire Lynn Canal will be under American control, and that Canada will not under the temporary agreement have a port on that waterway. The question of a Canadian port on the Lynn canal will be left to the negotiations for the permanent settlement of the dispute.

The High Joint Commission will have nothing further to do with the Alaskan boundary question, though the Americans will undoubtedly consult with Secretary Hay. It seems to be understood that the commission will not reassemble until the boundary controversy is disposed of, as the Britsih Government in the past has indicated that the boundary dispute must be settled before the remaining questions can be settled.

British Government Denies the Story.

London, Sept. 6.—The officials of the Foreign Office say they have not officially acquiesced in any modus vivendi in the matter of the Alaska boundary dispute, and that no recent negotiations have been under consideration here.

Mr. Reginald Tower, the British Charge d'Affaires at Washington, it is added, has carried on a discussion with Col. John Hay, the United States Secretary of State, with a view to a fuller consideration of the Canadian and British views, but, it is asserted, nothing binding on either side could result from these negotiations.

No negotiations on the subject of Alaska had passed through the United States Embassy here recently, but the result of the Tower Hay conference was daily expected from Washington.

A Witness for Michigan.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—Mr. John Charlton is in the capital to attend to-day's lumber sale. He says that the lumber business was never in a more flourishing condition in this line since 1892.

Speaking of the present difficulties between the Michigan mill men and the Ontario Government, Mr. Charlton stated that the Americans would undoubtedly win their suit, as the Provincial Government had no right to enforce the obnoxious legislation. The Dominion Government alone had power to do so.

Hon. Dr. Borden left for Montreal last night to be present at the banquet to Major Girouard.

Wants of the Technical School.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—At a meeting of a special committee of the Technical School Board, last night, the offer of the Ontario Government of $3,000 as an annual grant was considered, but was not believed to be sufficent, and the committee will wait on the Hon. G. W. Ross.

The British War Office is kept busy issuing denials to reports of troops being ordered to South Africa. They stop the reports but not the troops.

FITZGERALD TOWNSHIP.

Named After Our Esteemed Fellow Citizen, J. W. Fitzgerald Esq., P. L. S.

A very interesting and handsomely bound volume on the origin of the names of counties and towns in Ontario has lately been published by Herbert Fairbairn Gardiner, M. A., of Hamilton. The book will doubtless interest every class of Canadian readers, and its usefulness as a book of reference will increase with "growing time." We take from the book the following:

FITZGERALD TOWNSHIP (1886).

Fitzgerald felt his patriot ardour rise
In grateful homage to the righteous skies.
JOHN TAYLOR.

This township was named after Mr. James W. Fitzgerald, Provincial Land Surveyor, who was born at Cork, Ireland, and educated at Cork and Dublin.

In 1849 he won a scholarship of thirty pounds and a year's tuition in the School of Civil Engineering, Queen's College, Cork.

In 1852 he served on the Ordinace Survey of Ireland under Sir Richard Griffith, and on resigning that position he served under William Dargan, the great Irish Railway Engineer and contractor, on the Dublin docks, the Irish Exhibition building, and on the Dublin and Wicklow Railway. Coming to Canada in 1856 Mr. Fitzgerald was articled to Col. J. S. Dennis, of Toronto, who was afterward Surveyor-General of the Dominion.

He was admitted as P. L. S. in 1857 and at once appointed by Hon. Philip VanKoughnet, Commissioner of Crown Lands, to Survey the township outlines in the Haliburton country north of Peterborough.

In 1858 he made a Subdivison Survey of Minden, and the plans and field notes of that township have since that date been adopted as the system for recording the returns of Surveys in the Crown Lands Office.

Mr. Fitzgerald settled in Peterborough in 1858. He has been steadily employed in surveying for either the Canadian or the Ontario Government ever since, except from 1870 to 1875, when he was resident Engineer in charge of a section of the Intercolonial Railway in New Brunswick. The township of Fitzgerald was surveyed by Mr. Fitzgerald himself and was named by Hon. Mr. Pardee.

To the above the Times might add a few words. It would remark in the first first place that Mr. Fitzgerald came to this country alone and made his mark without the assistance of anyone; he overcame great difficulties by his indomitable pluck and perseverence; by his entegrity and manly bearing he gained the esteem, confidence and regard of his fellows, and his skill in his chosen profession gained substantial recognition from the government who frequently gave him important assignments. Mr. Fitzgerald, who is slightly passed the meridian of life, is still hale and hearty, and is rightly regarded as one of our most esteemed and respected citizens.

Very Polite.

A young man who drifted into town from the country gave a number of people a lesson in politeness the other day which, strange to say, was not appreciated. Having occasion to telephone to a friend he came up to the instrument with a cigar in his mouth and rang up Central. On hearing a lady's voice in reply he murmered, "I beg your pardon," and hastily threw away his Havana.

"Why did you threw your cigar away when you were 'phoning?" asked a friend, when he had finished speaking.

"Well, I may be from the country," was the reply, "but I've got manners enough not to stand and puff tobacco smoke in a lady's face when I'm talking to her.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Tainter, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment is headquarters of the world for Talking Machines and Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

Copper Shares.

Safest Investment, Largest Dividends.

A portion of the full paid and non-assessable capital stock of the Boston & Texas Copper Company is offered for sale at Five Dollars per share (par $10 for Treasury purposes), and is recommended as a safe and highly promising investment.

The company controls twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in North Texas which is also valuable for farming and town site purposes. The tract is some 10 miles long and about three miles wide. It is equivalent in size to five hundred ordinary mining claims.

The property has been developed sufficiently to begin producing at once, large amounts of the richest copper ore (40 to 70 per cent.) taken out and marketed, and inexhaustible quantities of copper marl and clay running from 3 to 15 per cent. copper found. (Calumet and Hecla and other great dividend payers are working on 1 to 3 per cent. ore.)

The property is within 12 miles of a railroad and fuel and water are available. The ores and marl are on the surface and a few feet down, and can be mined and converted into copper cheaper than any other deposits in America. Copper will be produced on the ground and a plant of moderate cost will treat 300 to 500 tons of ore and material per day, and according to engineers' estimates earn $3,000 to $5,000 per day net, with copper at 15 cts per pound. It is now 18 cts. per pound.

The property has a historical reputation and a record in the State Geological Reports. It has been examined and reported upon by the highest engineering, geological and expert authorities, and its merit and value are established beyond all question. It is not an experiment, nor its value speculative, they are proven and demonstrated.

From Report of Prof. Wm. DeRyee, former State Chemist of Texas.

"Such numerous outcrops of copper ore have been traced over the summit and sides of those hills that out of 12,000 acres of land which the company own, hardly a 160 acre tract should be found without ore upon the surface.

A cross-cut to the depth of 15 feet was made upon the Isbell lead, and ten hours' work resulted in the raising of 6,000 lbs. of rich copper ore, averaging about 60 per cent. of copper. (Worth $360, net.)

It is easily smelted and the strata in which it is found can also be more economically excavated than other in which copper ores occur."

From Report of Prof. W. F. Cummins, former Geologist of Texas.

* * * "In order that I might see the condition of this lode after this amount of work had been done, I employed a few hands and cleaned out the tunnels when I found a lode of copper. This is the disulphate of copper and will yield as high as 70 per cent. of copper. I drove the tunnel twenty feet further into the hill, following the lode. When I had gone about twelve feet I struck another lode of copper eighteen inches east and six inches below the second lode. In three feet more we struck another lode below the second lode. Immediately below the lower sandstone is a stratum of cupriferous marl schists extending the entire width of the tunnel, say four feet, and is probably much wider. This marl will yield about 15 per cent. of copper."

From Report of Prof. Gustave Westman, Mining Engineer.

"I beg to express my entire satisfaction with and confidence in the report made by Prof. W. F. Cummins.

I only had to remove one foot of earth from the surface on the three spots already mentioned in order to find large deposits bedded into the clay. After washing, this clay was found to contain 15 per cent. of copper ore of same value as above. These ores could of course be taken out and made available at a relatively small expense.

The cupriferous marl situated below the sandstone, containing 15 per cent. of copper, can be estimated worth at the place at least $10.00 per ton, net."

From Report of George F. Rendall, Mining Engineer.

"It is a self-evident fact deducible from every report that on this property large bodies of copper ore exists and that hundreds of tons have been shipped of high grade ore.

That a deposit of this nature can at a very small expense be made to yield handsome profits, from all existing reports, appears not only likely but certain."

From Report of Francis Arthur Reall, Superintendent.

"This property is all right and there is all the copper you want here. I think it is the best in Texas and it seems to have been selected as such for copper. It is near the top of a water shed and the hills crop out here. I think there is oil here because there is coal. Oil has been found at Corsicana. The property is adapted to general farming purposes which seems to be very profitable here and a town could be laid out on it and a railroad built to Dundee, 12 miles, to great advantage."

The Great Boom in Copper Shares.

Copper mining has proved the safest and most profitable industry in America, and the largest and most conservative capitalists in the world have recently become large investors in copper stocks.

This company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world. It is capitalized the lowest of any in proportion to its acreage, and at the price of copper-bearing land in Michigan ($400 per acre) containing a much less per cent. of copper, has a large value in excess of its low capitalization ($2,500,000.)

Receipts for ore and assays by the leading chemists and assayers in the country are on file in the company's offices.

The officers and directors of the company are men of the highest standing and business capacity, and include:

Hon. Emery M. Low, manufacturer, mayor of Brockton, Mass., President.
George W. Russell, Esq., paper manufacturer, Boston, Vice-President.
Maj. F. M. Spaulding, 2d Vice-President.
Col. Edward B. Robins, Boston, Treasurer.
Col. James. M. Wheaton, Boston, Secretary.
Hon. Jas. W. Bennett, Ex-President Erie Telephone Co.

Only a limited amount of the stock will be sold at the price of $5.00 per share and those wishing to secure shares should act at once. As stated the stock is full paid and non-assessable. As soon as this allottment is sold the price will be advanced.

Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, nearness to transportation, favorable climate for continuous work the year around, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment. It can easily earn 50 per cent. per year on the price at which the stock is here offered.

Stock may be ordered through your banker or broker, or direct as below.

FROM REPORT OF T. BURTON EVERETT, MINING ENGINEER AND EXPERT.

ARCHER CITY, TEXAS, MAY 3, 1899.

Hon. EMERY H. LOW, President, and others, Boston, Mass.: * * Gentlemen:—There is abundant evidence of rich copper deposits, not only at the mines already opened, but at various other parts of the property, and it is my opinion that this will prove to be one of the exceptionally rich copper-bearing fields of the United States.

* * The ores found in these deposits are immensely rich in copper values and the cuperiferous clays that are also found here in immense beds, while not as rich, will undoubtedly prove of great value on account of the cheapness with which they can be mined and reduced.

The mines are accessible at every point; the cost of mining will be very small, as the ore is not in hard formation; and there is no deep work.

I have examined the various reports made by others, and confirm them.

* * As far as I have been able to investigate, and I have done so carefully, I am of the opinion it is one of the richest copper fields in the country.

Very respectfully yours,
T. BURTON EVERETT, M. E.

Mr. G. H. Savage, Mine Examiner of Butte, Montana, after gaining sample of ore from the property, says: "The ore is the richest in the country. If you have the field you can pay $1,000,000 dividends per year."

Major F. M. Spaulding, of Boston, and C. F. Crosby, Esq., of Lowell, Mass., who returned June 16th from an examination of the property on behalf of the Company's stockholders and intending investors, report that they found the property as represented and confirm the expert reports. They visited and examined the nine mines and explored the entire property.

The Company is thoroughly organized with substantial business men in the management. It has such extensive acreage of land, rich in copper, and so easily and cheaply mined and converted, that dividends can be earned and paid during the current year. Now is the time to make a safe and profitable investment, and those who take advantage of this opportunity to buy stock at the low price offered will reap the benefit.

Remit by P. O. Order, Registered Letter, Check or Express to Edward B. Robins, Treasurer, Tremont Building, Boston, Mass. Price $5.00 per Share, Subject to advance.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will secure so much pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his hand by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

Reciprocal.

"Yes, sir," remarked the ... "I look to see an Englishman come over here and drop his h's once in awhile."

"Yes," answered the man who has been to Epsom downs, "and he likes to see us go over there and drop our X's and V's."

A LOCOMOTIVE FIGHT.

Two Engine Drivers Indulge in a Conquest for Supremacy.

BUEFERS WERE LOCKED

And Now One Driver is to be Tried for Endangering Public Safety.

One Man Wanted Water for His Engine, but the Other Declined to Move His Iron Steed Out of the Way, the Two Engines Locked, With the Result That One Was Derailed.

London, Sept. 5.—Drivers Edwards and Hopkins had an extraordinary contest for supremacy at the Cyfarthfa Steel Works. The droll but exciting story was told at the Merthyr Police Court of how two locomotives under the guidance of their enraged drivers repeatedly charging each other, striving for the mastery of the railway track.

Driver Edwards wanted water for his engine, but Driver Hopkins declined to move his iron steed out of the way till he had finished taking in coal.

Driver Edwards, however, advanced with the object of pushing Hopkins ahead so as to admit of getting past him on to a crossing.

Hopkins, however, opposed this movement, and steaming against Edwards' engine, drove it back on to another line. Edwards returned to the charge, and was again defeated; a third time he returned, Hopkins declaring that he preferred death to dishonor. On this occasion the buffers of the two opposing engines becamed locked, and, after a final wrestle, Hopkins' engine went off the rails, leaving Edwards master of the road.

Hopkins was committed for trial to the assizes on a charge of endangering public safety.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

VIVID HEALTH

Nothing so rare as charity, easily impaired and of no ...—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is—vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness to the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fuel of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and on Death gathers in his chequer.

English Ritualist Leader Unwillingly Obeys the Bishop.

THIS GUN IS A TERROR.

No Range is Long Enough to Test a New British Weapon.

A Turkish Cruiser Wrecked Off the Coast of Asia Minor—An English Paper Takes Up the Cause of Mrs. Maybrick—The Prince Digged in the Ribs—The British are Not Afraid of the Plague.

London, Sept. 2.—Public interest in both the Dreyfus court martial and the Transvaal crisis rather flagged during the week and is not yet keen on the yacht race, though the papers give good accounts of the Shamrock's doings. Sandwiched in between these is the church question. Letters from the clergy and others are constantly appearing in the press. Lord Halifax, the most prominent lay leader of the ritualists, has issued a manifesto counselling grudging compliance with the archbishop's decision, that incense and lights are not to be used, if it is insisted by the diocesan bishop, and declaring the ritualists will fight to the bitter end to secure a repeal of the decision.

Turkish Vessel Wrecked.

London, Sept. 2.—A despatch from Constantinople says that the Turkish cruiser Ismir has been wrecked in Besika Bay, between the coast of Asia Minor and the north end of the Isle of Tenedos. It is possible that the wrecked vessel is the Turkish transport Ismirli formerly the State of Indiana, built in Glasgow in 1874, and purchased by the Ottoman Goverament in 1892. None of the standard naval authorities includes a cruiser of the name of Ismir among the Ottoman warships.

"Hanged or Freed."

London, Sept. 2.—A weekly paper again brings up the Maybrick case, saying the injustice done to Dreyfus is nothing when compared to that done to Mrs. Florence Maybrick, the American woman. undergoing penal servitude for life after having been convicted of poisoning her husband, basing its remarks on the old theory that she ought to have been hanged or freed.

Prince Digged in the Ribs.

London, Sept. 2.—Many stories are current about the Prince of Wales' recent visit to Marienbad, where he was most democratic, It is said that a Polish Jew, sitting on a park bench next to the Prince, not knowing his identy, began to question him about what he paid for his rooms, doctors, etc., ending with digging His Royal Highness in the ribs and telling him he looked to healthy to need the water cure.

Not Afraid of Plague.

London, Sept. 2.—The reports of the plague abroad created uneasiness here, and the authorities have taken a few regulation precautions at the ports. But the bulk of the English are far too satisfied with their sanitary superiority to seriously consider the possibility of an outbreak in this country.

SAVE THE NATION'S COAL.

London, Sept. 5.—A new departure of an important character has been decided upon by the Admiralty. As soon as the battleship Canopus, now being prepared for sea at Portsmouth, has completed her contractor's trials a large sum of money wil be spent upon altering her auxiliary machinery, so as to decrease her consumption of coal. The alteration will consist of so reconstructing the machinery that the exhaust steam from the main engines, instead of going back to water, will be utilised to work the vessel's evaporators.

This will be the first time that such an arrangement has been introduced into the machinery of a British battleship although exhaust steam is already made use of in up-to-date steamers. It is understood that this alteration will be extended to all battleships of the Canopus class.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface. Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alara, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors. The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape: a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean, then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

THE CANADA CYCLE AND MOTOR COMPANY, Limited,

is to be incorporated under the Ontario Companies' Act to acquire as going concerns the businesses, as manufacturers and dealers in Bicycles and Bicycle Parts, now carried on by the following well known Companies:

MASSEY-HARRIS COMPANY, Limited,
H. A. LOZIER & COMPANY (Cleveland Bicycles),
WELLAND VALE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Limited,
GOOLD BICYCLE COMPANY, Limited,
GENDRON MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Limited,

including the Plant, Machinery, Tools, Stock-in-Trade, Fixtures, Patent Rights, Trade Marks, Trade Names, Copyrights, Good-will and Leaseholds of the above-named Companies in connection with their said business; and including also all the real property of H. A. Lozier & Company, and The Goold Bicycle Company, Limited.

THE COMPANIES.

The bicycle industry is one of great importance and magnitude in Canada. The constituent Companies are the leaders in the trade. Their Trade Marks and Brands are everywhere popularly known, and by reason of their world-wide reputation for unrivalled excellence some of the Companies enjoy a large and growing foreign trade which offers a favourable field for development, and which this Company proposes to extend.

The Companies give employment to about 1,700 men. Their outputs for the past year aggregated about 38,500 bicycles. The plant and machinery are of the latest and best equipment, and capable of twice that production with but small additional outlay in tools. The factory sites to be acquired by the Company are especially adapted for manufacturing purposes; have advantageous shipping facilities, and will permit of ample extensions to the existing buildings.

Each of the above-named Companies has covenanted not to engage for long periods of years in any business competing with the bicycle business of this Company.

NET EARNINGS.

The steadily progressive character of the business of the constituent Companies is shown by the following Accountants' certificate:

We certify that the combined net profits in the business of Bicycles and Bicycle Parts of the Massey-Harris Co., Limited, H. A. Lozier & Co. (Cleveland Bicycles), Welland Vale Manufacturing Co., Limited, Goold Bicycle Co., Limited, and Gendron Manufacturing Co., Limited, for the past three years, are as follows:—

1896-7 - - - -	$190,914.02
1897-8 - - - -	$304,907.03
1898-9 - - - -	$330,115.35

Toronto, Canada,

GEO. EDWARDS, F.C.A.
ALEX. HART-SMITH, C.A. } Auditors.

ADVANTAGES.

Amongst the advantages to be gained by this amalgamation of interests, the following may be enumerated:—

FIRSTLY—Reduction in selling and distribution expenses and advertising.
SECONDLY—The economies and improvements in production arising from the practical knowledge of the members forming the Board of Directors, which will be available for each branch of the business.
THIRDLY—The economies due to consolidation of management, manufactories, office work, and of buying, distributing, and financial arrangements.

The Directors are fully alive to the desirability of conserving the individuality and initiative of the various businesses, and will not allow consolidation to act detrimentally in these matters, but there are obvious advantages to be gained, as, for example, in buying in large quantities in the best markets, in the supply of ample capital, and in the manufacture of a large output of high-grade wheels at prices to meet the demands of the public.

MANAGEMENT.

The Management of the Company will be in the hands of experienced manufacturers, who have been identified with the leading bicycle companies of Canada in the past, and have made a success of the business.

WORKING CAPITAL.

The Company will commence business without any bonded or mortgage debt and with a working capital in excess of $1,000,000, exclusive of the additional capital available from the issue of the Preference Stock in the treasury ($500,000).

DIVIDENDS.

The Preference Shares shall confer the right to a fixed cumulative preferential dividend of 7 per cent. per annum accruing from the date of payment by subscribers, to be provided for out of the net earnings of the Company before any dividends are paid upon the common stock, and the further right to repayment of capital in priority to the common stock, but they will not be entitled to further participation in profits or assets.

If in any one year dividends amounting to 7 per cent. are not paid on the preference stock the deficiency shall be a first charge upon the net earnings of the Company and shall be paid subsequently before any dividend is paid upon or set apart for the common stock.

Dividends will be payable half-yearly on the 1st days of May and November, or such other half-yearly dates as the Directors may determine.

RESERVE ACCOUNT.

The Charter of the Company will provide that 25 per cent. of the balance of the net earnings, after payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on the Preference Stock, shall be annually transferred to a reserve account in the books of the Company, the better to secure to the Preferred Shareholders the payment of the 7 per cent. dividend on their preferred shares, and such annual transfers shall be continued until the amount of said account reaches $500,000, at which sum it is to be maintained, and if it is at any time drawn upon it is to be in like manner restored and maintained.

The amount required to pay 7 per cent. on the preference stock already taken by the Directors and that now offered to the public being $175,000, it is considered that such dividends are amply assured, and the above reserve account of $500,000 has been stipulated for in order that the position of the preferred shares may be rendered independent of any possible contingency.

AUTOMOBILES.

It is intended that an important part of the Company's undertaking will be the manufacture and sale of motors and motor vehicles. This branch of business is a natural outgrowth of the Bicycle industry, and is believed to offer a profitable investment for the capital and the large and successful experience in manufacturing which this Company will command.

Arrangements have been made to have the books of the Company regularly audited by Chartered Accountants.
Application will be made in due course to have the stock of the Company listed upon the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges.

$2,000,000 7 per cent. Preference Stock in the above Company will be offered for public subscription at PAR on WEDNESDAY, the 6TH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1899, payable as follows: 5 per cent. on application and the balance of 95 per cent. on allotment. The right is reserved to reject or reduce any application, and subscription carries with it an agreement to accept such reduced amount. The failure to make payment when due forfeits the previous payment. In case no allotment is made the amount deposited on application will be returned.

Subscription Lists will open at the chief offices of the National Trust Company, Limited, Toronto and Montreal, and at the Head Office and Branches of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, the 6th September, '99, and close at 3 o'clock on the following day.

Forms of Power of Attorney to subscribe may be had on application to any branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, or to

REV. DR. AUSTIN IN TOWN.

Tells The Times Something About His Spiritualistic Ideas.

Rev. Dr. Austin, M.A., D.D., who has has received a certain amount of prominence because of his avowed belief in spiritualism and his subsequent expulsion from the Methodist church, was in town Saturday on his way to Toronto. A Times' representative met the [illegible] gentleman and had a short interview with him regarding his secession from the Methodist communion, and also on the matter of spiritualism. He states that he has just made a tour through the Northwest, and delivered a number of lectures that were well received. Among the places he addressed meetings at were Battle Creek and Detroit, Mich. He says that there are now ten million of people in the United States who believe in spiritualism, which he terms a religion of the Bible. He said that he had been investigating the phenomena of spiritualism for eight years and had been closely identified with its principles for two years. All truth is sacred; every man, the doctor thinks, should in this intelligent age investigate for himself. Especially should ministers who deal continually with questions of the soul make themselves familiar with the psychic phenomena.

The reverend doctor referred to his expulsion from the Methodist church because of a sermon he preached on Jan. 6th, 1899, in the Parkdale Methodist church, and said that a man is [illegible] killed when he is expelled. He said he never slept better or had a better appetite than at present. The doctor then gave a short statement of his belief in spiritualism and said he had had many communications from the spirit world.

In concluding Doctor Austin stated that he had been offered the pastorate of an independent church in Toronto, and had the acceptance of it under consideration at present.

WILLING TO PAY FOR IT.

What Uncle Bill Wanted the Newspaper Publisher to Do.

A number of newspaper men were exchanging reminiscences a few days ago in a Court street inn. One of them, by the way, was an ex-publisher—that is to say, he once owned and edited a paper in the upper section of the state. One of his subscribers was William Makepeace Thackeray Willington, whose neighbors called him "Uncle Bill" to save time and labor.

"One day Uncle Bill walked into my office," said the former publisher. "He placed his whip in a corner and removed his hat. He asked if I was the editor. I pleaded guilty. 'Shake,' said he. 'I am glad to know ye. When I was a young feller, I used to do some writin myself.'

"Uncle Bill lapsed into silence and did some solid thinking for several minutes. Then he resumed the conversation. He said he liked the appearance of The Banner of Freedom mighty well and hoped it was not only bringing me fame, but money also. Naturally my bosom swelled with pride. The old man said he had only a few minutes to spare, and, before leaving, he wished to ask a favor. I supposed that he was about to spring a little poem which he had dashed off all by himself, but that wasn't the case. Uncle Bill said:

"'My son, I want to ask you a special favor. My eyes are not as strong as they were, and I would like to have you print my copy of the paper in a type two or three sizes larger than you use in the regular edition. Now, mind, I don't want you to do this for nothin. I'm willin to pay for it. Here's the money, and if that isn't enough let me know when my subscription is due again and I'll pay what's owin.'

"The old man dove his right hand into his pocket, fished out a silver half dollar and planked it on my table, saying: 'There's the money. If that isn't enough to cover the extree expense, let me know when I call in next spring, and I'll make it good. I'm willin to pay for any little favors.' Before I could explain the impossibility of his scheme he jumped into his buggy and started off for Deep Hollow."

THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from cooked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the banana should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

A CLEVER RUSE.

The Auctioneer Was Quick Witted and Finally Made a Sale.

An auctioneer on East Washington street—one of those redoubtable individuals commonly termed "slick"—was the cause of a farcical scene recently that would have done credit to a burlesque show. He had been talking industriously for a long time to a crowd of interested but enthusiastic listeners.

The affable auctioneer conscientiously went through his repertory from beginning to end, but somehow the crowd did not "warm up" to him—to quote his own language. Finally, with a dark look that bordered on despair, he grabbed up a well known pasteboard hatbox containing about 50 spools of silk thread of different colors. With the grace of a conjurer he extracted five of the spools, and, arraying them in a tempting semicircle on the counter, announced that they were "to go at any price."

But the audience, while admitting with nods of approval that they were good spools of thread, displayed no marked inclination to become excited over them. Not a bid was offered.

"I'll sell 'em for 10 cents," suggested the auctioneer timidly. It was plain from the tone of his voice that he was losing faith in himself and in all the world. There were no takers. The man of the red flag added three more spools to the semicircle. "All for 10 cents," he declared. But thread stock was far below par. The auctioneer caught up all the spools from the counter and flung them into the box with an impressive gesture. The light of inspiration flashed from his eyes.

"The whole blamed box for 10 cents!" he cried.

"I'll take it," was the prompt response, and a little man in a washed out overcoat and wearer of red chin whiskers stepped out from the crowd with a dirty 10 cent piece in his upraised hand. The auctioneer clutched the money feverishly, and, turning the box upside down so that all the spools dropped into a basket on the counter, he handed the worthless piece of ancient pasteboard to the anxious customer. A roar of hilarious laughter rose from the crowd that was heard throughout that neighborhood.

"I don't want your blamed old box!" wailed the unfortunate purchaser.

"You said you'd take it," replied the auctioneer. "I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came in a strong chorus from the delighted audience.

"I bought the spools!"

"No, you didn't! You bought the box! I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came the answer again, stronger than ever. The red whiskered man stalked indignantly from the place with the box under his arm.

"What you going to do with it?" yelled the crowd.

"That's what!" cried the speculator as he held the pasteboard box in both hands, football fashion, and kicked it vigorously into the middle of Washington street.

THE ROYAL BOX.

The present czar is the only Romanoff without talent for music. His father was an excellent soloist on the cornet.

The queen of England and the czar of Russia own beautiful typewriters of white enamel and gold with keys of ivory. The queen regent of Spain is said to use one for her correspondence.

When the Princess of Wales was in Rome a few weeks ago, she passed incognito as "Mrs. Smith." Under this excellent disguise of names she and her daughters dined at a restaurant, taking their turn at being served and having a good time generally.

Kaiser Wilhelm has purchased the castle of Lichtenburg, near Leutzelstein, in Alsace, as a companion property to his chateau of Urville in Lorraine. He will spend a part of each year in these places, thus helping on the work of Germanizing the conquered provinces.

TRUST THRUSTS.

The plow trust does not want the earth. It merely wants to turn it over.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Why not finish up the job by putting everything in one big combine and calling it worth $1,000,000,000,000?—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The laws of Missouri hit trusts in a tender spot by prohibiting collections by them in that state. Missouri is not a hopelessly benighted commonwealth, after all.

Retiring and Sleeping.

"When a person says he is going to retire," said the statesman's small son, "he means he is going to sleep."

"No," was the answer. "Your father is going to retire from congress, my boy, and if he doesn't desire to lose his grip he will have to keep wider awake than ever."
—Washington Star

HE TOOK NAILS.

It Was All the Same to the Man Who Was Treating.

Individuality is lost sight of in the cities. It is swallowed up, as it were, in the mob. In a village it stands out with surprising distinctness. The odd characters of the place are known to everybody, and their queer sayings and doings are told from mouth to mouth.

In a certain little town not a great ways from Cleveland there are probably as many of these peculiar people as any place of its size can boast. One of them is an ancient man who longs for the good old times that followed the war and is a firm believer in the criminal weakness of the present financial system. He is a man of considerable property, but nevertheless is economical to an extreme degree. In fact, he was never known to spend a penny that didn't go for some actual necessity.

There is another character in the town who keeps the village general store. He is a good hearted fellow, who, after a long course of bachelorhood, finally married. In this little town it is the custom for the happy bridegroom to set up the cigars for all the congratulating males who drop in to wish him joy. So the bridegroom in this instance had a box on the counter, and most of his patrons were regaled from it.

Pretty soon the ancient gentleman first referred to lounged in. The storekeeper, who felt friendly to all the world just then, pushed the box toward the newcomer.

"Have a cigar, Uncle Jim," he smilingly said.

Uncle Jim looked at the box and looked at the storekeeper.

"What's this for?" he asked.

The storekeeper slightly blushed.

"Been gettin married."

"Who? You?"

"Yep. Me."

"An you're standin treat, eh?"

"Yep," said the storekeeper.

The old man picked up a cigar.

"How much did these seegars cost ye, Ab?" he inquired.

"Oh," replied the storekeeper, "they cost me 'bout 4 cents. They're nickel cigars."

The old man dropped the cigar back in the box. Then his gaze wandered around the store.

"Well, Ab," he slowly drawled, "ef it's all the same to you, I'll take a pound o' nails."

And he got them.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HE VOTED FOR STONE.

And For One of the Most Remarkable Reasons on Record.

Theodore Bolton of Henry county tells this good story. "I was a strong Stone man," said Bolton, "when the ex-governor was a candidate for governor. One day while the campaign was at its hottest a Democrat from an outlying township came to see me. He called me out from my store and took me into a back alley. I thought he wanted to borrow $5 or ask me to go on his note. Finally, when he got to a selected place, away from the crowd, the old fellow laid down his cob pipe and said:

"'Say, Bolton, I can't vote for your man, Stone.'

"'Why, Uncle Billy?' I inquired.

"'Well, they tell me, The, that Bill Stone beats his wife, beats her twice a week.'

"I looked the old man squarely in the eyes and never smiled and said, 'Now, Billy, you wouldn't vote against a man for beating his wife—and you a married man too.'

"'The, you don't beat your wife, do you?'

"'Whenever she needs it, Uncle Billy.'

"'Well, I didn't think that of you, The. The, I like you, but I can't vote for your man, Stone.'

"So we parted, and Uncle Billy went back to his home in the back township.

"Three weeks later the county convention to select delegates to the state nominating convention met in Clinton. The first man I met on the streets was Uncle Billy.

"'What are you doing here today, Uncle Billy?' I asked as the old fellow shook hands with me.

"'Why, I am a delegate from my township to this here convention.'

"'And how do you stand on the Stone question now?'

"'Well, I tell you, The. I have been thinking about what you told me, and it's all right. I'm a married man myself, and I am going to vote for Stone.'

"And he did," added Bolton, "and to this day believes Stone beat his wife twice a week, and that's why Stone got his vote in the Henry county convention."—Kansas City Journal.

Campaigning With a Fiddle.

When a young man, the late ex-Governor Oglesby worked in the old Macon tavern. There he met the lawyers riding the circuit and formed the acquaintance of Judge Robbins of Springfield, with whom he studied law two years. Returning to Decatur, he began practicing in a town of 400 inhabitants. He soon became popular as a speaker. On one occasion he was making a Whig speech on one side of the square, while a Democrat was making an opposition speech on the other side. The Democrat was fast getting the crowd when Mr. Oglesby, who was an old fashioned fiddler and played as well as he spoke, borrowed a fiddle from a man in the crowd and began to play. That broke up the opposition meeting, and the Democrat, left without an audience, came over and joined the crowd that was dancing to Oglesby's music.

Buffalo Bill's Fine Shooting.

Colonel Cody, better known as "Buffalo Bill," is one of the finest shots in the world. One of his most wonderful feats was not generally performed in public, for the reason that its failure or success could not be discerned at any great distance. It consisted in driving into a white board five short, flat headed tacks with five successive shots, from a distance just short enough to allow the tacks to be accurately sighted. So great was Colonel Cody's skill with the light rifle he used for this feat that, given favorable light, he could generally perform it six or seven times without a miss.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It Is a Fact.

"What are you sighing for?" asked the registry department of the dead letter office.

"No one has so many rejected addresses as I," was the sorrowful reply.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Any one can distinguish a poisonous serpent from a harmless one, for a venomous snake invariably possesses a triangularly shaped head and a blunt nose, while the tail is correspondingly blunt and stubby.

Police Court.

At the police court yesterday a citizen was fined $2 and $4.95 costs for riding his bicycle on the sidewalk. He had pleaded not guilty the day previous but the conviction was made yesterday on evidence in which the chief witness was a wheelman who was fined on Tuesday.

John Collins was charged with an infraction of the Health Act. The case was enlarged for a week.

John Powers, charged with being drunk, was discharged.

The Spilsbury Case.

The case against Wm. Spilsbury, of North Monaghan, charged with poisoning cattle came up before County Police Magistrate Edmison yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance of North Monaghan farmers, as that case has excited much local interest. A number of witnesses were examined and the case will be continued this morning.

More Sheep Killed.

Monday morning early a couple of dogs ran amuck among the sheep of the farms in Smith, a short distance from town. The pair of dogs was a collie and a hound. The hound was shot, but the collie made off into the bush and escaped. Mr. Thos. Fitzgerald found four sheep dead in the field; Mr. Geo. Allen, two; Mr. John Garbutt three dead and five badly worried; The dogs chased a couple of lambs into the barnyard of Mrs. Jas. Davidson, but the dogs made off before a shot could be had at them. The dogs were identified, and the owner of the collie was notified, to find his dog and fix up the damages.

SENTENCE OF TWO YEARS

Inflicted on a Seventeen-Year Old Boy From Tweed.

At the County Police Court yesterday Edward Rogers, a seventeen-year-old boy whose parents live in Tweed, but who has been tramping it himself between that place and Dummer was charged with throwing stones through the windows of the C.P.R. coaches and with carrying a revolver illegally. The offence of the stone was committed near Norwood on August 30th. The lad was found guilty of both charges and sentenced by Magistrate Edmison to two years less one day in the Central prison at Toronto.

Pavement Levels Again.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—I noticed a letter in a contemporary a short time ago over the signature of Mr. O. W. Dumble, dealing with the levels of the new granolithic sidewalks. I am persuaded that Mr. Dumble has the correct idea in regard to the way this matter has been mismanaged. In some places the new walks are too high and again they are too low. Take a look, for instance, at Water street, in front of the park. Here the walk is so low that it undoubtedly be under water in the spring. Then in front of St. Paul's church it is away up high, altogether too high, especially at the church corner. Other places in town are even worse.

Now, as to where to place the blame. Of course the people look to the council, and rightly so. They have nothing to do with its engineer, it is for the council to look to the engineer. If he is incompetent, or is lacking to experience, their duty is obvious. Only they should not continue the bad work. The council cannot load the responsibility by trying to place the blame on the shoulders of the engineer.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, etc.

RATEPAYER,

September, 6, 1899.

A Great Bicycle Company.

The leading bicycle manufacturers of Canada have amalgamated their interests in the Canada Cycle and Motor Company, whose formation is now announced and whose preference stock is open for subscription. The names of the makers whose concerns are embraced in the new company are a guarantee for excellence of workmanship and industrial skill. Their special products are familiar to everyone, while the men who control the new organization, Walter E. H. Massey (Massey-Harris Company), Senator Cox, Warren Y. Soper of Ottawa, E. L. Goold of Brantford, J. W. Flavelle, Hon. L. M. Jones and Mr. E. R. Thomas, are known throughout the Dominion as combining enterprise, shrewdness and integrity with financial stability. Under their guidance their can be no doubt that a brilliant future awaits the new aggregation. As there is at the present time much idle capital seeking safe investment at 4 per cent., and the banks are allowing only 3 per cent. upon deposits, there is certain to be a heavy demand for the 7 per cent. cumulative preference stock which is offered to the public. First-class securities of this nature seldom bear so high a rate of interest, and when they do the public is apt to want very much more of the stock than is for sale.

All of These Songs Free.

Announcement was made last week of a Sunday World Music Album of ten songs to be issued weekly. Following is the complete list.

"In the Shadow of the Carolina Hills," by George Taggart and Max S. Witt, authors of "The Moth and the Flame."

"If All the Girls Were Like You," by Charles Graham, author of "Two Little Girls in Blue."

"I'm Nothing but a Big Wax Doll," by Malcolm Williams, author of "My Ann Elizer."

"You'll Have to Transfer," by Abe Holtzmann, composer of "Smoky Mokes," the greatest cakewalk hit of the season.

'Sweet Norine,' by Gussie L. Davis, author of "The Baggage Coach Ahead."

"Hang-Shot Sal," by Williams and Walker, the two real "coons," authors of "I Don't Like No Cheap Man."

"Tell Mother Not to Worry," by Louis Myll, composer of "Coontown Carnival Cakewalk."

"Prancing Pickaninnies," by Max Dreyfus, composer of "A Carolina Cakewalk."

"My Georgia Lady Love," by Sterling, Howard and Emerson, authors of "Hello Ma Baby."

"There Ain't No Use to Keep on Hanging 'Round," by Irving Jones, author of "Get Your Money's Worth."

One song each week for ten weeks. First song published Sept. 3, "In the Shadow of the Carolina Hills."

The entire set is to be given away with ten Sunday Worlds, and will be sent postpaid, including ten Sunday World Magazines, Art Portfolio and Comic Weeklies for 50 cents. Send 50 cents to-day, to-morrow or next week. Don't wait later than next week. This is a most exceptional offer and is only put forth to advertise the great Sunday World. Address, Music Editor, The World, Pulitzer Building, New York.

PETERBOROUGH PRIME CHEESE

Salesmen Held it High—Regular Meeting of the Board—Twelve Cents the Highest Offer.

The regular meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held on Wednesday afternoon, the following buyers being present: Messrs. Moore, Cluxton, Fitzgerald, Cook, Rollins, Whitton, Kerr, Hodgson, Wrighton and Jones.

The highest price obtained was 12 cents, and most of the factories obtained this. A few sold at 11 15-16c, and an offer of 11 7-8c was not entertained at all. The buying was very slow as the salesmen were holding off for even a higher price than 12c.

Before the bidding commenced, Mr. Drummond announced that he had received a communication from Mr. Geo. Stewart, who had just been appointed County Clerk and Treasurer, tendering his resignation as Vice-President of the Board. He was sure that all would be pleased to know that Mr. Stewart had received a better appointment. They were indeed sorry to lose him from the board, but their loss would be the County Council's gain. Mr. Drummond stated that he thought that as there would be few more meetings of the board this season, Mr. Stewart might be induced to continue the office of Vice-President until the end of the term.

Mr. G. Fitzgerald spoke a few words of a congratulatory nature on Mr. Stewart's appointment, expressing the belief that the County Council would have no objection to Mr. Stewart continuing the office of Vice-President of the board.

Mr. Stewart agreed to withdraw his resignation for the present.

The following factories boarded:

Mr. Rollins commenced the bidding at 11 5-8c. Mr. Cluxton went 11 3-4c, Mr. Fitzgerald 11 7-8c, Mr. Rollins 15-16, and Mr. Fitzgerald took first choice by closing the bidding at 12c. He called Fraserville, North Smith, Central Smith, Westwood and Villiers, all of which accepted.

Mr. Fitzgerald for further selections offered 11 15-16, but Mr. Whitton got the choice at 12c. At this price he took Keene, Ormonde, Melrose Abbey, and Lang. Like Mr. Fitzgerald he offered 11 15-16 for further selections, but Mr. Rollins called out 12c. He called Oakdale, Daisy D., Warminster, Maple Leaf, Cedardale, North Dummer and Stony Lake, all accepting.

At 11 15-16c, Mr. Whitton, for further selections took Bensfort, Myrtle and Blackstock, but Shearer, Warsaw, Pine Grove, Peterborough, Lakeview, Trewern, Cavanville and Otonabee Union refused.

Mr. Hodgson at 11 7-8c named Hope, Crown, Fleetwood and Lakeview, but all refused. Mr. Fitzgerald went 15-16, but the same factories refused. Mr. Whitton renewed his offer of 15-16, and again called Shearer and Warsaw, but they insisted on 12c. Finally, however, Warsaw sold at 11 15-16c.

Mr. Rollins offered 11 15-16c for Pine Grove, but the offer was refused.

Fleetwood sold at 11 15-16c to Mr. Hodgson. Pine Grove went to Mr. Whitton at 11 15-16c, as did also Shearer. Lakefield sold to the same buyer at 12c.

The board then adjourned.

Goes Up A Peg.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—No definite appointment has been made, but it is understood that the position vacated by the resignation of Mr. H. Hodson, Inspector of Farmers' Institutes, and Secretary of the Live Stock Associations, will be filled by Mr. Westerfelt, who acted as Mr. Hodson's secretary. Mr. Westerfelt was a few weeks ago offered a very good position in British Columbia, but refused it on some understanding of promotion.

Mr. Wm. Croft's Experience With the Meanest Man That Ever Struck Town.

A man named Lindsay, who claims to hail from Bridgewater, entered the Croft House yesterday and approached the genial proprietor with a request that he write a letter for him. Mr. Croft, who is ever on the alert to oblige a friend or even a stranger, at once complied with the request. After he finished the letter he was asked to write another, and this also Mr. Croft did, supplying paper, ink and envelopes and even putting on the stamps. He then invited Mr. Croft to "have something," and Mr. Croft took a cigar, the stranger putting down five cents, with the remark that he would not take anything himself. The fellow turned to walk out, when Mr. Croft suggested that he pay for the postage stamps used on the letters. Mr. Croft told him he was willing to do the work and supply the stationery, but he drew the line at giving stamps. Lindsay objected, saying that he bought a cigar, which was enough, and he left the house. Soon after Mr. Sam Campbell, the clerk, happened to see Lindsay enter the post office across the road, and forthwith stepped over and requested payment of the four cents due for the stamps. Lindsay became indignant and refused to settle, whereupon Sam, who was determined not to be beat in such a manner, took the fellow's hat and departed. He was followed by Lindsay, and a stiff argument forthwith took place. He was told to pay for the stamps and his hat would be given up. This he would not due, and started to the police station for assistance. Chief Rossel came back with him, and when he heard how matters stood he advised the fellow to settle for the stamps, which he did, paying the amount in coppers for fear he would get no change. Mr. Campbell advised Lindsay when he got any surplus cash to go to some phrenologist and have his head examined and he would discover that he was the meanest man that ever struck these parts.

APSLEY.

A picnic under the auspices of the Band of Hope was held here on Wednesday August 23rd. The members of the society met at the Parish room about 11 o'clock a. m. and after forming into a procession marched to Pine Grove with banners, and flags, floating in the breeze and the choir singing a temperance refrain. After some little delay dinner was announced as ready, when all partook of a hearty meal. In the afternoon races and sports of all kinds were indulged in, both by young and old, and a thoroughly enjoyable time was spent by all. Tea was served about 6 o'clock, after which the procession reformed and marched back to the Parish room where a very select entertaiment was held to finish up the day. The Parish room was very tastfully decorated by Mrs. Byling who we are pleased to see is still master of the art. There was a refreshment booth on the grounds superintended by Mr. T. Shewen which was well patronized by all, and turned out to be a great factor towards increasing the society's funds. The day was very fine, and the picnic turned out a success in every way socially and financially, on Monday evening the Rev. Mr. Symonds of St. Luke's paid us a visit and gave a very interesting lecture on Temperance, which will no doubt strengthen and encourage the Band of Hope workers. He spent until Friday going over the mission and returned home Saturday, we wish his visits would come more frequently.

MR. SYMONDS' VISIT TO THE MISSION

On Monday night last, 28th the Band of Hope had another treat. The pleasure of being addressed by the Rev Herbert Symonds, who in the course of his very interesting speech, said much to instruct, encourage and strengthen the members, and in support of the cause of temperance. The attendance was good and all were much interested. On the next day Mr. Symonds proceeded to other parts of the Mission. On Tuesday night he preached in Matthews' school house, which was well filled; and on Wednesday night in the new church of St. Andrew, in the neighborhood of Mr. Baskin's mill, where he again had a good congregation and met with an equally good reception. On Thursday he completed his round of the Mission, preaching on Thursday night in St. Stephen's church, Chandos, and on Friday he returned home, after being once more assured of our thorough appreciation of his visit and kind interest.

An Old and Much Respected Resident of This Town

STRUCK DOWN YESTERDAY

While Harvesting on His Son's Farm in North Monaghan—Life Extinct When Found.

Mr. William Forester, of Park Street, While Harvesting on His Son's Farm in North Monaghan Yesterday Afternoon About Five O'clock Was Found Dead in a Field.

William Forester, of Park street, Peterborough, went out to his son Herbert's farm, North Monaghan, to help put in fall wheat. While harrowing in the field near the house, he was struck down by lightning about five o'clock in the afternoon. He was found by his daughter-in-law, and Dr. Boucher was summoned, but death must have been instantaneous. His body was found a few feet from the harrow, and the horses were still standing by.

Mr. Forester was a brother of Mr. Jos. Forester, County Commissioner, and was well and favorably known throughout the town and county. He was in his 69th year. He leaves a family of four sons and two daughters, viz: Fred. C., of Toronto; Wm. S., of Gananoque, and Herbert and Garfield at home, his two daughters being Mrs. Hy. Adamson, of North Monaghan and Mrs. James Stier, of Park street, town.

The funeral notice will be given later.

Returned From Hamilton.

Mr. J. J. Turner, the owner of the schooner "Wave Crest," which plies on Lake Ontario, returned a few days ago from Hamilton, where the vessel had delivered a cargo. Mr. Turner, while in the Ambitious City, made a number of charters for the ship, at good prices. The season has been very busy, with good prospects ahead.

WAR IS PROBABLE WITHIN FORTY-EIGHT HOURS.

Kruger Demands an Explanation as to Why the British Troops Are Being Mobolized on His Frontier.

A POSITIVE INSULT TO GREAT BRITAIN.

The Standard's Opinion of President Kruger's Reply to the Demands of Joseph Chamberlain. The Situation Worse Than Yesterday.

Pretoria, Sept. 7.—At the desire of the Transvaal Government, Mr. Conyngham Greene, the British diplomatic agent here, has communicated to Sir Alfred Milner, the Governor of Cape Colony and British High Commissioner of South Africa, an inquiry as to whether an explanation would be given in regard to the mobilization of British troops on the Transvaal frontier.

Situation Is Worse.

London, Sept. 7.—If the Transvaal situation has changed since yesterday it is for the worst. The Boer request for an explanation as to the massing of British troops on the frontier of the Transvaal has an ominous note of irritation and impatience, which, at such a critical stage can scarcely be interpreted as anything but a defiance. Both here and Cape Colony the tension and the arming continue. Whether to-morrow's Cabinet Council will afford immediate relief is still a question of great doubt. The more conservative believe that the Cabinet will only put a time limit on the negotiations, and that the interim will merely be a repetition of the anxious times that have marked the past few weeks.

An Evasive Reply.

Cape Town advices say the Afrikanders regard the latest Boer reply as evasive, while others regard it as designed to entangle the two Governments in further negotiations. The average opinion of the British press is inclined to regard it as the straw which would break the back of the most long-suffering diplomatic camel.

The second edition of the Morning Post to-day contains a special despatch from Pietermaritzburg, capital of Natal, saying that an ultimatum would be forwarded to the Boers to-day. This is scarcely credible, however, as every well-informed source here believes that the Cabinet will decide upon the advisability of an ultimatum.

Demand for Release.

The same correspondence adds that the Boers have received, or will receive, a despatch from Sir Alfred Milner, the Governor of Cape Colony and British High Commissioner of South Africa, demanding the release of Mr. Pakeman, the editor of The Transvaal Leader, who was arrested Sept. 2 on the charge of high treason.

Continuing, the correspondent says 800 Boers have left Pretoria for Sanderton, and declares that the Pietermaritzburg troops are ready to march at two hours' notice.

Troops from India.

Simla, Sept. 7.—Three regiments of cavalry, four regiments of infantry and three batteries of field artillery have been formally warned to prepare to leave their stations in India at the shortest notice for service in South Africa. The hospital outfits have received similar orders.

Artillery Called Out.

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, Sept. 7.—It is understood that all the Transvaal artillery has been called out and that the burghers have been called to be ready. The latest reply of the Transvaal to Great Britain is regarded as marking the disappearance of the last hope of peace.

A POSITIVE INSULT.

London, Sept. 7.—The text of President Kruger's reply to Mr. Chamberlain on the British demands upon the Transvaal is as follows:

"The Government of the South African Republic regrets that Great Britain is unable to accept the proposals made by the Transvaal by which the term for obtaining the franchise was fixed at five years and the representation of the Witwatersrand district was increased.

"In these conditions the Transvaal considers its proposals are annulled, and finds it necessary to submit them to the Volksraad and the people. It remains of the opinion that its proposals are extremely liberal.

"The Transvaal never desired Great Britain to abandon any rights possessed by virtue of the London convention of 1884, or by virtue of international law.

"With regard to the question of suzerainty, the Transvaal Government refers to the despatch of April 16, 1898, and considers it unnecessary to repeat that despatch.

"If the one-sided examination referred to in the last British despatch should show that the existing electoral law can be made more efficacious, the Transvaal Government is willing to make a proposal to the Volksraad with this object. It is also disposed to furnish all the information and enlightenment possible, but is of the opinion that the result of such an enquiry, so far as regards a usual appreciation of the law, will be of little value."

Conference Accepted.

The reply then refers to Mr. Chamberlain's proposals respecting a joint enquiry, and says:

"Considering that the proposal of Great Britain does not aim at any interference in the affairs of the Transvaal, and that the action would not be regarded as a precedent, but has solely for its object to ascertain whether the franchise law fulfils its purpose, the Transvaal will await the ulterior proposals of Great Britain as to the eventual constitution of such commission, as well as the place and time of the meeting."

The Transvaal Government further proposes at an early date to send a fresh reply to the letter of July 27, and express satisfaction that Great Britain has declared a readiness to negotiate on the question of a Court of Arbitration. It says it would like to learn, however, whether an Orange Free State burgher would be admitted to such a court, and what would be the scope of the court's discussion, it appearing to the Transvaal Government that the restrictions imposed will prevent the attainment of the objects aimed at. With regard to the ulterior conference, the Transvaal awaits the communications of Great Britain.

The Standard referring to the abstract of the reply of the Transvaal Government to Mr. Chamberlain, as given out by the Transvaal agent in Brussels, says: The despatch is a positive insult to the British Government. Clearly, we are within measurable distance of an ultimatum.

WAS THE LIST LOADED?

Only One Liberal on Roster of Honorary A.D.C.'s to Lord Minto.

HON. DR. BORDEN DISSENTS

A Liberal Commander is Passed Over For a Conservative Subordinate.

The Entire List is Selected From Conservatives, and the Minister of Militia, it is Said, Declined to be Responsible for It—Considerable Grumbling Over the Affair

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—A list of the honorory A.D.C.'s to Lord Minto will be appointed in a few days, and it is probable that they will be known this week. So far only three A.D.C.'s have been gazetted. They are Lieut.-Col. Irwin, Ottawa; Lieut.-Col. Otter and Lieut.-Col. Hon. Gibson, Toronto.

In addition to these it is said that General Hutton and his Excellency the Governor-General have decided on the following:

Lieut.-Col. Peters, British Columbia.
Lieut.-Col. Sherwood, Ottawa.
Lieut.-Col. Labelle, Montreal.
Lieut.-Col. Euantured, Quebec.
Lieut.-Col. Drury, Kingston.

The Minister Dissents.

The entire list is selected from Conservatives and the Minister of Militia, it is said, has declined to be responsible for it, because he is of the opinion that in filling honorary positions of this kind both parties should be represented. The only Liberal on the list of A. D. C.'s is Col. Gibson, who as president of the Dominion Rifles Association, could not very well be passed over.

Lieut.-Col. Gregory, who is in command on the Pacific coast, succeeding Lieut.-Col. Prior, is well known to be a Liberal, and Col. Peters is equally well known to be a Conservative. Lieut.-Col. Gregory has been passed over and Col. Peters selected. Liberal politicians recommend the former and Conservative the latter, and the former will now say that Gregory has been cast aside because of his politics.

Something Due To Government.

A militia man stated to-day that while the political complexion of the parties should not be considered, although it has always been in the past, just as races and creeds have been looked to, still an officer ought not to be rejected to because of his politics.

While the Governor-General has the right to name his own A.D.C.'s, it is urged that as the department of Militia is asked to gazette them and pay their travelling expenses, the Minister ought to have something to say in their selection.

PRIESTS WERE IN TERROR.

They Dare Not Pass Through England Without Disguises.

London, Sept. 7.—Two Belgian priests decided to pay a visit to some friends at a Roman Catholic college near Weybridge. Being diligent students of the weekly edition of The Times, they conceived the idea that to pass through any part of England during these anti-Ritualist days would be perilous to life and limb. They therefore disguised themselves as laymen, with straw hats and light check tweed suits, and in this garb presented themselves to their astonished hosts.

THRESHING IN FULL SWING

Wheat Cutting in Manitoba is Over, and Much Wheat Will be Marketed Early.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 7.—Wheat cutting is now practically finished and threshing is in full swing. Farmers are inclined to thresh as much as possible from the stock to save the necessity of stacking. There is a large acerage, which means that much wheat will be marketed early if prices remain as at present.

DESPATCHES ABOUT ALASKA.

May Have Reached England, But Nobody Knows What They Say.

London, Sept, 7.—The Foreign Office morning received despatches relating to the arrangement between the British Charge d'Affaires at Washington, Mr. Reginald Tower, and the Secretary of State, Col. John Hay, regarding the Alaskan dispute. The facts will probably not be made public until the Marquis of Salisbury has had an opportunity to consider the matter.

That "case" against Dreyfus consists almost exclusively of trash which would not be accepted as evidence in the trial of a violater of the Ontario License Act.

DREYFUS TRIAL CLOSING

The Court Will Not Send for Foreign Evidence and Dreyfus Loses Hope

ALL THE EVIDENCE PUT IN.

Counsel Begin Their Addresses—One of the Best Witnesses for the Prisoner Discredited.

Counsel Labori Has Reconsidered His Threat to Retire From the Case—The Government Commissioner Delivers His Closing Address for the Prosecution.

Rennes, Sept. 7.—M. Labori has reconsidered his threat to retire from the Dreyfus case, and appeared as usual to-day.

He announced that he had received a semi-official intimation that Col. Schwartzkoppen and Major Panizzardi, the former German and Italian military attaches at Paris, would be unable to appear personally before the court, and consequently he proposed that a rogatory commission should be telegraphed to receive their depositions.

The Government representatives did not oppose the application, but pointed out that the proposed course would cause a long adjournment.

M. Labori drew up a formal application that Col. Schwartzkobben and Major Panizzardi be cited witnesses, and that seven questions be telegraphed to them as to whether they ever had relations with Esterhazy or Dreyfus.

The court declared itself incompetent to grant M. Labori's application.

At 10.20 a. m. the Government commissioner, Major Carriere, began his speech, closing the case for the prosecution, and concluded at 11.50 a. m.

Maitre Demange will probably occupy the whole of to-morrow in his speech for the defence and Maitre Labori will speak on Saturday.

The verdict will be rendered Monday, because the police authorities are opposed to the announcement of the verdict on Saturday, if it were possible to do so, on the ground that it would be likely to lead to trouble on Sunday.

The Last Evidence.

Rennes, Sept. 7.—The final witnesses in the Dreyfus case testified to-day.

The chief of the detectives, M. Cochefert, deposed favorably regarding the attitude of Dreyfus, when Col. Du Paty de Clam dictated the bordeau to him. Dreyfus only appeared to be troubled afterwards when Du Paty de Clam questioned him.

The clerk then read a letter from Capt. Humbert to the effect that Dreyfus had expressed a keen desire in 1894 to enter the statistical section of the War Office, and saying that he met Dreyfus once carrying some voluminous packets of maps and documents, and remarked that he was acting very imprudently.

Dreyfus rose and declared Capt. Humbert's statements to be inexact.

General Mercier afterwards came to the bar, and said that he felt the deposition of Capt. Freystatter was bound to have produced considerable impression on the mind of the judges. He spoke of the attacks made on him since the Captain had testified, saying the Dreyfusard press had been calling him a false witness, etc.

The General declared that he gave an order in 1894 that nothing should be done with the various translations of the Panizzardi despatch, adding that he, himself, was present when the packet of secret papers for the court martial was taken up, and it did not contain the Panizzardi despatch. He had since questioned the judges of the court martial on the subject, but not one of them was prepared to swear that the despatch was not submitted to them, because their recollections were now rather vague.

Gen. Mercier proceeded to call attention to contradictions in Capt. Freystatter's statements, reading an old letter from the Captain to a friend, in which he declared his mind was made up in 1894, before he saw the secret dossier, and another letter from an officer who was in company with Freystatter in Madagascar, where the writer asserted that Capt. Freystatter talked of the court martial of 1894, but never mentioned the Panizzardi despatch. After this Gen. Mercier brought up two points in Capt. Freystatter's career, averring that while in Madagascar he had been guilty of an act of disobedience to his chief, and that he had also executed thirty natives.

Ponton Asks for Reinstatement.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—At Osgoode Hall this afternoon an application was made to the Divisional Court for the reopening of the suit of W H Ponton, of Napanee, against the Dominion Bank for $50,000 damages for alleged false arrest and malicious prosecution.

It will be remembered that the action came before Justice Street at Cobourg last fall, and His Lordship summarily dismissed it when the plaintiff stated that he was unable to proceed.

The application to-day was made by Holman & Co. on behalf of Ponton and A. B. Aylesworth, Q. C., opposed the appeal.

A Transvaal View.

London, Sept. 7.—The London edition of The Standard and Diggers' News, the official Boer organ, to-day says: "We can state that the diplomatic correspondence between the Transvaal and the Colonial Office is of a reassuring nature, and that the dispute has now narrowed to an issue which should make a settlement possible and even speedy. The Transvaal is prepared for all eventualities, but remains hopeful of a peaceful settlement."

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 7, 1899

WAR WITH THE TRANSVAAL.

It would appear just at present that war with the Transvaal is inevitable. The Boers seemed to recognise that fact weeks ago, when they commenced purchasing munitions of war, because the choice of peace or war lay with them, and a small country like that does not indulge in the expensive luxury of accumulating war materials unless it expects to use them. It is characteristic of Britishers to sympathize with the under dog in a fight and in this case the struggle seems to be a hopeless one, but as to the right of the matter there can be no two opinions.

A good many ill informed statements are being published as to the strength of the Boers in the event of war. We see it stated that they can put an army of 60,000 men in the field in the event of war. Another "authority" has placed their fighting strenght at 92,000. The fact of the matter is that the entire Boer population in the Transvaal, of all ages and sexes, is only 60,000, while the Uitlanders, over 80 per cent of whom are British subjects, number 87,000. The leading English military paper, the Broad Arrow, places the total available fighting material of the Boers at 20,000. Some of the Uitlanders may be forced or induced to join Kruger's army, and he may receive reinforcements from the Orange Free State and the Afrikanders of Cape Colony, but even with these it is not estimated that after deducting the percentage necessary for garrisons, etc., General Joubert will be able to place more than 15,000 men in line of battle. The Boers are well supplied with ammunition, and have good regular artillery, but the infantry are badly drilled The Boers, however, are well mounted, know the country thoroughly, and are excellent marksmen, besides being adepts in irregular warfare through experience gained in in wars with the natives. Curiously enough, the Boers, though nearly all horse men, are particularly afraid of cavalry. Though they ride themselves they always leave their horses in the rear and fight on foot. They are particularly sensitive regarding their line of retreat, and if the British cavalry can stampede their led horses in the rear the riflemen would surely bolt from any position.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Good morning.

Woodstock is suffering from a scarcity of five cent pieces, Stratford a scarcity of quarters, but in Peterborough there is of scarcity (?)

The Peterborough Central Fair is a sort of close corporation, run apparently largely for the benefit of two or more persons. Despite the efforts of the President and a few of the directors, the "oneman power" seems to prevail, with results that can better be imagined than described. If the directors persist in allowing one man to "manage" the affairs of the society for the benefit of himself and friends, the sooner it is run into the ground the better.

THE TURF REVIEW.

It is reported that $5,500 was refused a few days ago for Jasper Ayres, 2:09.

Phenol, 2:07¼, pacing, by Jersey Wilkes, has been bred to Joe Patchen.

Bingen was shown in nine classes at two horse shows and took nine blue ribbons.

The only mare bred to John R. Gentry last year is said to be Belle Warren, and she has a fine filly foal.

The Director-Winifred colt, for which George Starr paid $4,500, has been registered as The Director General.

Mr. Winters will build a mile track at the Penn Valley Stud farm. The half mile track now there is too sharp at the curves.

James Golcomb is training Zombia, 2:13¼, now owned by Mr. A. S. Bigelow of Boston, a gentleman who is accumulating a good stable.

It has been pointed out that the stallion trotting records of the great Wilkes and Electioneer families are identical, 2:06¾, for Ralph Wilkes and Bingen.

Bonnie Boy, by Patchen Wilkes, and the sire of nine in the list, has a record of 2:26, made at Cuba, N. Y., in 1897, which has never reached the Year Book authorities.

Fletcher Driver, formerly trainer for Major H. C. McDowell, who has been identified with runners for a couple of years, is to return to the trotters and pacers.

Mr. Nathan Straus, the other day, on the Speedway at New York, turned the tables on David B, with Cobwebs, although the former was driven by professional Jerome Whelpley.

HAS UNCLE SAM WON?

A Washington Story Has it That Great Britain Has Given Way

ON THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY

And That in a Temporary Agreement Canada Gets No Port on Lynn Canal.

The Direct Lie Given to the Story—British Government Deny any Knowledge of Rumored Agreement—No Negotiations on the Subject Pass Through Embassy.

New York, Sept. 6.—The Herald's Washington correspondent sends his paper the following regarding the Alaskan boundary:—

The negotiations for a modus vivendi defining a temporary boundary line between the Dominion and Alaska will be concluded within a very few days unless unforseen circumstances intervene.

Facts which came to my attention today show that Secretary Hay has convinced Great Britain of the impregnable character of the position he assumed and that Great for this country has caused her to make concessions which enable an agreement to be reached as to the location of the temporary line. The proposed line, I understand, will be located at the fork of Chilkat River, just above the Indian village of Kluchwan. Other points where the line will be located were agreed upon some months ago and are not under discussion at this time.

Canada Gets No Port.

The effect of the location of the boundary line as fixed by the Secretary and practically agreed to by Great Britain will be that the entire Lynn Canal will be under American control, and that Canada will not under the temporary agreement have a port on that waterway. The question of a Canadian port on the Lynn canal will be left to the negotiations for the permanent settlement of the dispute.

The High Joint Commission will have nothing further to do with the Alaskan boundary question, though the Americans will undoubtedly consult with Secretary Hay. It seems to be understood that the commission will not reassemble until the boundary controversy is disposed of, as the British Government in the past has indicated that the boundary dispute must be settled before the remaining questions can be settled.

British Government Denies the Story.

London, Sept. 6.—The officials of the Foreign Office say they have not officially acquiesced in any modus vivendi in the matter of the Alaska boundary dispute, and that no recent negotiations have been under consideration here.

Mr. Reginald Tower, the British Charge d'Affaires at Washington, it is added, has carried on a discussion with Col. John Hay, the United States Secretary of State, with a view to a fuller consideration of the Canadian and British views, but, it is asserted, nothing binding on either side could result from these negotiations.

No negotiations on the subject of Alaska had passed through the United States Embassy here recently, but the result of the Tower Hay conference was daily expected from Washington.

RAISES IN THE YUKON.

All Round Increase in Salaries of the Government Employees.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—There was a meeting of the Cabinet yesterday afternoon, but a bare quorum was present, consisting of Hon. Messrs. Scott, Paterson, Borden and Sir Henri Joly.

Some matters in connection with the Yukon were up for consideration. The Government decided some time ago to increase the salaries of the officials in the Klondike, and to prevent any of them from speculating in mines. It has been already stated that Commissioner Ogilvie is to get $6,000 a year, instead of $5,000, as at present.

It is now learned that the salary of Gold Commissioner Senkler will be increased to $5,000.

W. P. Clement, the legal adviser of the Council, will get a similar amount. Mr. Clement at present has the privilege of practising his profession and also of speculating in mines, if he so desires, but in future he will have to give his entire service to the Government, and cannot dabble in mining business.

As a recompense for this he will likely be made Public Administrator, and can have such fees as may arise therefrom.

All other officials in the Yukon will receive an increase. There are at present two vacancies in the Yukon Council, in addition to two for which provision was made last session, to give representation to the mining element and the people of the district generally.

Col. Deacon and Inspector John Short, visited Bobcaygeon on Tuesday last and imposed a fine of $20 and costs on a local hotelkeeper for selling liquor after hours.

MEN OF MARK.

President McKinley finds little leisure for light reading, but is a careful student of the newspapers.

Joseph Leiter has by no means decided to drop the stock market. He is a constant visitor to Wall street.

J. Pierpont Morgan is an expert pool player and an evening rarely passes when he does not enjoy an after dinner game.

Joel Chandler Harris, Georgia's famous author, breeder and poet, is to have an exhibit of Jersey cattle at the Paris exposition.

Senator Clark has just bought in Paris, for his Washington house, an old stained glass window, once the property of the Countess de Jause, for $30,000.

Sims Reeves says he lost $400,000 during his career as a public singer because he was too conscientious to appear on the stage unless sure he could do his best.

Ex-Representative Ben T. Cable is to furnish much of the money for the building of a chapter house for the Zeta Psi fraternity at the University of Michigan.

John Stuart, superintendent of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, was formerly a telegraph operator at Hokendauqua, Pa. He is now receiving $15,000 a year.

The Russian Prince Cantacuzene, whose betrothal to Miss Julia Grant has just been announced, has retired to his Russian estates to make preparations for the reception of his bride.

Before Rear Admiral Kautz left for Samoa a young woman asked him whether he had ever "felt afraid in battle." "Once," he answered. "A stray ball knocked my cigar out of my mouth and there wasn't another aboard."

The late ex-Governor Flower was once asked by a less successful financier how to succeed in Wall street. "By working harder than at any other trade or profession on earth," was the answer. "But won't that wear you out?" "Not before your time."

Mayor Moir of Scranton was years ago a journeyman tailor in Philadelphia. John Ross of the former city needed a workman, and Mr. Moir, being recommended, was offered inducements to go to Scranton. In February last Mr. Moir was elected chief executive of the city.

Henry G. Kittredge, editor of the Textile World, Boston, has been appointed assistant director of textiles for the commissioner general of the United States to the Paris exposition of 1900. Mr. Kittredge has long been identified with the textile industries of the United States.

Russell Sage is no friend of the camera, and very rarely is it that a photographer is quick enough to get a snap shot of the millionaire. As for sitting for a picture, that has probably occurred less frequently during the millionaire's long life than that of any other equally prominent man in the country.

TOWN TOPICS.

The curfew bell was rung last night at 8:30 o'clock. Nothing sensational resulted. It just rung; that was all.—Freeport Bulletin.

Abilene is getting to be a front porch town. Nearly every resident improvement includes a porch.—Abilene (Kan.) Reflector.

The companies are selling their gas so cheaply in New York that several of the metropolitan newspapers are filled with it every day.—Detroit Journal.

Buffalo is to have a new union station to cost $6,000,000, with a waiting room 80 by 235 feet, that will be the largest in the world. How about this, Boston?—Gardiner Reporter-Journal.

Buffalo is in a flutter over an extremely wicked Midway that it expects to have at the Pan-American exposition, and can't think of a suitable name for it. Why not call it Hamburg Paradise?—Rochester Democrat.

All because of a blessed war to the knife squabble between rival companies New York is now enjoying 65 cent gas. Father Knickerbocker will be a weak old gentleman if he lets them restore the higher rate.

MOTIVES AND METHODS.

A Missouri girl killed herself because her sweetheart had gone to the war.

Robert F. Hayes, a Boston clerk, hanged himself with his necktie as the noose.

Because his mother would not let him go in swimming an Arkansas boy cut his throat.

Forked branches of an apple tree were used as a noose by a Stroudsburg (Pa.) suicide.

Champagne with arsenic in it was used by a San Francisco man as a means of self destruction.

Her husband wanted to move, and she did not. That led a Connecticut woman to drink poison.

Fearing that his wife would scold him for getting home late a newly made London bridegroom committed suicide.

"Ah, to see the moon at a distance of one meter," was the note left by a Paris suicide explaining his motive for death.

THE CYNIC.

After a man has told you his troubles you know more about his kin.

You will find a loafer leech attached to every industrious man or woman.

An honest man is one who admits that his baldness is due to old age and not to sickness.

Every bridegroom finds an excuse to return from his wedding journey sooner than originally planned.

Every circus man lays all his plans on the assumption that the people are chumps. Every circus man gets rich.

After the people have worked themselves to death to raise a preacher's salary, he decides that he can do better elsewhere and resigns.

It would be interesting to know how much longer the week should be, in order that the men may find their Sunday underwear ready without fussing.—Atchison Globe.

ELECTRIC SPARKS.

Work of laying the cable from Vancouver to Fanning island and thence to Australia and New Zealand will begin this summer, it is announced.

The new Nernst electric light dispenses with the usual vacuum bulb and replaces the hairlike filament with a short bar of refractory material, thereby greatly increasing the light and cheapening the cost.

Experiments have been made lately by French government officials with a new telephone, which enables persons to converse without putting their mouth and ear to the apparatus, the words being distinctly audible in any part of the room.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my derndest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crush him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

CHICAGO'S FETE.

Lord Minto and Sir Wilfrid Expected to Decorate the Event.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—The corner stone of the new Federal building will be laid on October 10 by President McKinley and a Supreme Court Justice will give an oration.

The parade will be headed by President McKinley and President Diaz of Mexico, and others in carriages will be the Governor-General of Canada, Lord Minto, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Admiral Dewey and General Miles.

At night there will be a banquet, at which President McKinley, Lord Minto and Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be among the speakers.

Stabbed With a Pin.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—A peculiar complaint was made to the police yesterday. A young man from Western Ontario left his seat in the grand stand to get an article for his mother, who sat beside him. While passing out of the row of seats a middle-aged woman, exceptionally well dressed, and wearing valuable jewellry, drew a hat pin from her bonnet and stabbed the boy in the thigh. The pin reached the bone, and several young men who sat beside the woman witnessed the act of cruelty, and summoning a policeman, demanded the woman's arrest. The policeman took the woman's name and address. The boy was taken to the ambulance tent where the pain was relieved by an injection of morphine.

A Costly Scheme.

Montreal, Que. Sept. 6. — Major-General Hutton, in command of the Canadian militia, is in the city to-day, having attended the banquet to Major Girouard, of Soudan railway fame, last evening, and has made the announcement of a big scheme he has under way for next September, when he expects to have twenty-five thousand troops in Montreal for two weeks. The troops will represent the different arms of the British army and the Colonial militia, Australia, India, New Zealand, South Africa, etc., being representated.

There will also be detachments from the United States. The Major-General intends to have a big military tournament. The expense of travel and rations will be borne by the Canadian Government. A subscription list is now being opened to cover other expenses.

The British War Office is kept busy issuing denials to reports of troops being ordered to South Africa. They stop the reports but not the troops.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

How They Used to Kill.

In repairing an old house in Dartford, England, not long ago the workmen found several ancient death warrants, bearing the signature of the Duke of Portland, minister of King George III. One of them, dated June, 1798, gives an idea of what legal hanging and quartering were like in those days. It runs:

"Whereas, James O'Coigley, having been attainted of high treason and had sentence passed upon him to be drawn upon a hurdle to the place of execution and to be there hanged by the neck, but not until he is dead, but that, being alive, he shall be taken down and his bowels taken out and burned before his face, that his head shall be severed from his body and his body divided into four parts, and that his head and body shall be disposed of as we think fit, and whereas we think fit to remit that part of the sentence directing the burning of his bowels and dividing the body into four parts, our will and pleasure is that he shall be drawn and hanged and have his head severed from his body."

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore?" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. THE CYNIC.

All of us are very clever in finding excuses for not working more.

The most sensible woman will "put on" a little before a preacher.

A man is not really prominent until he has officiated at three prominent funerals.

Some women who never work for anything else will work like slaves for a church.

An old maid dearly loves to watch a quarrel between a husband and wife to see how it comes out.

If a man truly loves his wife, he is very apt to become confidential and tell her a lot of stories on the other fellows.

In talking it is well to know that people will not remember what you are saying unless they can use it against you.

A man always rises in his own estimation when he gets on familiar terms with a person of whom he once stood in awe.

There probably never was a woman too good to try to pass her children off as under age when traveling on the railroad.—Atchison Globe.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Peacocks are reliable weather prophets. Before a storm the gaudy birds become restless and clamorous.

The green woodpecker is said to laugh his "Ya-ha-ha" in different, more liquid tones when rain is coming, and especially gifted persons claim his cry really changes to "rain, rain, rain!"

In Dorsetshire, England, they foretell storms by the flight of the rooks. When they are pitch falling or playing at tumbling, diving and wheeling in the air, they say a storm is due.

Sea fowl are very clever in foretelling a storm. To a sailor bad weather means wind, and to a landsman it means rain, but the screaming of the water birds usually foretells a change of some sort for the worse in the prevailing weather.

THE TENSION INCREASES

All Indications in Britain Are That the Cloud is About to Burst.

PAUL KRUGER'S REPLY.

Admits Britain's Right to Protect Her Subjects But Denies Her Suzerainty.

The Signs Are All Those Which the English Are Accustomed to See Just Previous to War—All Depends Upon the Cabinet Meeting—An Ultimatum Probable.

London, Sept. 6.—This morning's news sheds no new light on the Transvaal crisis.

The signs which the English are accustomed to see just previous to a war continue.

General opinion tends to the belief that the Cabinet Council will result in an ultimatum, followed by an immediate backdown on the part of the Boers or the commencement of hostilities by Great Britain.

The Pall Mall Gazette to-day says:—"It is feared that during the past 24 hours the probability of war has become appreciably greater."

But unless the Boers take the initiative, which at present is improbable, it is pretty certain that the issue of peace or war lies solely in the result of Friday's Cabinet Council, hence public attention is centered more upon the signs of the times as exhibited at the army stations and dock yards, than in the South Africa itself.

It is reported this afternoon that Mr. Chamberlain has sent a reply to the Transvaal Government's latest proposition, but it seems improbable that Mr. Chamberlain has done this.

The Times publishes a despatch from Newcastle, Natal, which says that during yesterday's debate in the Raad regarding the proximity of British troops to the Transvaal territory, Herr Delarey, a member of the Raad, said: "The Boers only require half a day's notice to fight."

The correspondent of the Times, continuing, says: "Many conclude that the defiant tone of the speeches are not unconnected with the fact that the Mauser ammunition which had been stopped at Delagoa Bay, has now been received. The Pretoria Government admits that a consignment of cannon is now on its way from France. It is the evident aim of the Boers to secure time until grass and water are plentiful, the burghers fully recognizing that a peaceful settlement of the difficulty is out of the question.

Kruger's Reply.

Pretoria, Sept. 6.—The latest reply of the Transvaal Republic to the British demands has been published.

Regret is expressed that the proposals of Great Britain are unacceptable. The Transvaal Government admits Great Britain's rights under the convention and international law to protect her subjects, but denies a claim of suzerainty.

The reply agrees to a further conference regarding the franchise representation.

An Old Lady Cremated.

Hamilton Sept. 6.—A very hot fire broke out in the cottage owned by Mr. C. G. Carleton, on the north side of the piers, at Hamilton Beach, early this morning, and five cottages are in ruins together with most of their contents.

The fire is supposed to have originated in the kitchen of Mr. Carleton's cottage, and the inmates had scarcely time to make their escape. The mother of Mrs. Carleton, an old lady who slept in a room alone, was cremated, and Mrs. Carleton was severely burned in getting out of the house.

Mrs. J. H. Horning, whose cottage adjoins Carleton's, was also severely burned and her cottage destroyed.

The other cottages were owned and occupied by D. Rae, C. M. Judd, and T. M. Williamson. No fire-fighting apparatus of any kind is kept at the Beach and the cottagers were compelled to pull down a shack to save the remaining buildings.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jus' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heatedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 35 cents each, but with $35 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

"For ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain" the powers which are striving to partition China seem to be every whit as peculiar as the heathen Chinee himself.—New York Tribune.

Did you ever notice how some women break down after marriage? As the family increases, the poor mothers lose their graceful, symmetrical forms, their faces are full of lines and no vestige of youth remains. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription works wonders for such women. A woman need never lose her shape or beauty. If she will take "Favorite Prescription" during gestation, she will not be worried. Morning sickness will be almost wholly unknown. Nervousness will be prevented. When baby comes, there will be little or no pain, and the ordeal will be shortened. Recovery will be rapid, and the patient will emerge with her old-time attractiveness of face and figure. The mother who takes this wonderful medicine can keep her health and youthful looks, even though a half-dozen children play about her knees. No other women's remedy is its equal. Never allow the medicine dealer to substitute something else.

This remedy contains no trace of alcohol, nor opium, nor any of the dangerous drugs which enter so largely into many advertised "compounds," recommended for the cure of invalid women. It will not create craving for stimulants.

"For five years my wife was in an almost helpless condition, suffering from female weakness," writes J. S. Everitt, Esq., of Hagerman, Washington Co., Fla. "Last September I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. She took several bottles of the medicine and gave birth to a ten pound son on January 31st, 1898. She is now sound and well and doing her housework."

Every family needs a medical guide and instructor. The best ever published is the Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages. It will be sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of customs and mailing only. This book has been not inaptly termed "The Bible of the Body," for it is to the body what the Bible is to the soul,—the great chart of salvation.

Scotch Fingering Yarn.

We are selling this year a heavy ribbed Worsted Stocking in the largest sizes for twenty-five cents. They are made on our own electric power knitting machines, from a fine quality of pure fingering yarn. The color is an excellent glossy black. This quality is usually sold from 40c. to 50c. per pair, yet our price is only 13c in smaller sizes, running gradually up to 25c in the largest sizes. If you were able to get this yarn for 3c. per skein the yarn alone would cost all we ask, yet this yarn is sold for 8c per skein. Come and look at them and wonder how we do it. The Port Hope Knitting Works, 382 George street, Peterborough.

An Old Settler.

There lives in the township of Douro one of Peterborough's original settlers, in the person of Mr. John O'Brien, father of Mr. William O'Brien, the popular clerk of the municipality. Mr. O'Brien came to Peterborough in 1824 with the party of emigrants of which the Hon. Peter Robinson was the head. They followed the river St. Lawrence from Quebec, and the lake until they got to Cobourg, where the party struck across to Rice Lake and ascended the river Otonabee in small boats, landing on the spot now occupied by the bridge works. There was but one house in Peterborough at that time—a shanty occupied by a man named Marshall. Mr. O'Brien at once took up land in Douro, where he has resided ever since. He is still hale and hearty, notwithstanding his 86 years, and looks as though he might live for several years yet.

More Sewers.

There is to be a considerable amount of sewer work done this fall. The Council at its last meeting decided to go ahead with the work at once.

AN OLD PIONEER GONE.

Death of Mr. John Leahy, of Douro, on Friday Last.

On Friday, Sept. 1st, one of Douro's oldest and most respected citizens, in the person of Mr. John Leahy, treasurer of the municipality, passed away at the good old age of 86 years.

Mr. Leahy came out to Canada as one of the Robinson emigrants, leaving Ireland from the Cove of Cork, with his father and two sisters, in the year 1825. The party of emigrants, a very large number for those days, sailed to the new land in nine ships. Of these Mr. Leahy remembered the "Fortitude," of Scarboro, in which he had passage, the "Resolution," of London; the "Alvin," a brig with two masts, and the "John Barry," of Cork. The other five vessels were an assorted lot of three and two masters, fitted out for the purpose in view. They did not all sail at once, but were despatched two ships together with an interval of a day between the sailings. Leaving Cork on May 10th they reached Quebec on June 27th, the voyage, a long and tedious one, occupying forty-nine days.

From Quebec they reached Montreal by steamer, and were sent on and housed for some time at Lachine, just above Montreal. The distance to Kingston was made in open boats, batteaus, they were called. A steamer brought them on as far as Cobourg, and a few days after in rough wagons they reached the shores of Rice Lake, somewhere about where the village of Harwood now stands.

Each settler of 21 years of age and over was allotted 100 acres of land. Mr. Leahy being at that time only 11 years old, did not share in the distribution. The land secured by his father was lot 6, in the 7th concession of Douro, and in this neighborhood a great many farms were located. Seven of the Leahys in one group drew land to the extent of 700 acres. This was held by Mr. M. Leahy and four of his sons—100 acres each, Mr. Leahy's father 100 acres, and another M. Leahy 100 acres.

Mr. Leahy's recollections of the settlement were quite interesting Of the pioneers of 1825 there are eight now living, six men and two women. All were of course children at the time of the settlement, The men surviving are Messrs. Thos Sullivan, David Quinn, John Torpey, Wm. O'Brien, John O'Brien, and John Crandley, and the women Mrs John Torpey and Mrs Patrick Leahy.

Mrs. Leahy, the partner of the deceased, preceded him but a few months ago after a long and useful life.

The surviving children of deceased are: Mr. Patrick Leahy, now living in the Western States; Mr. Wm. Leahy, of Otonabee; Mrs. John O'Leary, of Indian River; Mr. Bartholomew Leahy, of Douro; Mr. James Leahy, who lives on the homestead; Mrs. J. Allen, of Douro, and Miss Leahy, also of Douro.

The City of Peterborough will bring a large excursion to town from the south side of Rice Lake to-morrow.

Bad Street Watering.

The contractor for the northern district who has charge of watering the streets, gives either "a feast or a famine." During the hot months of the year he did his work so poorly that there was a general feeling of indignation. For days at a time he never appeared on certain streets; now, when the streets require little water, he has them deep with mud. We hope the Council will at least "dock" him for neglect of duty, and see that he gets no more contracts from the town.

CATTLE POISONING CASE.

Wm. Spilsbury is Committed for Trial by Magistrate Edmison.

The preliminary hearing in the Spilsbury case, in which the charge is that of attempting to poison a steer, opened at the Court House, Wednesday afternoon before County Magistrate Edmison and was committed yesterday. There was a large attendance and considerable interest was manifested in the proceedings. County Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution and Mr. John Green appeared for the accused.

James Ruth was the first witness He said he was a dealer in cattle. He bought a pair of two-year-old steers from Andrew Dobbin, and paid for them a week ago. When witness came to where the steers were, on the road opposite Mr. Dobbin's fallow,—a boy, Chester Mowry, and his own son were with him—he saw the accused stooping down close to the head of one of the steers, with his hands down over his knees in front of the steer. His side was to the witness. When the accused saw him the latter went away into the woods. Witness gathered up some of the stuff of which the steer had eaten, put it in a piece of paper, and showed it to Mr. Dobbin, and told him he had better remove the stuff as there was enough on the roadside to poison all his stock. Witness took the animal house.

To Mr. Green—Witness said he had known accused to speak to for several years. Dobbin told witness to take the steer home and if he died it would be all right. When witness saw Spilsbury near the steer he remarked that he was feeding the steer something. He was certain it was Spilsbury he saw. When witness was about 90 or 100 yards from Spilsbury the latter suddenly left the steer and took to the woods. Witness took up what he thought was Paris green and chop made of oats. It was between 8 and 9 o'clock.

Andrew Dobbin testified that he was a farmer living in North Monaghan, and sold two steers two years old to Mr. Ruth—a red, and a red and white. The price was $28, and it was paid at witness' barn. Could not on account of a rise in the ground see the cattle from where he was. Ruth bought two steers and two cows. He took witness aside and showed him a paper which looked like chop and Paris green, which Ruth said he found a man feeding to his cattle. Ruth left the parcel with witness and he delivered it to Constable Cochrane. Witness was informed that the steer was sick and it subsequently died. He was present at a post mortem examination.

To Mr. Green—Witness showed the package to Mr. Bailey. It was in the cupboard till then Thursday, when witness took it to Mr. Cochrane. The steer died on Friday. Did not say that he had got Spilsbury where he wanted him. Witness took some part in laying the information.

George Cochrane, High County Constable laid the information in this case. He got a parcel from Andrew Dobbin on Friday. The contents looked like chop and some substance mixed with it He put it in his safe until he delivered it to Dr. Johnston. He arrested the accused. In reply to the witness' question to accused as to what he was doing at the point where the poison was said to have been found the answer was that he was there fixing the fence.

Dr. Johnston, a veterinary surgeon practising in Peterborough a graduate of the Ontario Veterinary College was called in last Thursday morning to treat a steer at Mr. Ruth's. The animal had very plain symptoms of acute diarrhoea, pulse high, lack of appetite, extremities cold, wanted to lie down. Went in the evening about 6.30; the animal was worse Went back next morning and the steer could hardly raise his head. Heard about 2 o'clock that the steer was dead. Witness and Dr. Poole made a post mortem examination. We concluded that the animal died from an irritant poison. Found traces of arsenic. There were symptoms of arsenical poisoning. Mr. Cochrane gave him a box said to contain a part of what was gathered in the road. It gave a reaction indicating a slight quantity of arsenic. There was Paris green in the mixture.

To Mr. Green—Found only traces of arsenic in the animal. Could not swear in what form the arsenic was administered.

Dr. Poole, a veterinary surgeon in practice here, helped Dr. Johnston perform a post mortem examination of the steer in question. From the symptoms found by Dr. Johnston he would infer that the animal was suffering from an irritant poison. Tested the contents of the stomach and got a partial reaction, similar to that got by a test of the mixture. As far as the test went there was nothing to show what the exact nature of the irritant poison was.

The case was adjourned till 10 o'clock on Thursday morning.

Committed for Trial.

At the opening of the case on Thursday morning, Mr. Wood, County Crown Attorney, stated as this was a preliminary hearing, though he had other witnesses whose evidence would be largely corroborative of the evidence already given, he would not call them but would rest the case at this point.

Mr. Green said he was satisfied with the arraignment and proceeded to address the court. He said there were three points to be established, namely that the accused placed the poison where it was found, that the animal actually got that poison, and that the animal died from the effects of that poison.

The Magistrate in referring to the case said that he had known the accused for about thirty-five years, and it was difficult for him to believe that he could be guilty of such a crime. But he had nothing to do with that. It was for him to consider whether there was evidence to connect Spilsbury with the affair. After reviewing the evidence the Magistrate said he must come to the conclusion that there was sufficient evidence of this fact to warrant him in placing further investigation in the hands of a jury. He felt he would not be doing his duty if he did not make an order committing the prisoner for trial.

The accused was accordingly committed for trial.

The magistrate said he would accept bail, but up to ten o'clock last night no bail was offered.

The Great Prelate Says the Poor Are Worse Off Than Cattle.

ROBBED BY THE WEALTHY

The Well to do Were Afraid of the Cost of the Proposed Old Age Pension.

Eminent Catholic Attributes Misery of the Poor to the Vices and Teaching of the Rich and Educated—The Rich Also Robbed the Poor of Their Religion.

London, Sept. 8.—Cardinal Vaughan, in addressing the annual conference of the Catholic Truth Society of Stockport, uttered some scathing words upon the condition of the masses in England, framing a heavy indictment against the moneyed classes.

The suppression of monasteries and guilds, the transference of their lands and of the great commons of England to the rich, created a lackland and beggared poor. Without ties to bind the people to the land they had driven in to the towns, where they had herded apart from better classes.

Millions of human creatures were housed worse than the cattle and the horses of many a lord or squire. Nearly a million of the London poor needed rehousing. The medical authority had reported against 141,000 houses as insanitary, in which the poor were huddled together in numbers varying from four to twelve and more in a single room. What delicacy, modesty, or self-respect could be expected in men and women whose bodies were so shamelessly packed together? In the annual death rate throughout England one in 14 was that of a pauper in the workhouse. In Liverpool it was one in seven, in Manchester one in five, and in London also one in five. The well-to do were afraid of the cost of old age pensions, but surely the rich were bound to tax themselves or to be taxed for their poorer brethren. The rich had also robbed the poor of their religion and it was no exaggeration to say that the present condition of the poorer classes, economically and religiously, was attributable in a large measure to the vices and teaching of the rich and the educated in times past.

SPEAKS OUT AT LAST

German Denial of the Statement That Dreyfus Sold French Secrets.

DREYFUS IS INNOCENT.

The Statement Made by The Reichsanzeiger, Semi-Official Organ.

Declared in the Most Positive Manner That No Relations or Connections of Any Kind Ever Existed Between Captain Dreyfus and Any German Agent.

Berlin, Sept. 8.—The Reichsanzeiger this this evening in the official portion of the paper, publishes the following statement:—

"We are authorized to repeat herewith the declaration which the Imperial Government, while loyally observing the reserve demanded in regard to the international affairs of another country, has made concerning the French captain, Dreyfus.

"For the preservation of his own dignity, and the fulfillment of a duty to humanity, Prince Von Munster, after obtaining the orders of the Emperor, repeatedly made in December, 1894, and in January, 1895, to M. Hanotoux, M. Dupuy and M. Casimir-Perier, declarations to the effect that the Imperial Embassy in France never maintained either directly or indirectly any relations with Dreyfus.

"Secretary of State Von Buelow, in the Reichstag January 24, 1898, made the following statement: 'I declare in the most positive manner that no relations or connections of any kind ever existed between the French ex-captain, Dreyfus, now on Devil's Island, and any German agents.'"

Troops From India.

Bombay, Sept. 8.—The 19th Hussars and the 21st Field Battery of Artillery have been ordered to leave Secunderabad for the Transvaal Sept. 18th.

NOW PEACE OR WAR HANGS IN THE BALANCE!

The Cabinet Council Began With Gravity, But at Its Close the Ministers Chatted Gaily and Went Out in a Jolly Mood.

BELIEF THAT BOERS WILL TAKE THE OFFENSIVE.

British Troops Leave India for the Scene of Action. Doubts and Statements as to the Attitude of the Afrikanders.

Cape Colony Weary of the Tension.

Johannesburg, Sept. 8.—The anxiety here in regard to the crisis has been intensified by the tone of the debate in the Raad. The railroad offices continue to be besieged by those wanting to get out of the country.

London, Sept. 8.—The correspondent of the Times at Newcastle, Natal, says: There would be little surprise here if the Boers assumed the aggressive immediately. It is a matter of astonishment that so few British troops are in the country, especially on the [illegible] border.

London, Sept. 8.—The Cabinet Council here to-day attracted greater public interest than any meeting of the Ministers for years past. A well-dressed crowd of people cordially greeted the most prominent of the Cabinet Ministers, and impatiently thronged the precincts of the Foreign Office throughout the session, eagerly scrutinizing the faces of those coming and going, in the hope of obtaining a glimmering of the outcome of the momentous event. The war spirit was evident on all sides, and the generals were enthusiastically cheered as they appeared, the crowd evidently understanding that they had been summoned to be in readiness in the event of Ministers wishing their advice.

A crowd of from 2,000 to 3,000 persons assembled at the White Hall entrance to Downing street, where the Foreign and Colonial Offices are situated, at an early hour. Mr. Chamberlain and the Earl of Selborne, the Under-Secretary were the first arrivals, and were followed by Field Marshall Lord Wolseley, the Commander-in-Chief of the Army; and Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, who, it is said, will have the field command in the event of a war with the Transvaal; and Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood, Adjutant-General of the Forces.

The arrival of Lord Salisbury was the signal for tremendous cheering. Next came the Duke of Devonshire, the Lord President of the Council; Right Hon. Henry Chaplin, the President of the Local Government Board; and the Earl of Halsbury, the Lord High Chancellor, who passed unnoticed.

As showing the importance of the meeting of the Council, Under-Secretaries Wyndham of the War Department and Brodrick of the Foreign Office were summoned to attend. By one o'clock all the Cabinet Ministers were present.

The Council was concluded at 3 p.m. A reporter asked the Right Hon. Walter Long, if any conclusion had been reached. He said: "All I can say is that we must have patience."

The Ministers came out arm in arm, laughing and chatting, greatly contrasting with the manner in which they went in. Lord Salisbury again received an ovation.

Although the Foreign Office has not given out an official statement, the general impression was that no ultimatum would be sent to the Transvaal at present, and that a time-limit was placed for a conference at Cape Town.

The short duration of the Council, and the early departure of the military men summoned were taken as indications that the situation is more pacific, though, of course, this is only surmise.

Pretoria, Sept. 8.—In the Raad yesterday President Kruger said he knew the Lord would give a good judgment in the dispute between Britain and the Transvaal and that "If Mr. Chamberlain stood before the countenance of God his own conscience must acknowledge there was no suzerainty."

All depended, the President declared, upon the reply received from Mr. Chamberlain. He (Kruger) had given much away already. He had given his jacket and trousers and the only thing left was independence.

It was said continued President Kruger, that it was the desire of the British to wipe out the defeat at Majuba Hill, but it was the noblest thing Britain ever did, when after that, she restored the independence of the Transvaal. That was due to Mr. Gladstone, who saw that the petitions sent to the Queen were false. "That deed," said Mr. Kruger, "is indelibly engraved on the minds of the inhabitants of the Transvaal as the noblest of England's deeds."

The President's declaration that if it came to fighting, God would be the arbiter was loudly cheered.

In conclusion, Mr. Kruger said he hoped the Raad would wait until the reply to the last despatch had been received. If the proposal for a conference was rejected, the Transvaal government would do its best to meet the other side. God, he said, held the hearts of the people in his hand and if the people called on Him He would [illegible]. He [illegible] the lot of all. The President also said he earnestly hoped that Mr. Chamberlain's heart would be [illegible].

Cape Town, Sept. 8.—The reports of the Raad debate at Pretoria published here created intense feeling and the disparaging reference to Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Alfred Milner, are resented. The feeling displayed by members of the Raad surprised those who believed a peaceful solution would be reached; and such a solution in the opinion of many has been rendered very difficult.

In spite of the downfall of rain, 1,500 workmen assembled last night, and passed a resolution imploring a prompt determination by the Imperial Government of the present tension which is causing grave distress, bring the community face to face with bankruptcy, alienating the moderate element here and in the Transvaal and sapping British prestige."

The resolution also affirms unabated confidence in Sir Alfred Milner.

The meeting which was [illegible], closed with cheers for Chamberlain, Milner and Rhodes, and with groans for Kruger and Schreiner.

London, Sept. 8.—A special despatch received here to-day from Lady-Smith, Natal, says that the British troops there are actively engaged in manoeuvres over the hilly country, subsequent to a parade of the forces. Continuing the despatch says:

With the transportation and equipment the finest ever seen in South Africa, and the health of the men excellent, everything is ready for war.

All the advices confirm the presence of a large number of armed Boers on the border. They are described as being bellicose, and it is rumored that they have completed arrangements to [illegible] all pools and springs likely to supply the invading force with water. Unrest is reported among the Natal natives, and this, it is suspected, is due to Boer influences.

PERILS OF THE DEEP

Survivors of a Toronto Vessel Found Near Thunder Bay Island.

FOUR DAYS IN OPEN BOAT

Only the Captain and One Sailor Were Rescued, Remainder of Crew Probably Perished.

The Schooner Lost on Saturday Afternoon Last About Sixty Miles from Goderich—Caught in a Gale of Wind and Sank—The Lost Vessel Belonged to Toronto.

Toronto, Sept.—A despatch from Mackinaw City, Michigan, says that the steamer Case, passing up last night, had on board Capt. Freeman and one sailor, Nelson Alture, the only survivers of the Canadian schooner Lisgar, which foundered in Lake Huron at one o'clock on Sunday afternoon. They had drifted in the yawl 91 hours, when picked up on Thursday morning twenty miles below Thunder Bay Island. Capt. Freeman thinks the remainder of the crew all perished.

The schooner Lisgar, of Toronto, was lost on Sunday afternoon last about 60 miles from Goderich, in Lake Huron. Her crew numbered six men and one woman. Capt. Freeman, of St. Catharines, was in charge of the Lisgar. The captain's wife was cook; Owen Gallagher of St. Catharines, mate; Pat Joyce of the same place, and Frank Mollett, of Kingston, deck hands. There were two other deck hands, one from Tonawanda, N.Y., and one from Buffalo, whose names are unknown. With the schooner Grimsby, the Lisgar was in tow of the steam barge Clinton, bound for Depot Harbor, and loaded with coal from Buffalo, when, shortly after noon, at a point 30 miles northwest of Southampton, they were caught in a gale of wind, and the Lisgar, which was in the middle, suddenly sank, a total loss. The lost schooner belonged to the Matthews line, of Toronto, and the Clinton and the Grimsby were of the same fleet. The Lisgar was an old and rather hard looking craft, but was considered seaworthy. She was tied up at Milloy's wharf for several weeks at the beginning of the season, and before leaving she was freshly caulked.

HE BLED TO DEATH.

Sad and Terrible Death of a Sawmill Employee.

Smith's Falls, Sept. 7.—The sawmills of the Gillies Bros. Co., at Braeside were the scene of a frightful accident yesterday afternoon, in which Frank Reid lost his life. While a piece of three-inch deal was being edged it got stuck in the saw. Mr. Reid tried to overcome the difficulty by moving the adjustable saw. A piece of edging flew back and struck him in the groin, cutting the main artery. He pulled it out and walked a few steps, asked for a cup of water, and then dropped to the floor. He bled to death in a few minutes.

ATTACKED BY HIGHWAYMEN.

A Cornwall Man Knocked Down, Bound and Gagged.

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 7.—About two o'clock this morning Alvin Pescod was waylaid by four highwaymen at the corner of Pitt and Third street. He was knocked down with the butt end of a revolver, searched, bound and gagged. Another man who happened along was served in the same way. Four shots were fired at Officer Lalonde, who appeared on the scene, but none of them took effect. He retreated in search of help, and in his absence the robbers decamped.

TO ARREST DECOMPOSITION

Dr. Rechter Claims that He Can Preserve Dead Bodies.

Brussels, Sept. 8.—The process of arresting decomposition after death, according to Dr. Rechter's recent discovery, is now being tested at the Brussels Hospital with complete success. A body which, when placed last week in the preserving chamber, had reached an advanced stage of decomposition, is now in an excellent state of preservation, thus placing beyond doubt the utility of Dr. Rechter's method.

The Dutch Traitors?

London, Sept. 8.—The Times published a despatch from Mafeking, which said: "Col. Baden-Powell will review the troops at Ramathlabama to-morrow. Large numbers of Boers are moving about the border near there. There is uneasiness over the number of Transvaal Dutch here. It is feared they might join the invaders in case of a raid."

PLEADS FOR DREYFUS

Demange Thunders Indignantly Against His Accusers.

LABORI MAY NOT SPEAK

He is Offensive to the Court and Differs from His Colleague With Whom He Disputes.

Probable Verdict on Monday—Lord Chief Justice of England Occupies a Seat in Court and is an Attentive Listener—A Fancy Price Paid for Standing Room.

Rennes, Sept. 8.—The hall of the Lycee was crowded this morning at the opening of the fifth day of the fifth week of the second trial by court martial of Captain Alfred Dreyfus, of the artillery, charged with treason.

There was a large attendance of ladies and newspaper writers, who sat up all night long in in order to secure front places. At an early hour a long line was formed of people awaiting admission. Standing room at the back of the court now commands fifteen and twenty francs for places, and the demand is increasing as the trial approaches the end.

Among the privileged witnesses today was Baron Russell, of Killowen, Lord Chief Justice of England, who was conducted to a seat by General Chamoin and M. Paleologue, of the French Foreign Office. The Lord Chief Justice was seated at the back of the judges' table. He came here specially from Paris, where he has attended the sessions of the Anglo-Venezuelan boundary arbitration commission, in order to see something of the trial.

Demange Opens.

Maitre Demange at once opened his speech for the defence. In eloquent terms and with impressive delivery he brought out strong evidence against Esterhazy. During the course of his remarks he cried, "Do you think, if Dreyfus and Esterhazy had been before the court martial of 1894, that the court would have condemned Capt. Dreyfus?"

As he asked this question counsel pointed to the prisoner sitting before him and added, "No." Dreyfus to day appeared cheerful, and smiled and shook hands with his counsel on entering the court.

The English Chief Justice followed the speech of M. Demange with the closest attention. The lawyer gave a very fine performance, so far as the audience was concerned. His voice was beautifully modulated, sometimes soft and persuasive and at other times sharply argumentative. Finally he filled the room with his stentorian tones as he thundered with indignation at the charges against Dreyfus, the shameful weakness of the prosecution and in denunciation of Esterhazy. The gestures and features of M. Demange were equally expressive.

The front rows of the chief witnesses' seats were empty except for the presence of M. Trarieux, the former Minister of Justice, and M. Cavaignac, former Minister of War, all the generals and officers having left Rennes, by order of the Minister of War, the General the Marquis de Gallifet.

Col. Picquart also left Rennes, although he holds no rank in the army.

Dreyfus Impassible.

Dreyfus listened to the oration of M. Demange with a mask of impassibility resembling his frozen attitude during the first days of the trial.

Whatever the prisoner's feelings were as he heard M. Demange pleading for his liberty, he carefully concealed them. M. Demange was still speaking at one o'clock and he announced that he would need another two hours and a half to finish his plea, so the court adjourned until 7.30 to-morrow morning, thus fixing the opening of the court on Saturday an hour later than usual. The fact that Maitre Labori has to speak, and that, probably, the Government Commissary, Major Carriere, will reply, makes it practically certain that the verdict will not be given before Monday.

The general impression formed was that the speech of M. Demange must have had a certain effect on the judges, as it was a strong effort, argumentively.

Will Labori Speak?

There was a rumor after the adjournment of the court that M. Labori had decided not to speak, the idea being that his abstention from so doing, in view of the irritating effect his very utterance had on the court, would be rather an advantage than otherwise to Dreyfus.

M. Labori was asked if there was any truth in this report and he replied with a shrug of the shoulders, apparently conveying the impression that the matter was under consideration.

It was generally noted to day that when M. Labori entered the court this morning he spoke to M. Demange in a deprecating tone, and a sharp discussion ensued, almost bordering on a dispute.

The same thing occurred during the usual brief suspension of the sitting. The two lawyers apparently differ about the best method of conducting the case, which, it was said, boded no good for Dreyfus.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEMS.

The Municipal Convention in Hamilton recently discussed the inequalities and anomalies of the Assessment Act. Assessment Commissioner Pratt, of Ottawa complained that it was impossible to have an equalised assessment on personal property under the present system, which did not provide any basis on which the assessor could use his judgment. The complaint was also raised that joint-stock companies were favored at the expense of the private individual in the matter of personal taxation. The following resolution was unanimously carried, and Mr. Pratt, the mover, will make every effort to bring the case before the Legislature: "That the law as it now stands in assessing personal property or income is unjust, impracticable and impossible of equalization; that no basis is given the assessor upon which his judgment can be brought to bear, as in the assessing of real property; that each person to be assessed for personal property or income should be required to make an annual return of personalty or income to the assessment department, as is required in Great Britain and the United States; that all incorporated companies, including banks, should be assessed as other individuals or partnerships; that the revenue of persons from Dominion, provincial or municipal bonds should be assessed, as other personal property or income."

A resolution moved by Solicitor Mackelcan of Hamilton was adopted which aims at making no sale of land for taxes in any city invalid by reason of there having been goods or chattels within the county belonging to the person affected. Another resolution by Auditor Cluff of Ottawa was carried which recommends collective assessments for companies, instead of assessing their property in each ward, as at present.

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

Reciprocal.

"Yes, sir," remarked the amiable man, "[illegible] to see an Englishman come over here and drop his h's once in awhile."

"Yes," answered the man who has been to [illegible] down, "and he likes to see us go over there and drop our [illegible]."

DREYFUS TRIAL CLOSING

The Court Will Not Send for Foreign Evidence and Dreyfus Loses Hope

ALL THE EVIDENCE PUT IN.

Counsel Begin Their Addresses—One of the Best Witnesses for the Prisoner, Discredited.

Counsel Labori Has Reconsidered His Threat to Retire From the Case—The Government Commissioner Delivers His Long Address for the Prosecution.

Rennes, Sept. 7.—M. Labori has reconsidered his threat to retire from the Dreyfus case, and [illegible] as usual to-day.

He announced that he had received a semi official intimation that Col. Schwartzkoppen and Major Panizzardi, the former German and Italian military attaches at Paris, would be unable to appear personally before the court, and consequently he proposed that a rogatory commission should be telegraphed to receive their depositions.

The Government representatives did not oppose the application, but pointed out that the proposed course would cause a long adjournment.

M. Labori drew up a formal application that Col. Schwartzkoppen and Major Panizzardi be cited witnesses, and that seven questions be telegraphed to them as to whether they ever had relations with Esterhazy or Dreyfus.

The court declared itself incompetent to grant M. Labori's application.

At 10 30 a. m. the Government commissioner, Major Carriere, began his speech, closing the case for the prosecution, and concluded at 11.50 a. m.

Maitre Demange will probably occupy the whole of to-morrow in his speech for the defence and Maitre Labori will speak on Saturday.

The verdict will be rendered Monday, because the police authorities are opposed to the announcement of the verdict on Saturday, if it were possible to do so, on the ground that it would be likely to lead to trouble on Sunday.

The Last Evidence.

Rennes, Sept. 7.—The final witnesses in the Dreyfus case testified to-day.

The chief of the detectives, M. Cochefert, deposed favorably regarding the attitude of Dreyfus, when Col. Du Paty de Clam dictated the bordereau to him. Dreyfus only appeared to be troubled afterwards when Du Paty de Clam questioned him.

The clerk then read a letter from Capt. Humbert to the effect that Dreyfus had expressed a keen desire in 1894 to enter the statistical section of the War Office and, saying that he met Dreyfus once carrying some voluminous packets of maps and documents, and remarked that he was acting very imprudently.

Dreyfus rose and declared Capt. Humbert's statements to be inexact.

General Mercier afterwards came to the bar, and said that he felt the deposition of Capt. Freystatter was bound to have produced considerable impression on the mind of the judges. He spoke of the attacks made on him since the Captain had testified, saying the Dreyfusard press had been calling him a false witness, etc.

The General declared that he gave an order in 1894 that nothing should be done with the various translations of the Panizzardi despatch, adding that he, himself, was present when the packet of secret papers for the court martial was taken up, and it did not contain the Panizzardi despatch. He had since questioned the judges of the court martial on the subject, but not one of them was prepared to swear that the despatch was not submitted to them, because their recollections were now rather vague.

Gen. Mercier proceeded to call attention to contradictions in Capt. Freystatter's statements, reading an old letter from the Captain to a friend, in which he declared his mind was made up in 1894, before he saw the secret dossier, and another letter from an officer who was in company with Freystatter in Madagascar, where the writer asserted that Capt. Freystatter talked of the court martial of 1894 but never mentioned the Panizzardi despatch. After this Gen. Mercier brought up two points in Capt. Freystatter's career, averring that while in Madagascar he had been guilty of an act of disobedience to his chief, and that he had also executed thirty natives.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run [illegible] carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned. This mirror came into the possession of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials need are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Fact Versus Fiction.

"Talk about the seven sleepers," muttered the angry tragedian; "I'll bet there are 7,000 of them between Albany and New York."

PRIESTS WERE IN TERROR.

They Dare Not Pass Through England Without Disguises.

London, Sept. 7.—Two Belgian priests decided to pay a visit to some friends at a Roman Catholic college near Weybridge. Being diligent students of the weekly edition of The Times, they conceived the idea that to pass through any part of England during these anti-Ritualist days would be perilous to life and limb. They therefore disguised themselves as laymen, with straw hats and light check tweed suits, and in this garb presented themselves to their astonished hosts.

Ponton Asks for Reinstatement.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—At Osgoode Hall this afternoon an application was made to the Divisional Court for the reopening of the suit of W H Ponton, of Napanee, against the Dominion Bank for $50,000 damages for alleged false arrest and malicious prosecution.

It will be remembered that the action came before Justice Street at Cobourg last fall, and His Lordship summarily dismissed it when the plaintiff stated that he was unable to proceed.

The application to-day was made by Holman & Co. on behalf of Ponton and A. B. Aylesworth, Q. C., opposed the appeal.

A Transvaal View.

London, Sept. 7.—The London edition of The Standard and Diggers' News, the official Boer organ, to-day says: "We can state that the diplomatic correspondence between the Transvaal and the Colonial Office is of a reassuring nature, and that the dispute has now narrowed to an issue which should make a settlement possible and even speedy. The Transvaal is prepared for all eventualities, but remains hopeful of a peaceful settlement."

Died of Excitement.

St. Thomas, Sept. 6.—Wm. Kimbel, jr., of this city, was overcome by the effects of the excitement caused by a runaway while driving to Port Stanley this morning, and suddenly expired just after the horses were gotten under control again.

IDYL WYLD SUMMER RESORT
RICE LAKE, ONTARIO

THIS Breezy and Beautiful Island Summer Resort will re-open for the season '1899 on June 12th, under entirely new and up-to-date management. Important new additions to the building and hotel equipment have been effected. Twenty new Bed Rooms, Sitting Rooms and Waiting Rooms have been added, and entirely refurnished in modern style. Broad balconies extend around each of the two new stories erected, afford picturesque views of the surrounding scenery.

The cuisine will be a special feature—fresh meat, fresh fish, fresh eggs, milk and butter, as well as wholesome vegetables and fruit in abundance, necessitated by a robust appetite, sharpened by the ozone and continual breeze of this idyllic spot.

Good bass and maskinonge fishing all along the shore and lake. No charge for Americans fishing—no permits required. Boats and competent guides furnished. The island steam-launch "Outlet Queen," can be engaged for cruising and sailing parties. The Park is open for excursion parties, whether public or private. Tables and seats for picnic parties, are all over the ground in shady groves. Come and spend your summer vacation at Idyle Wyld, and for your life don't miss it.

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charlestown; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellson's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North American Review

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproars of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. WAS THE LIST LOADED?

Only One Liberal on Roster of Honorary A.D.C.'s to Lord Minto.

HON. DR. BORDEN DISSENTS

A Liberal Commander is Passed Over For a Conservative Subordinate.

The Entire List is Selected From Conservatives, and the Minister of Militia, it is Said, Declined to be Responsible for It—Considerable Grumbling Over the Affair

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—A list of the honorory A.D.C.'s to Lord Minto will be appointed in a few days, and it is probable that they will be known this week. So far only three A.D.C.'s have been gazetted. They are Lieut.-Col. Irwin, Ottawa; Lieut.-Col. Otter and Lieut.-Col. Hon. Gibson, Toronto.

In addition to these it is said that General Hutton and his Excellency the Governor-General have decided on the following:

Lieut.-Col. Peters, British Columbia.
Lieut.-Col. Sherwood, Ottawa.
Lieut.-Col. Labelle, Montreal.
Lieut.-Col. Euantured, Quebec.
Lieut.-Col. Drury, Kingston.

The Minister Dissents.

The entire list is selected from Conservatives and the Minister of Militia, it is said, has declined to be responsible for it, because he is of the opinion that in filling honorary positions of this kind both parties should be represented. The only Liberal on the list of A. D. C.'s is Col. Gibson, who as president of the Dominion Rifles Association, could not very well be passed over.

Lieut.-Col. Gregory, who is in command on the Pacific coast, succeeding Lieut.-Col. Prior, is well known to be a Liberal, and Col. Peters is equally well known to be a Conservative. Lieut.-Col. Gregory has been passed over and Col. Peters selected. Liberal politicians recommend the former and Conservatives the latter, and the former will now say that Gregory has been cast aside because of his politics.

Something Due To Government.

A militia man stated to-day that while the political complexion of the parties should not be considered, although it has always been in the past, just as races and creeds have been looked to, still an officer ought not to be rejected to because of his politics.

While the Governor-General has the right to name his own A.D.C.'s, it is urged that as the department of Militia is asked to gazette them and pay their travelling expenses, the Minister ought to have something to say in their selection.

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion.

Subtle Power of Happiness.

"Next to the art of living justly and kindly with our fellows comes the art of maintaining a life of happiness and tranquillity," writes the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis of "The Secrets of a Happy Life" in The Ladies' Home Journal, "for the soul was made for joy and good cheer. Life is a school; labor and sorrow, victory and defeat toil together as teachers, but happiness is life's aim and graduating point. Next to the duty of self denial comes the duty of delight. What ripeness is to an orange, what song is to the lark, what culture and refinement are to the intellect, that happiness is to the soul. As vulgarity and ignorance betoken a neglected mind, so unhappiness and misery proclaim the neglected heart.

"The normal nature will keep strong and fresh the chords that vibrate joy. Depression and worry take the nerve out of man's arm, take the keen edge from his mind, rob life of its victory, for unhappiness wins no battles, gloom invents no tool, wretchedness writes no drama. Earth's great achievements represent those whose hearts sang over the tasks. He meets storm with calm, defeat with faith, ingratitude with charity, is not an easy thing. Nothing requires so much wisdom, practice and skill as learning how to live habitually above the distemperatures of life."

THRESHING IN FULL SWING

Wheat Cutting in Manitoba is Over, and Much Wheat Will be Marketed Early.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 7.—Wheat cutting is now practically finished and threshing is in full swing. Farmers are inclined to thresh as much as possible from the stock to save the necessity of stacking. There is a large acerage, which means that much wheat will be marketed early if prices remain as at present.

DESPATCHES ABOUT ALASKA.

May Have Reached England, But Nobody Knows What They Say.

London, Sept. 7.—The Foreign Office morning received despatches relating to the arrangement between the British Charge d'Affaires at Washington, Mr. Reginald Tower, and the Secretary of State, Col. John Hay, regarding the Alaskan dispute. The facts will probably not be made public until the Marquis of Salisbury has had an opportunity to consider the matter.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Cocoanut oil thickens and darkens the eyebrows

A raw egg swallowed will detach a fishbone in the throat

A good cure for corns is to rub them night and morning with a piece of ordinary sandpaper. If this method is persevered in, great relief is at once obtained, and the corns will gradually disappear.

"A good stout toothbrush, plenty of water and some antiseptic dentifrice applied morning and night," says one who has given much thought in the interests of antiseptic purity, "will afford a greater safeguard against many diseases than most people are aware."

THE NEW SPAIN.

About the worst that can be said of Spain now is that it is the Washington Baseball club of nations.—Chicago News.

Nothing seems to be said about what Spain is going to do at the Paris exposition. It might at least make a display of mananas.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

Now that we are friends with Spain once more, she may give us the contract of building her new navy. She has reason to know that we build a fairly good article of warship.—St. Louis Republic.

OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT.

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on their alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was "out after elephants" and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums.

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fed the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

ANIMAL LIFE.

The smallest camels belong to Persia. They are not more than 30 inches high.

Animal trainers say the most intelligent animals for their purpose are the walrus, elephant, monkey, seal and sea lion. A young walrus that is bought for $600, when carefully trained is worth fully $5,000.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist es good natured and happy now as she was when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be sp'iled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never fergit ef I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven er eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves pertickeler on, fer they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week er ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough fer me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen er more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wuz gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 200 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wus Jim a-comin lickety split. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wus comin after us wus like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let em go for all they wus wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wus fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wuz comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wus.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forward as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there fer a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wus in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wus, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wus dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idea that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy was killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hunderd pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theirselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wus, and so wus Mandy, fer before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wus up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wus ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wus only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all these golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

Did you ever notice how some women break down after marriage? As the family increases, the poor mothers lose their graceful, symmetrical forms, their faces are full of lines and no vestige of youth remains. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription works wonders for such women. A woman need never lose her shape or beauty. If she will take "Favorite Prescription" during gestation, she will not be worried. Morning sickness will be almost wholly unknown. Nervousness will be prevented. When baby comes, there will be little or no pain, and the ordeal will be shortened. Recovery will be rapid, and the patient will emerge with her old-time attractiveness of face and figure. The mother who takes this wonderful medicine can keep her health and youthful looks, even though a half-dozen children play about her knees. No other women's remedy is its equal. Never allow the medicine dealer to substitute something else.

This remedy contains no trace of alcohol, nor opium, nor any of the dangerous drugs which enter so largely into many advertised "compounds," recommended for the cure of invalid women. It will not create craving for stimulants.

"For five years my wife was in an almost helpless condition, suffering from female weakness," writes J. S. Everitt, Esq., of Hagerman, Washington Co., Fla. "Last September I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. She took several bottles of the medicine and gave birth to a ten pound son on January 31st, 1898. She is now sound and well and doing her housework."

Every family needs a medical guide and instructor. The best ever published is the Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages. It will be sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of customs and mailing only. This book has been not inaptly termed "The Bible of the Body," for it is to the body what the Bible is to the soul,—the great chart of salvation.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Mamaine Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim ajoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16 80 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Tom. Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 3¼cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.00 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3¼ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

Scotch Fingering Yarn.

We are selling this year a heavy ribbed Worsted Stocking in the largest sizes for twenty-five cents. They are made on our own electric power knitting machines, from a fine quality of pure fingering yarn. The color is an excellent glossy black. This quality is usually sold from 40c. to 90c. per pair, yet our price is only 13c in smaller sizes, running gradually up to 25c in the largest sizes. If you were able to get this yarn for 5c. per skein the yarn alone would cost all we ask, yet this yarn is sold for 8c per skein. Come and look at them and wonder how we do it. The Port Hope Knitting Works, 382 George, street, Peterborough.

Meeting of the Hunters.

A meeting of the Gold Lake Hunting Club is called for Monday night at the Snowden House. This may be regarded as an indication of the approach of autumn, and also stands for "Johnny, get your gun." Mr. Snowden, in his official capacity as president of the club, requests the Times to state that the Transvaal war scare will not interfere with the intention of the club to indulge in its annual hunt. During the President's absence in the woods Mr. Bob. White has consented to act as fishery inspector in the creek between the Snowden House and the river.

A Popular Appointment.

Mr. Robert Hall yesterday received his commission as deputy collector of Customs here, rendered vacant by the resignation of Mr. Herb. Hall. No more popular appointment could possibly have been made. He is more than ordinarily well qualified to perform the duties of the office, being familiar with the rules of [illegible] business. The Times extends hearty congratulations.

DARING BURGLARY.

A Desk in McAllister's Mill Broken Into and $60 Stolen.

A daring burglary was committed between the hour of 6 and 7.30 on Thursday evening at McAllister's flour mill, Ashburnham. It appears that when the office in the mill was locked at six o'clock there was about $60 in the drawer of the desk. At 7.30—an hour and a half later—the money was gone.

The window of the office was evidently opened far enough to allow a man to reach the spring lock on the door and open it. Then the drawer containing the cash was pried open, the frame springing sufficiently to let the keeper of the lock out of its place and open the drawer.

County Constable Cochrane was at once notified and worked on the case all day yesterday, with the result that a young man named Bert. Kindred, who was employed in the mill, was arrested, charged with the crime.

The young man in question has always borne a good character, and is very respectably connected. His many friends in town would be pleased to learn that he may be able to clear himself of the serious charge.

Last night about nine o'clock he was admitted to bail.

A Grocer's
Experience WITH Grape-Nuts
SEE BELOW.

A GROCER'S INTEREST IS TO FURNISH PURE FOOD.

People do not always realize the personal interest that a first-class grocer takes in the articles of food which he furnishes customers.

Some people believe that the grocer is influenced only by the profit he may derive, and that his recommendations are governed entirely by a mercenary motive, but this is not always true. On the contrary, it is believed that a majority of the better class of grocers are thoroughly honest in their desire to furnish their patrons with really pure and nourishing food.

The following from Jno. Wallgren, a prominent grocer of Portland, Oregon, may be of interest: "I am on my tenth case of Grape-Nuts and my trade is still increasing. I have been bothered with a weak stomach for five years, I have tried a number of remedies and patent medicines without help. I am eating Grape-Nuts three times a day and after using three packages I must admit that I am relieved of my weak stomach and feel like a new man."

There is a reason for this. A weak stomach can take Grape-Nuts and digest them without difficulty, for Grape-Nuts are actually pre-digested and ready for immediate transformation into rich blood and good strong tissue, both of muscle and brain. They are generally admitted to be the most scientifically made food in the world, in which the starch of the cereals is transformed into grape sugar and this is done without the use of any sort of drug or acid whatsoever. On the contrary, all of the processes are purely mechanical, using simply moisture, time (in which to grow the diastase) and heat, but the work of the human system is copied almost exactly, with the result that the food is ready for immediate assimilation.

The flavor is exquisite and delicate, the sweet of grape sugar can be detected. The food is absolutely free from cane or beet sugar, but the fine, almost microscopic, particles of grape sugar can be seen glistening on the surface of the small granules. Grape-Nuts with cream furnishes the most delicious breakfast food in existence, and this food is in use now by practically all of the well-to-do families in America. The demand has been so great that the factory has been running steadily both night and day for upwards of a year, and the fame of the American breakfast dish has spread to many of the other countries of the world.

REMARKABLE FISH STORY.

Here is a Modern Yarn, to Which Few Will Doubt.

"Talk about your fish stories," began the genial proprietor of the Snowden House, as Sam Clegg and Tom Boddy had finished their yarns, "but I had an experience long ago just below the locks in Bobcaygeon. I had gone out for a string of bass, and had just baited my hook with the largest centipede I ever saw in my life. I had just thrown my hook overboard, weighted with a lead sinker, and almost instantly felt a bite and pulled in my line. It came up feeling as though there was merely a dead weight upon the end. On looking at my catch I thought I had merely caught upon an old whiskey bottle, but on examining it more closely perceived the head of a fish protruding from the neck of the flask. Amazed at the unusual sight I broke the bottle and found that the fish had apparently grown within the empty receptacle. The catfish was exactly the shape of the pint whiskey flask and on one of its sides were the words, 'John Maloney, wine and liquor merchant, Peterborough,' clearly and distinctly. The fish had evidently got into the bottle when small, and as it grew took the shape of its glassy prison. Even the words blown in the glass had become imprinted upon the side of the fish. The neck of the catfish was small and slender as the neck of the bottle, where the head protruded, but enabling it to find its substance. The fish had still the odor of whiskey about it," continued Mr. Snowden, as Ed. Brown entered the circle and tried to catch the drift of the story. "It was was taken home and cooked, and the flavor of the liquor had so thoroughly permeated the fish that some of the boys in the village who boarded at my hotel got full on it."

Two Powerful British Expiditions Going to Subdue African Tribes.

USE POISONED ARROWS

John Bull Has Just Two More Little Wars to Occupy His Attention.

The Appams Will Oppose British Rifles by Deadly Poisoned Weapons—Slaves Sold for Percussion Caps—Gunboat Taken to Pieces and Will be Used Against Them.

Liverpool, Sept. 10.—The chief topic of conversation in the Niger Coast Protectorate, according to despatches, is the forthcoming expedition against the Cross River tribes, which is ready going to be an important affair. The Cross River tribes have been giving trouble for a long time past, and with the gradual opening up of the district the opposition of the natives to interference with their barbarous customs has become more acute. It is believed that the Iboes and the Qua-Iboes, who form the majority of the inhabitants, have been worked up to oppose the British by the Aros, a curious people supposed to consist of twelve large families, and extending as far inland as the Niger proper. They are great slave dealers, and have been in the habit of supplying a large number of slaves for sacrifice to the neighboring tribes. These slaves they barter against percussion caps. The spread of white influence is naturally calculated to upset these habits.

Bluejackets Ready.

Another tribe against which the military operations will be directed are the Appams, or Afhams, who fight with poisoned arrows. It is thought they may join with the Iboes. Judging from the preparations which are being made the Cross River expedition will be quite as important an undertaking as the Benin campaign. A body of bluejackets from one or two of the gunboats on the West African station will, it is stated, participate in the operations, and sections from the Imperial Niger troops, the Niger Coast Protectorate troops, and the Royal Niger Constabulary will be requisitioned. The gunboat Heron is being taken to pieces in the Niger, and will be brought round to Old Calabar. The expedition, it is understood, will be concentrated at Bonny or Old Calabar on October 1, and a portion of the force will probably push right through the Crow River district to Degama. The country is for the most part covered with dense bush, and the natives are known to possess a quantity of Mannlicher rifles imported overland from the German settlement of Cameroons.

TO PRESS FOR COMPENSATION.

Mr. Lewis Reaches England With the Claims of Atlin Miners.

London, Sept. 9.—Former Congressman James H. Lewis arrived here this week and on Friday presented his credentials at the United States Embassy. Mr. Lewis is here to press the claims for compensation to the American miners who were evicted in the Atlin district of the Northwest Territories by the Canadian Government. The matter of the American miners' claim against Canada has already been taken up, but no action will be taken until the arrival of Sir Louis Henry Davies, the Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who is coming here to present the other side of the case. By that time the United States Ambassador, Mr. Jos. H. Choate, will have had the briefs of Mr. Lewis under consideration. The lawyer urges that the claims be included in the general arbitration by the High Commission. Minister Davies will object to this, maintaining that such methods will obstruct the boundary solution.

Mr. Lewis said: "I understand unofficially that the High Commission will meet in November, and I expect that the miners' claims will have reached such a status by that time as will determine what authority is to decide their merit."

who was reported to have quit the Victoria, B.C., Sept. 10.—One of the passengers by the Warrimoo, which arrived from Australia this morning, was Rev. Dr. G. Patton, who is bound for Washington as a delegate from the Colony of Victoria, to the Pan-Presbyterian Convention. While in America Mr. Patton will endeavor to enlist aid for the cause of still further extending the work of civilizing the natives of the New Hebrides, or South Sea Islands. "There are thirty islands in the group," said Mr. Patton, "with a population of probably 40 000 natives. Originally these people were all cannibals, and to this day there are thousands of them who still practice that awful crime. Bloody conflicts between the natives of different islands are still of frequent occurrence, and they are always followed by the most revolting orgies, at which the prisoners taken in battle are killed and eaten.

Twenty-two of the islands are now practically under Christain influence, missions having 8 000 converts and over 3,000 church members. The scriptures have been translated into twenty-two different languages, each island in the group having a distinct language of its own. We have three hundred native preachers and teachers and are extending our work all the time."

THE FRENCH ARMY GENERAL STAFF VICTORIOUS!

Captain Dreyfus Again Convicted by the French Military Tribune, Though Insufficient Proof Was Adduced at Trial.

HE IS SENTENCED TO TEN YEARS' IMPRISONMENT

Dreyfus Has Been Found Guilty by the Military Figure-heads Who Conducted the Second Court-Martial at Rennes, and Must Suffer to Hide the Villiny of the General Staff.

Rennes, Sept. 10.—The court martial retired to consider its verdict at ten minutes past three o'clock French time, and returned to court about five o'clock, with a verdict of guilty. Capt. Dreyfus was sentenced to ten years imprisonment.

The court stood 5 to 2 for the condemnation of the prisoner. The court found extenuating circumstances.

The Verdict Read to Dreyfus.

As the people emerged the gendrames kept them moving away from the courts. The small crowd of people outside cheered for the army, but the gendrames did not interfere, and there was not the slightest disorder. The judgment was read to Dreyfus in an adjoining little room by the clerk of the court, M. Couperal. Dreyfus listened in impassible, but did not give the slightest sign of emotion, did not utter a word and marched back to prison like an automaton. It is understood that Dreyfus will be sent to Forte Corte, in the Island of Corsica.

Disagreement Expected.

Large crowds, which the police kept moving, waited around the square in which the telegraph office and the principal cafes are situated. When the people learned the court had been out an hour it was argued that this meant a disagreement in favor of Dreyfus. The first indication to these watchers that a result had been reached was when a soldier on a bicycle came tearing along as fast as he could from the Lycee towards the artillery barracks. The soldiers and gendrames keeping the streets sat up in their saddles and watched the bicyclist as long as he remained in sight. This orderly was despatched before the court returned, as another five or ten minutes elapsed before the army of reporters and messengers on foot and on bicycles came in a wave up the street, and in a minute the telegraph office was a pandemonium. It was literally packed with men and women, all struggling towards the two little windows, where the despatches were received. In the meanwhile the news of the condemnation of Dreyfus had filtered out to the crowd, but it produced no excitement.

"I Am Not Guilty."

Rennes, Sept. 10.—The appearance of the streets when Rennes awoke this morning left no doubt in the minds of anyone that the final crisis of the great trial had been reached. Instead of scattered gendarmes guarding the vicinity of the prison and the Lycee, the whole town bristled with soldiers, all the streets near the court were guarded at intervals by double lines of infantry, two companies of infantry sat on the church steps adjoining the Lycee, with their arms stacked in front of them, while in the court-yard of the prison and at various other points cavalry could be seen in readiness.

Everyone entering the court was subjected to the closest scrutiny. Even the women who attended the session were deprived of their small sunshades before being permitted to pass. A larger crowd than usual witnessed the passage of Dreyfus from the prison to the Lycee. But the crowds were nowhere large and aside from the presence of the military the town was as tranquil as usual.

A Cheerless Day.

The morning of the day which was to decide the fate of Dreyfus broke dull and cheerless and the court-room was filled with a cold, unsympathetic light, which lent sadness to the proceedings. This was inhanced by the grave aspect of the audience. The faces of the judges also reflected the solemnity of the occasion. The last session of the court martial of Captain Alfred Dreyfus, of the Artillery, charged with treason, opened at 7.30 a.m. Madame Labori was among the few ladies present, and in the press seats there were only about fifty reporters. The prisoner looked flushed and in ill-health, apparently suffering from the great strain.

Demange Resumes.

M. Demange resumed his speech for the defence, which was interrupted yesterday by the adjournment. The audience listened to his remarks with the most serious attention, and he was also closely followed by the judges. In his appeal to them he strongly accentuated the words: "Why you must not say a thing is a possibility. A judge must have proof. No doubt must rest on the conscience of a judge."

Baron Russell, of Killowen, the Lord Chief Justice of England, was again present. Among the prominent witnesses only Senator Trarieux, the former Minister of Justice, remained seated in the front row of the witnesses' seats. In the second row of the privileged public, facing the judges, sat Matthieu Dreyfus, brother of the prisoner, whose sunken eyes and careworn face reflected his anxiety and anguish. It was evident that he had not slept during the night. He was attired in black, with a little black necktie. His brother sat beside a captain of gendarmes, and as M. Demange refuted the arguments made in the speech of the Government commissary, Major Carriere, the prisoner turned his face toward his brother, Matthieu, to watch the effect it had upon him. Dreyfus, however, did not display the intense emotion, with which his heart, on this critical morning, must have been bursting. Gendarmes were [illegible] down among the audience and were posted in the gangways around the court-room. There was a [illegible] rast in their pretty, blue uniforms, with white cord trimmings, to the sober attire of the majority of the spectators. They kept their eyes roaming over the court and their hands rested on the black leather cases in which nestled big army revolvers.

The silence was only broken by the occasional rustling of a reporter's notebook or the neigh of an artillery horse picketed in a street bordering the Lycee. Now and then there was the sound of the rattling of a rifle or the clanking of a sword of some soldier hastily crossing the court-yard where the troops were stationed.

Session Suspends.

M. Demange continued his plea until the court suspended its session at ten o'clock, at which time it was announced that counsel would need another hour to conclude his speech, after which the judges, it was added, would retire to consider their verdict. The court was then cleared. A bell will be rung just before the judges re-enter and a second bell will be rung a minute or so later. Then the doors of the court will be closed and no more persons will be allowed to return to the hall.

Ready for Emergencies.

The troops quartered in the chapel and refactory of the Lycee are ready for any emergency.

Demange concluded at 11.35 a.m., and the court adjourned until 3 p.m., when Major Carriere will make a brief reply. The court will then deliberate on its verdict. A loud clapping of hands greeted the conclusion of M. Demange's finely delivered peroration.

Dreyfus, however, appeared impassible. But, as he left the stage, he exclaimed to those around him: "I am not guilty."

The prisoner's hearers replied with cries of "Courage," "courage."

A SHOCKING FATALITY.

Charles Broadbent, a Fireman, Meets with Death Near Myrtle.

A shocking fatality occured last night a little after eight o'clock on the line of the C. P. R. near Myrtle. It appears that Charles Broadbent, fireman on a freight train had his head out of the window of the cab as the engine was passing a huge crane to which was attached a bar or pin, which caught him on the left side of the neck and ran down by the collar bone into his body, nearly reaching the heart. The unfortunate man was killed instantly and the body was sent back to Toronto. The late fireman was a resident of Hamilton and was well and favorably known among the trainmen here. The engineer had a very narrow escape too, he having his cap knocked off by the crane. Owing to late hour of sad news the Times was unable to get fuller particulars.

THE BOERS CLIMB DOWN.

Official Statement from the Secretary of State for South African Republic.

Pretoria, Sept. 9.—The News to-day prints an official statement from the Secretary of State of the South African Republic, Mr. F. W. Reitz, in which he says: "The Government considers that three courses are disclosed by the communication of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the British Secretary of State of the Colonies. The first is a joint commission of enquiry; the second is a commission of delegates from both Governments to discuss technicalities, and the third is a conference at Cape Town."

In this statement Secretary Reitz also says that the Transvaal Government now agrees to the second proposition, and invites Great Britain to define the constitution of the proposed commission and the place of meeting.

AN ARMY OF SICK MEN.

Condition of General MacArthur's Division Lamentable—Thirty-six Per Cent. of the Officers Ill.

Manila, Sept. 5—via Hong Kong, Sept 9.—The censor has refused to allow the following despatch, the accuracy of which is unquestioned, to be telegraphed: "The surgeons' reports in regard to the condition of General MacArthur's division show that 36 per cent. of the officers and 25½ per cent of the enlisted men are sick. This includes the sick in quarters and those sent home. Eleven per cent of the enlisted men sick in quarters are mostly suffering from dysentery and malarial fevers."

ATTACK ON SANTA RITA.

Manila, Sept. 9.—A force of 450 rebels, with one cannon, attacked Santa Rita this morning and simultaneously Guaga and San Antonio were each attacked by bodies of rebels numbering about 60 men.

FIRE SWEPT

Considerable Damage Done by Bush Fires in North Harvey.

Bobcaygeon Independent;—The most serious damage from the bush fires in North Harvey was sustained by Mr. Kelson St. Thomas, who was clean swept of everything he possessed, fences, crops, house, barn, everything but the potatoes in the ground. Mr. Bouchier lost his fences, and had the narrowest possible escape from total destruction. The neighbors who were not themselves endangered, gave days of untiring help to protect the fields, but in Mr. St. Thomas' case the work was without avail. When a bush fire gets thoroughly down to business all human efforts are impotent. Any movement in the direction of raising a new house for Mr. St. Thomas would be opportune for his loss is total, and he has arrived at an age when to begin life again is a calamity.

The Ponton Case.

Ponton, through his solicitor, applied to the Divisional Court to have his action against the Dominion Bank for $50,000 damages for false arrest, revived, but the case was dismissed. Mr. E. Gus Porter, solicitor for Ponton, told the Times when in Peterborough a short time ago, that in the event of such a result a fresh suit would at once be begun for the same amount, basing it on Ponton's second arrest. So that after all the action of the Divisional Court will make little difference.

C. P. R. Improvements.

General Superintendent J. W. Leonard, of the Ontario and Quebec division of the C. P. R., passed through to Toronto from Montreal and reports that the double track from St. Anne's to Jacques Cartier is completed, and it will be continued to Montreal Junction, work having been commenced on that section of it to-day. The rails that are being laid are the heaviest in Canada, weighing 100 pounds to the yard. The work of straightening all the curves in the neighborhood of Havelock is also commenced, and will enable the trains running between Toronto and Montreal to make much faster time. The management have also placed in service three of the largest type of engines on the division between Montreal and Ottawa. They are what they call the Atlantic type, and are capable of running 90 miles an hour. The drive wheels of these engines are seven feet, five inches [illegible] than those used out of Toronto.

BRITAIN IS ALL READY

The Army Prepared After a Revised System and With New Bullet.

A RELENTLESS STRUGGLE.

A Boer Agent in London Declares the Whole of South Africa Will Rise.

General Opinion Places Six Months as the Outside Limit for the Capture of Johannesburg and Pretoria—It is Conceded by Some That Boers May Win at the Start.

London, Sept. 9.—This week in Great Britain Dreyfus and other topics sank into obscurity, patriotic enthusiasm has been at fever heat, and the slightest sign of preparation for war has been seized upon by the press and public as an indication of the status of the crisis.

A New Bullet.

According to reliable statements, the army is ready. The papers teem with descriptions of the troops who are expected to do the fighting, with accounts of their equipment and method of transport, and even the relative killing properties of the bullets which, it is expected, will soon be lodged under Boer skins. The particular pet is now a bullet known as "Mark 4." It is claimed that its lead core is harder and less fusible than any tried heretofore. Large quantities are being shipped to Capetown.

Army in Splendid Shape.

Though mobilization has never been a strong feature of the British army, it is now believed that a system as near perfection as possible has been prepared. The Commander in Chief, Field Marshal Lord Wolseley, Sir Evelyn Wood, General Sir Redvers Buller, and other Generals, have been working strenuously on it for months. Many new features have been introduced, several of them being based on the lessons learned by the United States troops in the war with Spain. Among the latter is the extreme usefulness of mules in such a country as the Transvaal. The British officers who have been in the United States, Spain and South America, selecting bunches of these animals, have now been ordered to close their purchases and ship the mules as quickly as possible to the scene of probable hostilities.

A Relentless War.

All these things, to say nothing of the splendid morale and reputation of the regiments selected for the Cape, indicate that if war comes, it will be waged relentlessly and strongly, and that there will be no abatement until South Africa is flooded with British troops in such numbers that organized resistance by the Boers will be impossible.

Before the main British body of troops arrives it is thought possible the Boers may score some decided successes, and that even after being overcome by the force of superior numbers, they may continue the war in guerilla fashion for many months, but conservative opinion places six months as the outside limit for the capture of Johannesburg and Pretoria.

The Plan of Campaign.

If another Majuba Hill marks the annals of the possible war it will not be due to lack of caution on the part of the British. The Swazis are expected to give Great Britain considerable aid, and, with the exception of the Pondos, the whole body of blacks between Cape Agulhas and Zambesi, it is claimed, will rise against the Transvaal. The Boer plan of mobilization is said to be purely defensive, embracing 45,000 men, who would occupy strategical points in their own country. But this is not likely to prevent a raid into poorly defended Natal.

Obstacles to be Overcome.

The greatest dangers the British contemplate facing, apart from the Boers' steady hand and Mauser rifles, are climate, lack of forage and the scarcity of ammunition owing to the difficulties of transport. Precautions have already been taken to avoid the two last, but there is no doubt that if the campaign occurs, many British lives will be sacrificed to enteric fever.

The Torch of Revolution.

Mr. Montague White, Consul General of the South African Republic in London, said: "If the burghers will not yield to hysteria, there is no casus belli. We decline responsibility for what others have muddled. Suzerainty is not the question. The franchise is the rock of difference which Mr. Chamberlain recognizes. The war—if war must come—is not going to end with a flash in the pan. The struggle will be from Pretoria to Cape Town. Even supposing the existing Boer regiments are annihilated, no force can beat down the Africander and Dutch strength of South Africa. He who declares war on the Transvaal lights the torch of revolution. The Transvaal will not precipitate matters. The burghers will go out to defend their homes and country when the note of alarm is sounded. That is no menace. Lord Salisbury has yet to be reckoned with. He will not be driven by personal feeling or quibble. We believe the British sense of fair play will yet prevail."

Attended a Poultry Meeting.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, president of the Ontario Poultry Association, and Messrs. R. H. Leary and Wm. Collins, president and secretary of the local association, were in Toronto on Thursday attending a meeting of the executive of the Ontario Poultry Association. The preliminaries of the provincial poultry show, to be held here January 8-12 next, were discussed.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 7, 1899

MUNICIPAL LAW.

The Municipal Convention in Hamilton decided to send many requests to the Legislature concerning amendments to the Municipal Act. Longer terms for mayors and aldermen are wanted; polling sub-divisions made by the councils of cities and towns are desired to be used for municipal purposes only; that aldermen be elected not by separate wards but by the ratepayers at large; that parents be compelled to pay the municipality for the keep of children in industrial schools. It was decided to form an association to be known as the Ontario Municipal Association, to meet once a year or oftener. The first meeting of the new organization will be held in London during the Western Fair. The following officers were elected: Mayor of Hamilton, President; Mayors of St. Catharines and Guelph, Vice-Presidents; S. H. Kent, Secretary; John T. Hall, Assistant Secretary; Executive Committee—Robert J. Fleming, Toronto; Auditor Cluff, Ottawa; Mayors of London, Belleville and Port Hope.

If the association would devote its energies to more vital matters, such as municipal fire insurance; passing of a law preventing bonusing of every description; curtailing the power of municipalities to incur debt; the establishment of municipal work houses for tramps, idlers and criminals, etc this Great Family Journal would have some use for the association.

THE TRENT CANAL NEEDED.

Now that the wheat crop is harvested, Northwesterns are beginning to consider how they can get it out of the country. The probability is that it will have to go by rail, because vessels are not available even at a rate of six cents a bushel from Fort William to Buffalo—an advance of three cents over last season. The reason of this scarcity of shipping is due to the necessities of the ore shippers from Duluth and Lake Superior points, who have chartered every vessel in sight at [illegible] cents a ton, an advance of 35 cents over last year. If the grain had to be conveyed by rail there would be great difficulty in securing cars. High wheat at Fort William is quoted at [illegible]1-2c, and hard to get at that, although there is over a million and a quarter bushels in store. The farmers, like the railway and steamship lines, are holding out for a stiff price.

There is plenty of work for the Trent Valley Canal when completed. Vessels then would deliver their cargoes at the head of the canal on the Georgian Bay, and thus save enormously in distance. Transporting it through the canal to the Bay of Quinte would give employment to a smaller class of vessels. The chief advantage in the Trent Valley Canal over any other route is the shortening of the distance as compared with other routes; the absence of danger of disaster from shipwreck, and the saving in time. The Government cannot rush the completion of the canal too quickly.

With noble sentiments he mounts

Subdues his foes and makes the world his own.
May he still flourish, may he nobly shine,
Nor north wind blast or fox corrupt the vine.

MEN OF MARK.

President McKinley finds little leisure for light reading, but is a careful student of the newspapers.

Joseph Leiter has by no means decided to drop the stock market. He is a constant visitor to Wall street.

J. Pierpont Morgan is an expert [illegible] player and an evening rarely passes when he does not enjoy an after dinner game.

Joel Chandler Harris, Georgia's famous author, breeder and poet, is to have an exhibit of Jersey cattle at the Paris exposition.

Senator Clark has just bought in Paris, for his Washington house, an old stained glass window, once the property of the Countess de Jaune, for $30,000.

Sims Reeves says he lost $400,000 during his career as a public singer because he was too conscientious to appear on the stage unless sure he could do his best.

Ex-Representative Ben T. Cable is to furnish much of the money for the building of a chapter house for the Zeta Psi fraternity at the University of Michigan.

John [illegible], superintendent of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, was formerly a telegraph operator at Hokendauqua, Pa. He is now receiving $15,000 a year.

The Russian Prince Cantacuzene, whose betrothal to Miss Julia Grant has just been announced, has retired to his Russian estates to make preparations for the reception of his bride.

Before Rear Admiral Kautz left for Samoa a young woman asked him whether he had ever "felt afraid in battle." "Once," he answered. "A stray ball knocked my cigar out of my mouth and there wasn't another aboard."

The late ex-Governor Flower was once asked by a less successful financier how to succeed in Wall street. "By working harder than at any other trade or profession on earth," was the answer. "But won't that wear you out?" "Not before your time."

Mayor Moir of Scranton was years ago a journeyman tailor in Philadelphia. John Ross of the former city needed a workman, and Mr. Moir, being recommended, was offered inducements to go to Scranton. In February last Mr. Moir was elected chief executive of the city.

Henry G. Kittredge, editor of the Textile World, Boston, has been appointed assistant director of textiles for the commissioner general of the United States to the Paris exposition of 1900. Mr. Kittredge has long been identified with the textile industries of the United States.

Russell Sage is no friend of the camera, and very rarely is it that a photographer is quick enough to get a snap shot of the millionaire. As for sitting for a picture, that has probably occurred less frequently during the millionaire's long life than that of any other equally prominent man in the country.

TOWN TOPICS.

The curfew bell was rung last night at 8:30 o'clock. Nothing sensational resulted. It just rung; that was all.—Freeport Bulletin.

Abilene is getting to be a front porch town. Nearly every resident improvement includes a porch.—Abilene (Kan.) Reflector.

The companies are selling their gas so cheaply in New York that several of the metropolitan newspapers are filled with it every day.—Detroit Journal.

Buffalo is to have a new union station to cost $6,000,000, with a waiting room 80 by 285 feet, that will be the largest in the world. How about this, Boston?—Gardiner Reporter-Journal.

Buffalo is in a flutter over an extremely wicked Midway that it expects to have at the Pan-American exposition, and can't think of a suitable name for it. Why not call it Hamburg Paradise?—Rochester Democrat.

All because of a blessed war to the knife squabble between rival companies New York is now enjoying 65 cent gas. Father Knickerbocker will be a week old gentleman if he lets them restore the higher rate.

MOTIVES AND METHODS.

A Missouri girl killed herself because her sweetheart had gone to the war.

Robert F. Hayes, a Boston clerk, hanged himself with his necktie as the noose.

Because his mother would not let him go in swimming an Arkansas boy cut his throat.

Forked branches of an apple tree were used as a noose by a Stroudsburg (Pa.) suicide.

Champagne with arsenic in it was used by a San Francisco man as a means of self destruction.

Her husband wanted to move, and she did not. That led a Connecticut woman to drink poison.

Fearing that his wife would scold him for getting home late a newly made London bridegroom committed suicide.

"Ah, to see the moon at a distance of one meter," was the note left by a Paris suicide explaining his motive for death.

THE CYNIC.

After a man has told you his troubles, you know more about his kin.

You will find a loafer leech attached to every industrious man or woman.

An honest man is one who admits that his baldness is due to old age and not to sickness.

Every bridegroom finds an excuse to return from his wedding journey sooner than originally planned.

Every circus man lays all his plans on the assumption that the people are chumps. Every circus man gets rich.

After the people have worked themselves to death to raise a preacher's salary, he decides that he can do better elsewhere and resigns.

It would be interesting to know how much longer the week should be, in order that the men may find their Sunday underwear ready without fussing.—Atchison Globe.

ELECTRIC SPARKS.

Work of laying the cable from Vancouver to Fanning island and thence to Australia and New Zealand will begin this summer, it is announced.

The new Nernst electric light dispenses with the usual vacuum bulb and replaces the hairlike filament with a short bar of refractory material, thereby greatly increasing the light and cheapening the cost.

Experiments have been made lately by French government officials with a new telephone, which enables persons to converse without putting their mouth and ear to the apparatus, the words being [illegible] by [illegible] to any part of the room.

PLEADS FOR DREYFUS

Demange Thunders Indignantly Against His Accusers.

LABORI MAY NOT SPEAK

He is Offensive to the Court and Differs from His Colleague With Whom He Disputes.

Probable Verdict on Monday—Lord Chief Justice of England Occupies a Seat in Court and is an Attentive Listener—A Fancy Price Paid for Standing Room.

Rennes, Sept. 8.—The hall of [illegible] was crowded this morning [illegible] of the fifth day of the [illegible] second trial by court martial of Captain Alfred Dreyfus, of the artillery, charged with treason.

There was a large attendance of [illegible] and newspaper writers, who sat up all night long in order to secure front places. At an early hour a long line was formed of people awaiting admission. Standing room at the back of the court now commands fifteen and twenty francs for places, and the demand is increasing as the trial approaches the end.

Among the privileged witnesses today was Baron Russell, of Killowen, Lord Chief Justice of England, who was conducted to a seat by General Chamoin and M. Paleologue, of the French Foreign Office. The Lord Chief Justice was seated at the back of the judges' table. He came here specially from Paris, where he has attended the sessions of the Anglo-Venezuelan boundary arbitration commission, in order to see something of the trial.

Demange Opens.

Maitre Demange at once opened his speech for the defence. In eloquent terms and with impressive delivery he brought out strong evidence against Esterhazy. During the course of his remarks he cried, "Do you think, if Dreyfus and Esterhazy had been before the court martial of 1894, that the court would have condemned Capt. Dreyfus?"

As he asked this question counsel pointed to the prisoner sitting before him and added, "No." Dreyfus to day appeared cheerful, and smiled and shook hands with his counsel on entering the court.

The English Chief Justice followed the speech of M. Demange with the closest attention. The lawyer gave a very fine performance, so far as the audience was concerned. His voice was beautifully modulated, sometimes soft and persuasive and at other times sharply argumentive. Finally he filled the room with his stentorian tones as he thundered with indignation at the charges against Dreyfus, the shameful weakness of the prosecution and in denunciation of Esterhazy. The gestures and features of M. Demange were equally expressive.

The front rows of the chief witnesses' seats were empty except for the presence of M. Trarieux, the former Minister of Justice, and M. Cavaignac, former Minister of War, all the generals and officers having left Rennes, by order of the Minister of War, the General the Marquis de Gallifet.

Col. Picquart also left Rennes, although he holds no rank in the army.

Dreyfus Impassible.

Dreyfus listened to the oration of M. Demange with a mask of impassibility resembling his frozen attitude during the first days of the trial.

Whatever the prisoner's feelings were as he heard M. Demange pleading for his liberty, he carefully concealed them. M. Demange was still speaking at one o'clock and he announced that he would need another two hours and a half to finish his plea, so the court adjourned until 7.30 to morrow morning, thus fixing the opening of the court on Saturday an hour later than usual. The fact that Maitre Labori has to speak, and that, probably, the Government Commissary, Major Carriere, will reply, makes it practically certain that the verdict will not be given before Monday.

The general impression formed was that the speech of M. Demange must have had a certain effect on the judges, as it was a strong effort, argumentatively.

Will Labori Speak?

There was a rumor after the adjournment of the court that M. Labori had decided not to speak, the idea being that his abstention from so doing, in view of the irritating effect his very utterances had on the court, would be rather an advantage than otherwise to Dreyfus.

M. Labori was asked if there was any truth in this report and he replied with a shrug of the shoulders apparently conveying the impression that the matter was under consideration.

It was generally noted to day that when M. Labori entered the court this morning he spoke to M. Demange in a deprecating tone, and a sharp discussion ensued, almost bordering on a dispute.

The same thing occurred during the usual brief suspension of the sitting. The two lawyers apparently differ about the best method of conducting the case, which, it was said, boded no good for Dreyfus.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Write for catalogue No. [illegible] to the COLUMBIA PHONOGRAPH COMPANY, No. 313 Main street Buffalo, N. Y.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belted at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, [illegible] and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. [illegible] arranged, the round waist or basque [illegible] can be permanently fastened to the [illegible] at the back, thus avoiding the time [illegible] trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phoebe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves?

At the Filipino theaters of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Venie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackey, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

THE BOOKMAKERS.

Margaret Deland says she reads economics, history and the newspapers for instruction and novels only for entertainment.

R. W. Chambers, when not writing books, gives his time to many fads. He collects butterflies, designs uniforms and keeps up his painting.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hampstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

After a good soaking shower is the best time for hand weeding.

A good plan is to keep the growing orchard in cultivation until it comes into bearing well and then seed to clover.

Increased sunlight among the trees brings increased growth and blossom and decreases the tendency to mold and rot.

Peach, cherry and pear trees will bear very little forcing, and on this account wood ashes are better for them than ground bone.

Fruits, especially the apple, are largely controlled in character by soil and climate. Get varieties that are adapted to your locality.

Scraping the moss and old dead bark off the mature trees in the orchard and washing the trunks with some alkaline liquid can always be recommended.—Exchange.

A Good Reason.

Aunt Sophie—And is Tommy a good little boy at school?

Tommy—Yes, auntie.

Aunt Sophie—And why is Tommy a good little boy?

Tommy—'Cause it's better fun to see the other boys get a licking than to get one yourself.

VAUGHAN HITS HARD

The Great Prelate Says the Poor Are Worse Off Than Cattle.

ROBBED BY THE WEALTHY

The Well to do Were Afraid of the Cost of the Proposed Old Age Pension.

Eminent Catholic Attributes Misery of the Poor to the Vices and Teaching of the Rich and Educated—The Rich Also Robbed the Poor of Their Religion.

London, Sept. 8.—Cardinal Vaughan, in addressing the annual conference of the Catholic Truth Society of Stockport, uttered some scathing words upon the condition of the masses in England, framing a heavy indictment against the moneyed classes.

The suppression of monasteries and guilds, the transference of their lands and of the great commons of England to the rich, created a backland and beggared poor. Without ties to bind the people to the land they had drawn into the towns, where they had been [illegible] from better classes.

Millions of human creatures were housed worse than the cattle and the horses of many a lord or squire. Nearly a million of the London poor needed rehousing. The medical authority had reported against 141,000 houses as insanitary, in which the poor were huddled together in numbers varying from four to twelve and more in a single room. What delicacy, modesty, or self-respect could be expected in men and women whose bodies were so shamelessly packed together? In the annual death rate throughout England one in 14 was that of a pauper in the workhouse. In Liverpool it was one in seven, in Manchester one in five, and in London also one in five. The well to do were afraid of the cost of old age pensions, but surely the rich were bound to tax themselves or to be taxed for their poorer brethren. The rich had also robbed the poor of their religion and it was no exaggeration to say that the present condition of the poorer classes, economically and religiously, was attributable in a large measure to the vices and teaching of the rich and the educated in times past.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied. "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Philadelphia North American.

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. PERILS OF THE DEEP

Survivors of a Toronto Vessel Found Near Thunder Bay Island.

FOUR DAYS IN OPEN BOAT

Only the Captain and One Sailor Were Rescued, Remainder of Crew Probably Perished.

The Schooner Lost on Saturday Afternoon Last About Sixty Miles from Goderich—Caught in a Gale of Wind and Sank—The Lost Vessel Belonged to Toronto.

Toronto, Sept.—A despatch from Mackinaw City, Michigan, says that the steamer Case, passing up last night, had on board Capt. Freeman and one sailor, Nelson Alture, the only survivors of the Canadian schooner Lisgar, which foundered in Lake Huron at one o'clock on Sunday afternoon. They had drifted in the yawl 91 hours, when picked up on Thursday morning twenty miles below Thunder Bay Island. Capt. Freeman thinks the remainder of the crew all perished.

The schooner Lisgar, of Toronto, was lost on Sunday afternoon last about 60 miles from Goderich, in Lake Huron. Her crew numbered six men and one woman. Capt. Freeman, of St. Catharines, was in charge of the Lisgar. The captain's wife was cook; Owen Gallagher of St. Catharines, mate; Pat Joyce of the same place, and Frank Mollett, of Kingston, deck hands. There were two other deck hands, one from Tonawanda, N.Y., and one from Buffalo, whose names are unknown. With the schooner Grimsby, the Lisgar was in tow of the steam barge Clinton, bound for Depot Harbor, and loaded with coal from Buffalo, when, shortly after noon, at a point 30 miles northwest of Southampton, they were caught in a gale of wind, and the Lisgar, which was in the middle, suddenly sank, a total loss. The lost schooner belonged to the Matthews line, of Toronto, and the Clinton and the Grimsby were of the same fleet. The Lisgar was an old and rather hard looking craft, but was considered seaworthy. She was tied up at Milloy's wharf for several weeks at the beginning of the season, and before leaving she was freshly caulked.

WAR ON THE TORMENTORS

12 Years of Irritation, Torment and Pain, Relieved and Cured with One Box of Dr. Agnews' Ointment, for Skin Diseases and Piles.

A. Darnell, of Hayden, Neb., writes: "For 12 years I was tormented with itching piles, the agony at times was almost beyond bearing. I tried a dozen or more so called pile remedies without any lasting benefit. One box of Dr. Agnew's Ointment cured me." This remedy cures at home when all else fails.—Sold by H. S. McDonald.

HE BLED TO DEATH.

Sad and Terrible Death of a Sawmill Employee.

Smith's Falls, Sept. 7.—The sawmills of the Gillies Bros. Co., at Braeside were the scene of a frightful accident yesterday afternoon, in which Frank Reid lost his life. While a piece of three-inch deal was being edged it got stuck in the saw. Mr. Reid tried to overcome the difficulty by moving the adjustable saw. A piece of edging flew back and struck him in the groin, cutting the main artery. He pulled it out and walked a few steps, asked for a cup of water, and then dropped to the floor. He bled to death in a few minutes.

WHISKEY FROM THE CLOUDS.

The Latest Scheme of Advertising Comes From Ceylon.

London, Sept. 8.—The Allahabad Pioneer relates that one of the latest ideas in advertising comes from Ceylon, where a firm of whiskey-sellers has engaged an aeronaut who gives a series of balloon ascents, and while ascending he drops bottles of whiskey attached to miniature parachutes. Each ascent will wind up with a pyrotechnic display.

EUGENE FIELD AND TABOR.

How the Humorist Made Life a Burden For the Millionaire.

"Up to middle age the late Senator Tabor's life was one of great hardship," said a former resident of the Silver State, "and when he suddenly became fabulously rich he plunged into luxuries like a starving man wading into a banquet. One of his early freaks was the purchase of several magnificent lace nightrobes which cost $100 apiece and which he kept locked up in a safe during the day. Eugene Field was editor of the Denver Tribune at the time, and those lace nightrobes made him simply hysterical. He wrote column upon column about them, describing the garments in detail, with numerous diagrams depicting sections fore and aft. The diagrams were hideous affairs, which Field carved out himself with a penknife on the back of old wood type. He used to describe how Tabor would forget the combination of the safe and sit up, shivering and naked, half the night trying to remember the right figures.

"Altogether he kept Denver in a roar for weeks and made Tabor so wild that one day he rushed into his office, snatched the unfortunate nightrobes out of their compartment and tore them to threads. 'There, now!' he exclaimed, wiping his forehead and kicking the tattered fragments into a corner, 'I hope that fool will be satisfied. I'll be hanged if I ain't going to get a gunny sack,' he continued, 'cut some holes in the end for my head and arms, and then sleep in it for the rest of my life!'

"When Tabor was appointed to the senate to fill an unexpired term of exactly 30 days, Field broke loose again and had all kinds of fun with the old man. He declared that Tabor opposed the tariff bill on the ground that it encouraged lawlessness in the west. 'I don't know this tariff bill,' he reported the senator as saying in a speech, 'but we have entirely too many of 'em out where I live. There's Wild Bill and Pecos Bill and Billy the Kid—all no good. If you let Tariff Bill have everything to do with the custom house he is liable to steal the Atlantic ocean.' Many of the honest frontier folk took these flights of fancy seriously, and drove Tabor nearly distracted by long letters of remonstrance, urging him to read up and get posted, so as not to disgrace the state.

"At the expiration of the senator's brief term he circulated an autograph album among his fellow members, and the incident tickled Field immensely. He gave what purported to be a copy of the 'sentiments' inscribed in the volume by the different statesmen—such things as 'When this you see, remember me, Roscoe Conkling,' and 'Sure as the moss grows 'round a stump you are my darling sugar lump—I mean chump—George F. Hoar,' and similar nonsense, all of which maddened his victim.

"I think 'Gene Field was the only man Tabor never forgave, for in spite of his gaunt, forbidding exterior, the miner magnate was as tender hearted as a girl. He was really full of sterling qualities, and in his proper sphere he would have been anything but grotesque. One thing is sure—if every fellow he helped in secret would have joined his funeral procession he would have gone to his grave like an emperor of old."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Smoking In the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

Moving Strains.

Elderly Beau (who is making a long call, to fair singer rapturously)—Ah, that song takes me back to the home of my childhood!

Fair Singer's Irrepressible Younger Sister (in a loud whisper)—Can't you sing something that will take him back to the home of his old age?—Harper's Bazar.

Vigorous Language.

"I tell you," said Sammy Snaggs, "that man talked straight from the shoulder."

"Samuel," said Mr. Snaggs severely, "you should not use slang."

"But, father, this was a deaf and dumb man, and he used the sign language."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

Shopgirl's Hard Lot.

Persons complain that shopgirls do not jump actively to wait upon them when they enter a store. Why not? The other day I saw a girl approach a respectably dressed woman of middle age—that's 35—and heard her ask, over the counter, "What would you like, ma'am?"

To this polite attention I was shocked to hear the woman reply: "You shut up! Don't you talk to me! I can ask for what I want, and I don't want any impudence from clerks!"

A few rebuffs from such creatures are quite enough to cool the ardor of any shopgirl.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claims, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his presence.

German Denial of the Statement That Dreyfus Sold French Secrets.

DREYFUS IS INNOCENT.

The Statement Made by The Reichsanzeiger, Semi-Official Organ.

Declared in the Most Positive Manner That No Relations or Connections of Any Kind Ever Existed Between Captain Dreyfus and Any German Agent

Berlin, Sept. 8.—The Reichsanzeiger this evening in the official portion of the paper, publishes the following statement :—

"We are authorized to repeat herewith the declaration which the Imperial Government, while loyally observing the reserve demanded in regard to the international affairs of another country, has made concerning the French captain, Dreyfus.

"For the preservation of his own dignity, and the fulfillment of a duty to humanity, Prince Von Munster, after obtaining the orders of the Emperor, repeatedly made in December, 1894, and in January, 1895, to M. Hanotoux, M. Dupuy and M. Casimir-Perier, declarations to the effect that the Imperial Embassy in France never maintained either directly or indirectly any relations with Dreyfus.

"Secretary of State Von Buelow, in the Reichstag January 24, 1898, made the following statement: 'I declare in the most positive manner that no relations or connections of any kind ever existed between the French ex-captain, Dreyfus, now on Devil's Island, and any German agents.'"

CURTAIN RAISERS.

England has eight "Little Minister" companies.

"The Belle of New York" has registered its four hundredth performance at the Shaftesbury in London.

John Kernell will star next season in a new comedy, "The Crooked Mr. Straight," a satire of the family physician.

Emperor William is to have a play produced. It remains to be seen whether his pen is mightier than his sword.

Three dramatists are on the list of the 40 French immortals, Anatole France, Francois Coppee and Henri Lavedan.

Miss Janette Steer, an English actress, appeared with success lately at a Birmingham theater in the role of Hamlet.

General Lew Wallace says the dramatization of his book, "Ben-Hur," will be produced only in Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago.

A Pittsburg minister lately invited by public advertisement the management, company and patrons of a city theater to visit his church during Sunday services.

English players are less hesitant than Americans to appeal to the public when impoverished. The latest example is Jolly Nash, the one time leading music hall singer.

In a play projected for production in New York the author tries to hold the mirror up to truth by making the villains in the piece lawyers, policemen and court officers.

Mme. Patti now earns about $50,000 a year, but has made as much as $800,000. Melba's income when fully engaged is $150,000, and Sarah Bernhardt has for years averaged $70,000.

Miss Nethersole's next season will begin early in October and will be specially interesting for the reason that she will for a time abandon her repertory and appear in one play, Clyde Fitch's "Sapho," which he is now preparing for her from Alphonse

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He meated cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

"Holland" is said to be an abbreviation of "hollow land."

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery in Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues got away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bust his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get riddled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my dernedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—[illegible] Herald.

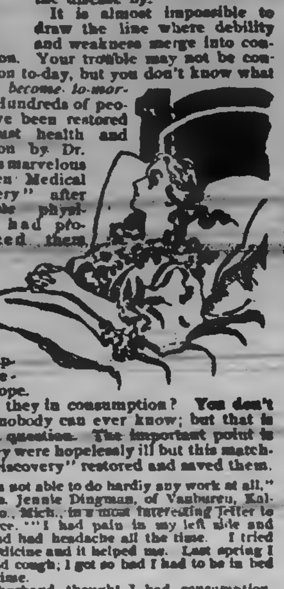
THE REAL QUESTION.

The real question of disease is "Can I be cured?" If you or anyone dear to you is losing strength and energy and vitality, if you are wise you will not spend much time trying to figure out just what name to call the disease by.

It is almost impossible to draw the line where debility and weakness merge into consumption. Your trouble may not be consumption to-day, but you don't know what it may become to-morrow. Hundreds of people have been restored to robust health and condition by Dr. Pierce's marvelous "Golden Medical Discovery" after reputable physicians had pronounced them consumptive beyond hope.



Were they in consumption? You don't know; nobody can ever know; but that is not the question. The important point is that they were hopelessly ill but this matchless "Discovery" restored and saved them.

"I was not able to do hardly any work at all," says Mrs. Jennie Dingman, of Vanburen, Kalkaska Co., Mich., in a most interesting letter to Dr. Pierce. "I had pain in my left side and back, and had headache all the time. I tried your medicine and it helped me. Last spring I had a bad cough; I got so bad I had to be in bed all the time.

"My husband thought I had consumption. He wanted me to get a doctor, but I told him if it was consumption they could not help me. We thought we would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and before I had taken one bottle the cough was stopped and I have had no more of it returning. Your medicine is the best I have ever taken."

Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce. He will send you good fatherly, professional advice in a plain sealed envelope absolutely free. His thirty years experience as chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y., has made him an expert in chronic diseases.

Scotch Fingering Yarn.

We are selling this year a heavy ribbed Worsted Stocking in the largest sizes for twenty-five cents. They are made on our own electric power knitting machines, from a fine quality of pure fingering yarn. The color is an excellent glossy black. This quality is usually sold from 40c. to 50c. per pair, yet our price is only 15c. in smaller sizes, running gradually up to 25c in the largest sizes. If you were able to get this yarn for 3c. per skein the yarn alone would cost all we ask, yet this yarn is sold for 8c per skein. Come and look at them and wonder how we do it. The Port Hope Knitting Works, 382 George street, Peterborough.

The Lumber Boom.

The Gilmour Company has established a camp in Harvey and Galway, and proposes to take out a lot of timber from the old limits. This limit was considered exhausted a short time ago, but the recent great advance in the price of forest products has made it valuable.

Mr. Richardson in Town.

Mr. Isaac Richardson, of Millbrook, who was reported to have quit the country, leaving a number of unpaid bills, called at the Times office on Saturday. He explained that he simply took advantage of a drop in the price of hogs to visit Port Arthur on business, where he has some property. He was dumbfounded when he reached there to read in the papers that he had skipped. He desires the Times to state that he intends to seek substantial damages from the Peterborough papers that published the story that he had left the country and defrauded his creditors. Already one writ has been issued, and others will follow. Mr. Richardson will continue his business as usual.

PERSONAL.

Dr. and Mrs. Willis, of Hiawatha Camp, were in town to-day.

Mr. W. D. Parker, manager of the Ontario Bank, has returned from his trip to England.

Mr. Taylor, formerly local manager of the Bank of Montreal, is in town making an inspection of the local branch.

Mr. John Baird, of Sherbrooke, Que., a former citizen of Peterborough, has been visiting his son, Mr. George Baird, of the Auburn mills. Mr. Baird was out at the Crimea at the time of the war of 1854-56.

Miss Aggie Hall has returned from an enjoyable trip up west.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Dumble and Mrs. W. F. Johnston left on Saturday to spend a week at Stony Lake.

Miss Jennie Smith, of Barnardo avenue, has returned from a visit to friends in Toronto.

Mrs. J. Walters and Misses Mabel and Frankie Courtice, are visiting friends in Keene.

Mr. Middleton, Miss Bryant and the Misses Middleton, of Mobile, Ala., are visiting Mrs. Crant, Downie-st.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barrie returned home Friday from Toronto, where they had been spending a week.

Miss Ethel McConnel, of Norwood, is visiting in town, the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Hugh McIndoo, George street.

Mr. Fred Tully, of Ormond & Walsh's, has returned to town after spending a couple of weeks in Toronto.

Mrs. G. W. Pearce has returned to her home in Chicago after spending a pleasant visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Heubeck, Bethune street.

Arbitrators Award.

It is stated that the Bradburn property will pay $10 a foot frontage, the Landy property $9 per foot and the Chamberlain estate and Conroy property $8 per foot. This will be an increase over the former ground rent of about $1,600 a year, or in other words the town will receive $21,000 more for the property during the next 21 years of the lease than was received during the expired lease of 21 years.

More Bungling.

The way the street paving is being bungled is exciting many ratepayers to wrath. No one expects the engineer to please everybody, but the ratepayers certainly feel that it is time to kick when pavements have to be torn up and relaid. As is the case with Hunter street in front of the Oriental. It seems that the pavement as originally put down at this point was too low by over two inches, and it had to be raised. Surely with two full fledged town engineers, and any number of inspectors, such mistakes should be impossible.

Ladies' Auxiliary.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A., will hold its first meeting of the season on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 12th at 3 o'clock. The business will be to arrange for the opening reception to young men, on the third Tuesday of September, also the discussion of plans for the season's work.

WINTER IN THE KLONDYKE.

Interesting Letter From a Former Peterborough Man—He Tells His Experience in the Frozen North—How He Reached the Country in 1896—Over the White Pass.

Mr. A. H. Sturges, who at one time was an employee of the Times, Peterborough, has spent a year or more in the Klondyke, and writes the Times a letter. After describing his trip from Toronto to the Coast, he says:

"In January, 1896, I visited several of the more important cities on the Pacific coast, and while in Seattle I came in contact with many freighters, miners from the Klondyke and representatives of transportation companies. I learned all I could of the country from those who had been there, found out what articles would be likely to sell best, and then laid in a stock of butter, cream, milk, crystallized eggs, stationery and typewriting supplies. September 30 I took passage on a coast steamer at Seattle bound for Skaguay. Our course lay through and the inland passage, and I can say Puget and Queen Charlotte Sound that I believe the scenery along this route is among the most beautiful in the world. Vancouver Island is recognized as a sportsman's paradise. With the ocean on one side and the sound on the other, abounding in magnificent fresh water lakes and mountain streams, it furnishes almost every variety of fish and game. In the game line the fauna ranges from grizzly bear and deer to rabbits, and as to fish I have caught every kind I ever saw with the exception of black bass. The salmon and trout varities are especiall plentiful. I was quite successful too, in hunting deer, but my ambition did not extend to grizzly bear.

"Over the White Pass it is forty-two miles from Skaguay to Lake Bennett. I had my goods sent over on pack horses, and October 6, with one companion set out to make the journey on foot. There was a light fall of snow on the ground, but the air was merely bracing, not cold. I walked with my coat and vest unbuttoned, and my light overcoat on my arm, and accomplished that forty-two mile walk in a little less than twelve hours. One can realize that this is good time when it is remembered that many people have consumed six months in making the trip, though, of course such parties were hampered by their outfits and by having undertaken the task at an unfavorable time of the year. The points are now connected by railway, which was in course of construction at that time.

"I remained at Bennett City five days while my barge was being built. Then, on the morning of October 11, with a party of six I pushed out into the lake which was full of floating ice. There was a cold rain falling, and the wind was blowing from the north almost a gale. Every one told us we would not be able to reach Dawson City that season and how little this prediction lacked of being correct I realized later.

"From Lake Bennett to the Yukon River is a chain of lakes, rapids and short rivers, and the trip is beset by many dangers. The perils of White Horse rapids can not be overestimated. Had it not been for the two French-Canadian boatmen who worked their passage down with us, I doubt if we could have accomplished the journey without serious disaster. Thirty-Mile River is another hazardous part of the route. The current is very swift running from five to eight miles an hour, and the channel is tortuous. Sometimes, upon rounding a bend, we would see a big bowlder immediately in front of us, to avoid which would require skill, prompt action and the combined strength of the entire party. At one time we missed one of these obstructions by not more than an inch. Had we struck it we would certainly have been swamped. The banks of the stream are strewn with the wreckage, attesting the disasters of other expeditions less fortunate than ours. It is said that more boats have been lost here than at any other point along the trail.

"October 19 we reached old Fort Selkirk, that historic spot were the Lewis and Pelly Rivers unite to form the Yukon proper. The fort was destroyed by Indians in 1859, and was a ruin until the beginning of the Klondyke rush, when it was restored, and is now a flourishing Canadian army post, with a full quota of soldiers and Northwestern mounted police, to whose efforts is due the good order and respect of law so noticeable in the region.

"Once in the Yukon, we began having trouble with the ice. The water close to the banks was frozen solid, and only a comparatively narrow space in the middle of the stream was navigable, and this was full of floating ice cakes. All we could do was to float with the current and fight off the tumbling blocks. It was a matter of life and death with us. We had made no provision for passing the winter there, and to have been caught in the ice would certainly have resulted seriously to us. At night we would push in as close as we could to the bank and anchor, and then in the morning we would find it necessary to get out with axes and saws and cut ourselves out of the freshly formed ice before we could get back into the channel. Every day this became more and more difficult, and our progress correspondingly slower. It will be readily understood then that it was with a feeling of great relief that on the morning of October 24 we sighted Dawson City. The temperature was 20 degrees below zero.

"We landed that afternoon, having made the record-breaking time of fourteen days from Lake Bennett, and that night the river froze solid. Had we been twelve hours later we could not have touched at Dawson before June of this year. When I saw the channel of the Yukon locked in ice the next morning, I realized that those who warned me at Bennett City had missed the truth by a hair.

"It is one of the peculiarities of the Dawson City market that the closing of the river is the signal for a sharp upward tendency in prices. Within a day they double or treble, according to the commodity, so my arrival was opportune in more ways than one. Butter that cost me 15c I sold for $1.50. a for $7.50 a case in Seattle bought me pound, cream and milk that I bought from $36 to $48 a case in Dawson. Writing paper sold for from $7 to $8 a ream. These prices kept up until the opening of navigation in spring.

"Life in Dawson City in winter is just as comfortable as in St. Louis. You can keep warm there, and I have sometimes found it difficult to do so here. There is no moisture in the air and no wind. Forty degrees below zero is very comfortable and during such extremes as 50, 60 and 70 degrees below we got along very nicely by wearing furs. I have seen men working on the dumps in their shirt sleeves in 50-degree weather and they never complained of the cold.

"I made several trips out into the mines while I was there, and staked out twenty-two claims, though I arrived too late to have anything done on them. They are being developed now, and reports from them are very encouraging. For some of these interests I have been offered four and five times what they cost me.

"In my opinion, the Klondike is a good place for a young man if he has a little money, and as to the dangers of the undertaking, they count for little with a person of sound health and good nerve.

"I met George Kincard here and some of the Goodman party, with whom I was personally acquainted. I was down to Atlin on business a short time ago and met [illegible] who is hustling as usual. He was doing a little mining.

"I will now close. I enclose $2 for which please send me the Times, addressed to Dawson City.

M. A. STURGES.

Dawson City, July 2nd, 1899.

The Tramp Nuisance.

As suggested by this journal, the Attorney General of Ontario has commenced an active war against tramps. It is said that it is the intention of the Government to start out Mr. Joe Rogers, one of the Government detectives, with four or five assistants, for the purpose of arresting all the tramps who are hovering between railway stations in the province. This is a step in the right direction. Almost any day gangs of tramps may be seen on the Ashburnham side of the river below the C. P. R., as well as in other places near the railway stations.

The Sleeping City.

A well filled house greeted both performances of "The Sleeping City" in Bradburn's opera house on Saturday. The play proved very mirth provoking and singing and dancing good. The escape from prison on top of an express train and fire scene at the asylum were very realistic and were much appreciated. A funny comedy entitled "The Corner Grocery" is the next attraction on the boards, and should call for a full house.

Historical Relic.

Mr. R. C. McHarrie, the popular local manager of the Bank of Commerce, has in his possession the original copper plate used for printing a five shilling promissory note, issued by a building committee of the Court House and gaol. The note or bond, as inscribed on the plate, reads as follows:

No. 18—

The Building Committee appointed to superintend the erection of a Court House and Gaol in the intended District of Colborne, promise to pay the bearer at the Treasurer's Office in Peterborough, the sum of FIVE SHILLINGS currency twelve months after date with interest for value received.

——————Treas.
——————Sec.

PETERBOROUGH.

The order for printing the plates was dated Nov. 8, 1839. The Court House was erected by the Colborne district, the secretary of the building committee being W. H. Wrighton, father of our respected fellow-townsman, Mr. W. H. Wrighton. The work was done under the supervision of the late Edmund Chamberlain, who had the contract. In the fifties Colborne district was divided and Peterborough and Victoria Counties set apart as a separate municipality. Subsequently Victoria separated from Peterborough and set up business on her own account.

Hockey Club Meeting.

A meeting of the members of the hockey club is called for Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the Oriental parlors. The secretary's statement for the past season will be read, and prospects for the coming year discussed.

Perfect Tools Necessary for Perfect Work.

A Perfect Medicine is Required for the Building Up of Nerve, Tissue and Flesh and for Cleansing the Blood.

Paine's Celery Compound the true Disease Banisher and Best Health Giver.

As well made and perfect tools are necessary for the construction of the perfect working machine, so is a perfect medicine necessary for the establishment of a healty appetite, complete digestion, regular action of the bowels and other excretory organs.

The fact is firmly established that Paine's Celery Compound is the only true and reliable medicine for the perfect rebuilding of worn out tissues, unbraced and weak nerves, wasting flesh and waning strength.

If the poison seeds of disease have made your blood foul and sluggish, Paine's Celery Compound will purify and cleanse it, causing the life stream to course healthfully and joyfully to every part of the body. If the small ills of life, such as headache, sleeplessness and stomach irregularities make unhappy days for you, Paine's Celery Compound will speedily drive away the tormentors.

No other medicine ever given to intelligent humanity has bestowed such showers of blessings on individuals and families. One single trial will convince you of its wonderous powers and virtues. It makes people well, and best of all it keeps them well.

Report That Bridges for the Transvaal Have Been Ordered.

WHAT KRUGER MEANS

It is Said That Oom Paul Has Accepted the Joint Commission and Recognized Suzerinty.

The Coming of British Troops Not Regarded as Meaning Certain War—Reported That Boers Are Massing on the Frontier and There is No Abatement in Preparations.

London, Sept. 11.—The activity in the War and Admiralty offices continues to-day, though there is nothing new regarding the Transvaal situation. It is said that orders have been sent to America for light iron girders and bridging sections for probable use in South Africa. Transports are moving to the docks preparatory to embarking troops.

The Boer Explanation.

Pretoria, Sept. 11.—Excitement prevails here pending the decision of the Cabinet. Secretary of State Reitz has left this city for Johannesburg and Cape Town. The likelihood of war is much discussed. The coming of British troops is not regarded as meaning certain war, but merely as making up for the paucity of troops in South Africa, so much commented upon during the past month.

Proposal Accepted.

Pretoria, Sept 10.—In the course of an interview yesterday State Attorney Smuts said that he understands that the Transvaal's last despatch as an acceptance of the proposal for a joint commission of inquiry. With the withdrawal of the offer for a five years' franchise the condition thereto attached, namely the relinquishment of suzerainty, also falls to the ground.

He declared he fully believed the British Government desired a peaceful solution of the difficulty, and expressed the opinion that the Transvaal's last despatch would further that end.

President Kruger is reported to be prepared to recognize Great Britain's Suzerainty in the Transvaal.

Exodus Takes Place.

A despatch from Bloemfontein reports the distribution of arms and a considerable exodus to Cape Colony. According to this correspondent, the Boers are massing on the frontiers, and there is no abatement of the war preparations in the Transvaal.

Forming a Laager.

A despatch to the Daily Mail from Charlestown says that 200 men with six guns are forming a laager at Amersfort, thirty miles north of the Natal border, which is being patrolled by armed Boers. The Zululand Boers are flocking to the Transvaal expecting that there will be war with Great Britain.

THIS ARMOUR IS TOUGH.

New Plates in England Cannot be Pierced by Shot.

London, Sept. 11.—Interesting experiment with a new armor plate for war ships have just been concluded at Shoeburyness, at the mouth of the Thames. The outer plate, six inches thick, is made of the best steel, the backing consisting of a special composition, the nature of which is being kept a secret. New plates were fired at with a 350-pound projectile at a distance of 200 yards. When black powder was used the armor plate was, after several shots found to be practically uninjured. The shot was in some instances reduced to powder by the force of the impact. With cordite it was found that the outer plate could be penetrated three inches, and under certain circumstances the shot went right through, but the severests tests failed to crack the plate. In naval warfare, a hole made by a shot below the water line can always be plugged up, but cracked and split armor plates necessitate dry-docking and new plates. When two shots were fired simultaneously, hitting the plate two feet apart, there was still no sign of fracture.

Cabinet Crisis in Australia.

Sydney, N. S. W., Sept. 11.—Right Hon George Houston Reid, the Premier, Treasurer, and Minister of Railways, and the other members of the Cabinet, resigned to-day in consequence of the action of the Assembly, which Sept. 7th, by a vote of 75 to 41, passed a resolution declaring a lack of confidence in the Ministry. The resignation of the Ministers was accepted, and Lyne, the leader of the Opposition, was summoned to form a new cabinet.

Fear of Famine Gone.

Bombay, Sept. 11.—Rain has improved the crop outlook in Western India, and the fear of a famine has been removed. The weather conditions foreshadow more rain. The cotton crop has already been benefited.

GROSSEST PROSTITUTION OF JUSTICE!

What the Papers the World Over Are Saying About the Verdict of the Great Court Martial at Rennes.

THE VERDICT WAS A PREARRANGED FARCE.

Major Esterhazy Says the Whole Business Was a Farce Arranged in Advance, and Doubtless Dreyfus Will Soon be Liberated.

Rennes, France, Sept. 11. — When the verdict of the court-martial finding Capt. Dreyfus guilty of betraying French military secrets to the Germans and sentencing him to ten years' detention in a fortress, was announced, M. Labori turned pale and clenched his fists. Maitre Demange seemed to suddenly break down and looked five years older.

He Hears the News.

M. Hild, Maitre Labori's assistant, went into the ante-room, where Dreyfus was awaiting his fate, a few minutes before the notification ceremony. Dreyfus looked up expectantly. The lawyer hesitated for words with which to break the news.

"Well, what is it?" the prisoner asked calmly.

"Ten years in a fortress," blurted out the counsel himself more overcome apparently than the man before him.

"I expected it," was Dreyfus' only reply, and then he leaned his face in his hands.

Sergt. Touthian came to conduct him to the court room. He touched Dreyfus on the shoulder. "Wait a moment," said the condemned man, without moving. The sergeant waited. Presently Dreyfus lifted his head, showing the same mask-like face which he wore during the first days of the trial, and without a word followed his custodian to the place of condemnation.

Dreyfus was allowed twenty-four hours in which to make an appeal.

How His Wife Appeared.

His wife, who was waiting in torture and suspense at her house, bore the news bravely, and when visiting her husband showed the onlookers who were in the streets no sign of her suffering as she walked from her carriage to the prison.

Maitre Demange visited his client after sentence had been pronounced. The veteran lawyer was more overcome than the victim himself. He spoke freely about the day's events, though his words were only whispers, his voice having gone after his two days' pleading.

"Dreyfus first words to me," said M. Demange, "were: 'Tell my wife to be of good heart. Help her to bear this cruel, unmerited blow.'" Continuing, M. Demange said: "Dreyfus himself had more courage than any of the rest of us. He realizes that his trial has been a great moral victory for his cause despite the verdict, and he is full of hope for the future."

He Will Appeal.

When asked to give his opinion of the verdict, M. Demange smiled genially, and whispered: "Lawyers never have opinions on verdicts in which they are interested." He added, that he would not stay in Rennes, his presence being unnecessary. Dreyfus will sign a notice of appeal to-day, and pending a hearing, the execution of the sentence will be suspended, he retaining his present privileges.

The five years Dreyfus has already served limits the period left to serve to five years.

Judges Were Cowardly.

A point which the Dreyfus party particularly emphasize is the cowardice of the judges. Reports run that three of them wanted to acquit the prisoner. The majority succeeded in winning over one vote by offering to apply the minimum penalty, and to add extenuating circumstances, and even offered to request the Government to pardon the prisoner. It is assuredly ludicrous to plead extenuating circumstances for a condemned traitor who betrayed his Fatherland, not being driven to such a course by want, but some of the judges were so anxious to procure condemnation that they would do anything to attain that end.

English Comments.

London Times—We do not hesitate to pronounce it the grossest and most appalling prostitution of justice the world has witnessed in modern times. All the outrages, scandals which marked the course of the trial pale into insignificance beside the crowning scandal of the verdict.

London Daily Mail—Rennes is France's moral Sedan.

London Daily Graphic—The supreme effort of human wrongheadedness.

London Daily Chronicle—Mercier, one of the blackest scoundrels in history.

American Comments.

N.Y. Tribune—The Rennes court has wrought a work of hideous injustice.

N.Y. Sun—The present French Republic will forfeit the respect of mankind if means be not found to rectify the shameful decision.

N.Y. [illegible]—It still remains true that a most terrible wrong has been repeated, and that in France real justice may not be done.

N.Y. World—France is now on trial, not at Rennes, not anywhere within her own borders, but at the bar of civilization. French officers have, in the name of France, spat in the face of justice. France is at the bar.

Boston Post—The verdict will be generally regarded throughout the civilized world as a monstrous wrong.

Washington Evening Star—The verdict indicated the French army as corrupt and incompetent and a menace to the stability of the Republic.

Washington Evening Times—The nation which would allow such a hideous crime against justice and humanity to go unredressed and unpunished need not expect to escape certain and terrible retribution.

Chicago Tribune—By its exhibition of injustice the French nation has proclaimed itself a race of degenerates.

Louisville Courier-Journal—France will expiate in blood, in tears, in humiliation the crime of yesterday.

May Not Be Imprisoned.

Paris, Sept. 11.—The representative of the Associated Press here learns on good authority that one of the members of the Cabinet to-day told a friend that Dreyfus probably would not have to undergo further imprisonment and that if he was sent to prison his place of confinement would probably be the Island of St. Marguerite, near Cannes, where Marshal Bazaine was incarcerated and whence he escaped.

M. Clemenceau, in the Aurore, says Col. Jouaust's object was to save the general staff and that between Dreyfus and Mercier he selected Mercier. "The affair," declares M. Clemenceau, "was scandalously conducted. Major Carrier's contention that the prisoner had failed to prove his innocence enabled the court to convict the prisoner without the evidence of the petit bleu. He also says he pities the men who by the sentence inflicted an outrage and showed the most culpable weakness. Members of the tribunal," Mr. Clemenceau asserts, "were convinced that Dreyfus was innocent, but were anxious to extend extenuating circumstances to Mercier and other generals."

M. Cornely, in the Figaro, holds that the verdict, by reducing the original term of imprisonment, shows that the campaign for revision was legitimate. M. Cornely adds that he believes that when Col. Jouaust refused to hear Col. Schwartzkoppen, former German military attache in Paris, and Col. Panizzardi, the Italian military attache, the president of the court was certain of Dreyfus' innocence. The tribunal hesitated between Dreyfus and Mercier and replied neither yes nor no. If Dreyfus is guilty he should have received a penalty for the aggravating, instead of leniency for extenuating circumstances. M. Cornely concludes by declaring that it is deplorable to see judges make common cause with the generals who saved Esterhazy, and the injury which this will in the end inflict upon the army.

What Tarte Thinks.

Montreal, Sept. 10.—Mr. Tarte, writing from Paris, says of the Dreyfus case: "More than three-quarters of the people of France, and a good number of the other portion, believe in the culpability of Dreyfus. The circumstantial proof accumulated against him by the chiefs of the army leaves little room for doubt. But direct proof so seldom possible in a trail for treason, has not been produced at Rennes any more than in the trial of 1894."

The Verdict a Prearranged Farce.

London, Sept. 11.—Major Esterhazy the real betrayer of France, in whose stead Dreyfus is suffering, comments to-day in the Evening News on the verdict in the Dreyfus case, saying Dreyfus was justly condemned, as the inevitable result of the evidence collected by Gen. Mercier. This, according to Esterhazy, bore conviction to the minds of the judges and, he added, court martial following the previous finding declared Dreyfus guilty and I [illegible]. Continuing, Esterhazy said; "I believe the sentence was in accordance with an understanding with the Government. Dreyfus is in a position to claim a reduction of his sentence by one-half. The whole business was a farce, arranged in advance, and, doubtless, he will soon be liberated."

Cannot Crush the Khalifa.

Cairo, Sept. 11.—It is reported from Omdurman that Sheikh Abdul Samad, who has been pursuing the Khalifa with friendly Arabs, has reached Int Seraid near the Khalifa's camp. Finding that the Khalifa's force consisted of 500 horse men, 3,000 footmen, and 1,100 rifles—three times his own force—the Sheikh abandoned all idea of attack. The Kordofan tribes are evidently unable to unite and crush the Khalifa. Preparations at Omdurman point to a near expedition to Kordofan and Darfur.

A Royal Archbishop.

Paris, Sept. 11—"Father Max" or in other words His Royal Highness Prince Max of Saxony, has been preaching to the aged and other helpless poor who gather daily for a meal and sermonette at the Sacred Heart Memorial Church on the hill of Montmartre. The Prince, who will be remembered as a hard-working curate at the German Catholic Church in Whitechapel, will probably be raised to the vacant Archbishopric of Cologne, by an earnest and cordial agreement between Leo XIII. and William II. The chief objector is the Prince himself, who would have preferred the life of an apostlic free-lance with a dash of Christian Socialism in his priestly program.

A Daily Spectacle.

Editor Morning Times :

Sir,—It is not an uncommon thing to see three or four men working on the streets and one or more of our town engineers with a street "inspector" watching them. The other day I happened to see Engineer Hay, Assistant Engineer Ranney, Engineer Sam Belcher and two other bosses watching a couple of men at work. Is this thing to continue?

More Lumbermen Wanted

A despatch from Pembroke says: "For the first time in a number of years shantymen are at a premium, and a sufficient number cannot be obtained to properly carry on the lumbering operations in the north woods this winter. Agents of the different lumber firms are patrolling the Ottawa valley for men. Telegrams and letters have been sent to places in the lower provinces asking for men to come here and be hired, although a few have responded, the demand is still far in excess of the supply. In consequence of the scarcity of laborers, wages are away up, and are still rising. Men who have never had any experience in the lumber woods can this year command a larger wage than was paid last year to experienced log and timber makers. The cause of this state of affairs is the lumbering industry is that other branches of business have been improving of late, and as a consequence, have taken all spare laboring men. It is estimated by lumber experts that unless sufficient men can be had in the near future to go to the woods, the cut will be several millions of feet less than was expected earlier in the season, owing solely to the fact that there are no men to cut down the trees."

The "practically an ultimatum" decided upon by the British government amounts to this: Kruger has either to go down to Cape Town and take his medicine or stay up in Pretoria and take it. [illegible]

BRITISH STORM SUNTAI

Captain Williams, With Over 3,000 Men, Destroys a Niger Village.

BREACH MADE IN WALLS

A Defiant Chief Badly Defeated and Escapes With Only About Twenty Followers.

The Expedition Halted Outside the Town and Opened Fire With a Seven-Pounder at 400 Yards—A Storming Party of 80 Men Rushed Into the Place.

London, Sept. 12.—Details have been received of the operations of a British punitive expedition against the pagan town of Suntai in Upper Nigeria, which was entrusted by the Niger Company to Capt. Williams, of the South Wales Borderers, in order to avenge the death of Captain Parker, killed while operating against these same Pagans.

An expedition consisting of 150 troops of the Royal Niger Constabulary, assisted by some 3,000 Zibu and Donganese friendlies, including 800 Fulani horsemen, left Ibi, the military headquarters on the Binue, for Suntai. The expedition carried a Maxim and a seven pounder and the whole force was under command of Capt. Williams, assisted by two other officers, and accompanied by S. E. O. Hewby and Dr. Wells. It has now returned, after a successful but difficult campaign. The expedition marched in easy stages from Ibi to Suntai, a distance of fifty-five miles, and found the town surrounded by a 17 foot wall, behind which was a ditch 8 feet deep. The wooden gates of the town had been blockaded by the trunks and boughs of huge forest trees.

A Defiant Chief.

The Chief of Suntai had long defied the Royal Niger Company and his Fulani liege lord, the Emir of Bakundi, and recently defeated a force sent against him by the company, in which poor Parker lost his life. He was known to have gathered round him some 400 [illegible] and Bornuese adventurers [illegible].

The expedition halted outside the town and opened fire on the place with the seven pounder at 400 yards. When a breach had been effected [illegible] a storming party of eighty men rushed the place. Very heavy hand to hand fighting followed. The natives fought stubbornly, contesting every inch of ground, and had to be driven from street to street at the point of the bayonet. Their losses were comparatively large, and ours were by no means light (five killed and twenty-five wounded.) Not more than twenty of the defenders escaped, including the chief, who was shot in the cheek and had his horse killed under him, but nevertheless managed to get away. Suntai was destroyed.

SHEPHERD DOGS IN WAR.

Scotch Collies Used in Germany for Finding the Wounded.

Berlin, Sept. 11.—For the last five years a society founded under the auspices of Herr Bungartz, the animal painter, has been training Scotch shepherd dogs to assist the relief parties in discovering the whereabouts of wounded in battle, and last week the general in command of the ambulance manoeuvres in connection with the 8th German army corps near Coblentz, allowed four of these sagacious creatures to take part in the exercises. Their value was abundantly proved, for they tracked down in a few minutes a score of men so concealed that the bearers could never have discovered them in daylight, much less at night. Herr Bungartz gave a lecture at the close of the proceedings on the breeding and education of these dogs of war, and several regiments are keeping small packs of them on their own account.

The Busby is Doomed.

London, Sept. 10.—The imposing headgear of the Guards, the classic bearskin, is doomed. It appears that great difficulty has been experienced of late in keeping up the necessary supply of busbies, in consequence of bearskins becoming so scarce, and a committee will shortly meet to consider the important question of a new helmet.

They Refuse Obedience.

London, Sept. 9.—The Church of England fight continues to attract attention. Most of the bishops, including the Bishop of Lincoln, Right Rev. Edward King, who were tried several years ago for ritualistic practices, have issued letters to their various dioceses, ordering obedience of the archbishop's decision. Many of the clergy, however, frankly announce that they will not do so.

Charged With Assault.

High County Constable Cochrane took a trip to Ennismore yesterday to serve a summons on Peter McGrath, who is charged by Wm. Purdue with assault. The parties are neighbors and the trouble appears to have arisen out of Purdue driving over a lane or road to which McGrath claims he had no right. The assault in question is said to have occurred on Friday last and the weapon used to have been a pitchfork. The matter will be threshed out before Police Magistrate Edmison to-morrow.

A Good Idea.

The Council of Otonabee has caused the assessment rolls to be published and a copy supplied to each ratepayer. This is a good idea; and would be a worthy example for Peterborough to follow. The assessment inequalities here are glaring, and should be rectified.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 7, 1899

THE TRAMP NUISANCE.

The tramp problem is one that has bothered the people of Peterborough not a little of late years. Magistrate Dumble is not the kind of man to deal lightly with these gentry, but in some cases he has allowed the tramp to depart on condition that they leave town. Recently the Attorney General was appealed to for instructions, and the following letter was received in reply:

"It has been found upon investigation that most of the numerous burglaries and other crimes of violence committed recently in the various parts of the province have been the works of tramps of the class usually found working along the lines of railways and camping in the woods and barns on the outskirts of cities, towns and villages. It is deemed necessary that these men should be driven out of the province as soon as possible, and it is thought by the Department that the best way to bring about this result is for the magistrate before whom these tramps are brought upon charges of vagrancy to impose the full term of imprisonment in the Central Prison allowed by law. The practise of giving them the option of a fine or so many hours to clear out of the municipality is producing very unsatisfactory results. You are requested therefore, upon any of these men being brought before you, to see that the law is strictly and vigorously administered."

A man in Milwaukee stole $20 to provide food for his family, he having been ill and unable to work. When arrested he pleaded guilty and the court despite the circumstances, sentenced him to two year's imprisonment. His wife upon hearing the sentence had to be put under arrest to prevent her from killing her children. So says a despatch. It would look more reasonable had she been locked up to prevent her from killing the judge.

About 36,000,000 babies are born each year, an average of 70 every minute, that is, 10 more in each minute than there are beats of the clock. A man with a pronounced weakness for statistics has figured that if all the 36,000,000 little ones were placed in a line of cradles the cradles would girdle the earth. If carried one by one in their mother's arms past a given point the procession would continue night and day for a year.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

MAXIMS AS CIVILIZERS

Two Powerful British Expiditions Going to Subdue African Tribes.

USE POISONED ARROWS

John Bull Has Just Two More Little Wars to Occupy His Attention.

The Appams Will Oppose British Rifles by Deadly Poisoned Weapons—Slaves Sold for Percussion Caps—Gunboat Taken to Pieces and Will be Used Against Them.

Liverpool, Sept. 10.—The chief topic of conversation in the Niger Coast Protectorate, according to despatches, is the forthcoming expedition against the Cross River tribes, which is really going to be an important affair. The Cross River tribes have been giving trouble for a long time past, and with the gradual opening up of the district the opposition of the natives to interference with their barbarous customs has become more acute. It is believed that the Ibos and the Qua-Ibos, who form the majority of the inhabitants, have been worked up to oppose the British by the Aros, a curious people supposed to consist of twelve large families, and extending as far inland as the Niger proper. They are great slave dealers, and have been in the habit of supplying a large number of slaves for sacrifice to the neighboring tribes. These slaves they barter against percussion caps. The spread of white influence is naturally calculated to upset these habits.

Bluejackets Ready.

Another tribe against which the military operations will be directed are the Appams, or Albams, who fight with poisoned arrows. It is thought they may join with the Ibos. Judging from the preparations which are being made, the Cross River expedition will be quite as important an undertaking as the Benin campaign. A body of bluejackets from one or two of the gunboats on the West African station will, it is stated, participate in the operations, and sections from the Imperial Niger troops, the Niger Coast Protectorate troops, and the Royal Niger Constabulary will be requisitioned. The gunboat Heron is being taken to pieces in the Niger and will be brought round to Old Calabar. The expedition, it is understood, will be concentrated at Bonny or Old Calabar on October 1, and a portion of the force will probably push right through the Cross River district to Dagama. The country is for the most part covered with dense bush, and the natives are known to possess a quantity of Minie rifles [illegible] over land from the German settlement of Cameroons.

An Advertising Point.

Mrs. Cadger—They tell me, Henrietta, that your husband is unkind to you.

Mrs. Howes—Yes, John is not very gentle in his manners, I must admit, but there is one thing I will say for him, he never kicks up a rug or creases a tidy.—Boston Transcript.

Knew When to Quit.

"I suppose you made your money through your holdings in stock."

"Well," said the financier, "they had something to do with it, but the really important considerations weren't my holdings so much as my let goings."—Washington Star.

A Sudden Start.

"You used to go to school with Coppens, the new millionaire, didn't you?"

"I did. Fact is, I gave him his first start in life."

"How?"

"With a bent pin."—[illegible]

Snap Shots With a Graphophone.

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT.

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on their alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was "out after elephants" and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums.

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fed the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Impure water in summer often causes disease among poultry.

The objection to late hatched fowls is the danger of their being stunted.

Poultry matures within a year and is easily changed in any of its characteristics.

Irregular feeding invites derangement of the digestive organs and often causes disease.

In nearly all cases the male imparts the color. When white males are used all the chickens will be white.

Generally, ground bone is one of the best forms in which to give lime to the laying hens when they need it.

By using milk instead of water in mixing the soft feed for fowls it serves both for moisture and nourishment.

One advantage in favor of the white breeds is that the pin feathers do not show so plainly as in the black plumaged birds.

Cornmeal does not contain all the essential elements of growth, and for this reason chickens often die off when fed upon it.—St. Louis Republic.

TO PRESS FOR COMPENSATION.

Mr. Lewis Reaches England With the Claims of Atlin Miners.

London, Sept. 9.—Former Congressman James H. Lewis arrived here this week and on Friday presented his credentials at the United States Embassy. Mr. Lewis is here to press the claims for compensation to the American miners who were evicted in the Atlin district of the North west Territories by the Canadian Government. The matter of the American miners' claims against Canada has already been taken up, but no action will be taken until the arrival of Sir Louis Henry Davies, the Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who is coming here to present the other side of the case. By that time the United States Ambassador, Mr. Jos. H. Choate, will have had the briefs of Mr. Lewis under consideration. The lawyer urges that the claims be included in the general arbitration by the High Commission. Minister Davies will object [illegible] that such methods will obstruct the boundary solution.

Mr. Lewis said: "I understand unofficially that the High Commission will meet in November, and I expect that the miners' claims will have reached such a status by that time as will determine what authority is to decide their merit."

THE BOERS CLIMB DOWN.

Official Statement from the Secretary of State for South African Republic.

Pretoria, Sept. 9.—The News to-day prints an official statement from the Secretary of State of the South African Republic, Mr. F. W. Reitz, in which he says: "The Government considers that three courses are disclosed by the communication of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the British Secretary of State of the Colonies. The first is a joint commission of enquiry; the second is a commission of delegates from both Governments to discuss technicalities, and the third is a conference at Cape Town."

In this statement Secretary Reitz also says that the Transvaal Government now agrees to the second proposition, and invites Great Britain to define the constitution of the proposed commission and the place of meeting.

AN ARMY OF SICK MEN.

Condition of General MacArthur's Division Lamentable—Thirty-six Per Cent. of the Officers Ill.

Manila, Sept. 5—via Hong Kong, Sept 9.—The censor has refused to allow the following despatch, the accuracy of which is unquestioned, to be telegraphed: "The surgeons' reports in regard to the condition of General MacArthur's division show that 36 per cent. of the officers and 25½ per cent of the enlisted men are sick. This includes the sick in quarters and those sent home. Eleven per cent. of the enlisted men sick in quarters are mostly suffering from dysentery and malarial fevers."

ATTACK ON SANTA RITA.

Manila, Sept. 9.—A force of 450 rebels, with one cannon, attacked Santa Rita this morning and simultaneously Guaga and San Antonio were each attacked by bodies of rebels numbering about 60 men.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the taraterос (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tarateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing at all.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heerd you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

BRITAIN IS ALL READY

The Army Prepared After a Revised System and With New Bullet.

A RELENTLESS STRUGGLE.

A Boer Agent in London Declares the Whole of South Africa Will Rise.

General Ouinton Places Six Months as the Outside Limit for the Capture of Johannesburg and Pretoria—It is Conceded by Some That Boers May Win at the Start.

London, Sept. 9.—This week in Great Britain Dreyfus and other topics sank into obscurity, patriotic enthusiasm has been at fever heat, and the slightest sign of preparation for war has been seized upon by the press and public as an indication of the status of the crisis.

A New Bullet.

According to reliable statements, the army is ready. The papers teem with descriptions of the troops who are expected to do the fighting, with accounts of their equipment and method of transport, and even the relative killing properties of the bullets which, it is expected, will soon be lodged under Boer skins. The particular pet is now a bullet known as "Mark 4," It is claimed that its lead core is harder and less fusible than any tried heretofore. Large quantities are being shipped to Capetown.

Army in Splendid Shape.

Though mobilization has never been a strong feature of the British army, it is now believed that a system as near perfection as possible has been prepared. The Commander in Chief, Field Marshal Lord Wolseley, Sir Evelyn Wood, General Sir Redvers Buller, and other Generals, have been working strenuously on it for months. Many new features have been introduced, several of them being based on the lessons learned by the United States troops in the war with Spain. Among the latter is the extreme usefulness of mules in such a country as the Transvaal. The British officers who have been in the United States, Spain and South America, selecting bunches of these animals, have now been ordered to close their purchases and ship the mules as quickly as possible to the scene of probable hostilities.

A Relentless War.

All these things, to say nothing of the splendid morale and reputation of the regiments selected for the Cape, indicate that if war comes, it will be waged relentlessly and strongly, and that there will be no abatement until South Africa is flooded with British troops in such numbers that organized resistance by the Boers will be impossible.

Before the main British body of troops arrives it is thought possible, the Boers may score some decided successes, and that even after being overcome by the force of superior numbers, they may continue the war in guerilla fashion for many months, but conservative opinion places six months as the outside limit for the capture of Johannesburg and Pretoria.

The Plan of Campaign.

If another Majuba Hill marks the annals of the possible war it will not be due to lack of caution on the part of the British. The Swazis are expected to give Great Britain considerable aid, and, with the exception of the Pondos, the whole body of blacks between Cape Agulhas and Zambesi, it is claimed, will rise against the Transvaal. The Boer plan of mobilization is said to be purely defensive, embracing 45,000 men, who would occupy strategical points in their own country. But this is not likely to prevent a raid into poorly defended Natal.

Obstacles to be Overcome.

The greatest dangers the British contemplate facing, apart from the Boers' steady hand and Mauser rifles, are climate, lack of forage and the scarcity of ammunition owing to the difficulties of transport. Precautions have already been taken to avoid the two last, but there is no doubt that if the campaign occurs, many British lives will be sacrificed to enteric fever.

The Torch of Revolution.

Mr. Montague White, Consul General of the South African Republic in London, said: "If the burghers will not yield to hysteria, there is no cause [illegible]. We decline responsibility for what others have muddled. Suzerainty is not the question. The franchise is the rock of difference which Mr. Chamberlain recognizes. The war—if war must come—is not going to end with a flash in the pan. The struggle will be from Pretoria to Cape Town. Even supposing the existing Boer regiments are annihilated, no force can beat down the Africander and Dutch strength of South Africa. He who declares war on the Transvaal lights the torch of revolution. The Transvaal will not precipitate matters. The burghers will go out to defend their homes and country when the note of alarm is sounded. That is no menace. Lord Salisbury has yet to be reckoned with. He will not be driven by personal feeling or quibble. We believe the British sense of fair play will yet prevail.

ON THE TROLLEY.

The red is melting in the river,
The red is dying in the sky,
The evening star begins to quiver,
Belated birds go darting by—
Come, let us follow, follow, follow,
And find how fine it is to fly.

By pine woods where when noon was sunny,
The air with spicy balsams flowed,
By gardens full of sweets and honey
Where summer long the rose has glowed,
By weary wife and loitering lovers,
Come, flash along the river road.

The forest wall across the river
Darkens within the curling tide,
The fragrant winds about us shiver,
We rock, we race, we rush, we ride,
Thrilled with the sweep of airy motion
And glad because the world is wide!

The night soars up the purple spaces,
The whirling winds divide the deep,
Strange gleams [illegible] familiar places,
Swift lightnings underneath us leap,
As forward flying, flying, flying,
Upon the thunderbolt we sweep!

THE TURF REVIEW.

It is reported that $5,500 was refused a few days ago for Jasper Ayres, 2:09.

Phenol, 2:07¼, pacing, by Jersey Wilkes, has been bred to Joe Patchen.

Bingen was shown in nine classes at two horse shows and took nine blue ribbons.

The only mare bred to John R. Gentry last year is said to be Belle Warren, and she has a fine filly foal.

The Director-Winifred colt, for which George Starr paid $4,500, has been registered as The Director General.

Mr. Winters will build a mile track at the Penn Valley Stud farm. The half mile track now there is too sharp at the curves.

James Gatcomb is training Zombia, 2:13¼, now owned by Mr. A. S. Bigelow of Boston, a gentleman who is accumulating a good stable.

It has been pointed out that the stallion trotting records of the great Wilkes and Electioneer families are identical, 2:06¾, for Ralph Wilkes and Bingen.

Bonnie Boy, by Patchen Wilkes, and the sire of nine in the list, has a record of 2:26, made at Cuba, N. Y., in 1897, which has never reached the Year Book authorities.

Fletcher Driver, formerly trainer for Major H. C. McDowell, who has been identified with runners for a couple of years, is to return to the trotters and pacers.

Mr. Nathan Straus, the other day, on the Speedway at New York, turned the tables on David B, with Cobwebs, although the former was driven by professional Jerome Whelpley.

Attention is called to the fact that Nancy Hanks is not the only ex-queen of the turf that was bred to a thoroughbred horse, Flora Temple having been bred to imp. Leamington.—Turf, Field and Farm.

PERT PERSONALS.

Tom Reed is big and forceful, but he can't talk bass.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Perhaps General Shafter and Dr. Mary Walker may hit it off next.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

If Captain Coghlan were asked, he would probably say that he is saddest after he sings.—Chicago Times-Herald.

One thing is certain—Edward Atkinson will never be able to run for office on his war record.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

At some time in his life Dewey has talked too much. That is the reason he is avoiding that mistake now.—Atchison Globe.

Hetty Green has not yet approved Andrew Carnegie's declaration on the disgrace of dying rich.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Funston has not yet decided whether to be governor, United States senator or just champion swimmer of the world.—Pittsburg News.

Russell Sage is willing the paragraphers shall have a joke at his expense as long as that is all anybody ever gets at his expense.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Since the Rev. Dr. Parker of London has been quoted the Rev. Sam Jones is wondering at his own moderation in language.—Peoria (Ills.) Herald.

Richard Harding Davis, after recovering from the fatigue incident to his defeat of the Spanish at Santiago, has renewed his career of conquest by capturing a bride.—Omaha Bee.

Mr. Hobart's dyspepsia must be the result of imprudent eating. As he has been in the vice presidency several years, it could not have come from worry and nervous excitement.—Kansas City Journal.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Cultivate the young orchard thoroughly early in the season.

In selecting trees, take those with smooth, healthy looking bark.

Ground bone is good for small fruit plants, grapevines and bearing apple orchards.

The deeper the culture the larger the reserve of moisture for the roots in time of drought. To secure quick growth prepare the soil deeply.

Bone dust for raspberries and blackberries may be simply scattered broadcast over the ground, as the necessary cultivation will work it sufficiently in with the soil.

While peach seedlings are usually healthier and last longer than budded trees, one is never sure what kind of fruit a seedling will produce when it comes into bearing.—Exchange.

THE PUNSTER.

It's easier to pass a resolution than it is to keep it.

When the baby is asleep, it's a case of kid napping.

"Never wear shoes too small for you" is a good foot rule.

A telegraph operator demands cash for what he does on tick.

It's surprising how easy it is to get something you don't want.

Law books are bound in sheep out of respect for those who go to law.

Some people are so miserly one can't even have a joke at their expense.

A married man says the jaws of death are not to be compared with the "jaws" of life.

The poet probably sings of the silvery moon, because it comes in halves and quarters.—Chicago News.

FOR YOU, YOUNG LADY.

How many thoughts a day for mother's comfort do you give?

Never mind about the dimples if there's sunshine in your smile.

Neatness of dress first and style may come as an afterthought.

At least one little act of kindness a day and an easy pillow at night.

One frown a day when she's in her teens will wrinkle a girl's forehead like a crone's by the time she is 20.

Try making yourself as agreeable to your brother as if he were some other girl's brother. It will pay to win his boyish confidence.—Boston Herald.

POLITICAL QUIPS.

Politicians resemble shoes in one respect—the higher grade are not machine made.—Chicago News.

The strongest indication, so far visible, that General Funston will enter politics on his return is the fact that he was born in Ohio.—Topeka State Journal.

A politician is safest when he writes out his declaration of principle speech for the press. Then he can say what he pleases when he gets up to talk.—New Orleans Picayune.

Perfect Tools Necessary for Perfect Work.

A Perfect Medicine is Required for the Building Up of Nerve, Tissue and Flesh and for Cleansing the Blood.

Paine's Celery Compound the true Disease Banisher and Best Health Giver.

As well made and perfect tools are necessary for the construction of the perfect working machine, so is a perfect medicine necessary for the establishment of a healty appetite, complete digestion, regular action of the bowels and other excretory organs.

The fact is firmly established that Paine's Celery Compound is the only true and reliable medicine for the perfect rebuilding of worn out tissues, unbraced and weak nerves, wasting flesh and waning strength.

If the poison seeds of disease have made your blood foul and sluggish, Paine's Celery Compound will purify and cleanse it, causing the life stream to course healthfully and joyfully to every part of the body. If the small ills of life, such as headaches, sleeplessness and stomach irregularities make unhappy days for you, Paine's Celery Compound will speedily drive away the tormentors.

No other medicine ever given to intelligent humanity has bestowed such showers of blessings on individuals and families. One single trial will convince you of its wonderous powers and virtues. It makes people well, and best of all it keeps them well.

Revolting Orgies Among Cannibals.

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 10.—One of the passengers by the Warrimoo, which arrived from Australia this morning, was Rev. Dr. G. Patton, who is bound for Washington as a delegate from the Colony of Victoria, to the Pan-Presbyterian Convention. While in America Mr. Patton will endeavor to enlist aid for the cause of still further extending the work of civilizing the natives of the New Hebrides, or South Sea Islands. "There are thirty islands in the group," said Mr. Patton, "with a population of probably 40,000 natives. Originally these people were all cannibals, and to this day there are thousands of them who still practice that awful crime. Bloody conflicts between the natives of different islands are still of frequent occurrence, and they are always followed by the most revolting orgies, at which the prisoners taken in battle are killed and eaten. Twenty-two of the islands are now practically under Christian influence, missions having 8,000 converts and over 3,000 church members. The Scriptures have been translated into twenty-two different languages, each island in the group having a distinct language of its own. We have three hundred native preachers and teachers and are extending our work all the time.

The Ponton Case.

Ponton, through his solicitor, applied to the Divisional Court to have his action against the Dominion Bank for $50,000 damages for false arrest, revived, but the case was dismissed. Mr. E. Gus Porter, solicitor for Ponton, told the Times when in Peterborough a short time ago, that in the event of such a result a fresh suit would at once be begun for the same amount, basing it on Ponton's second arrest. So that after all the action of the Divisional Court will make little difference.

Retiring and Sleeping.

"When a person says he is going to retire," said the statesman's small son, "he means he is going to sleep."

"No," was the answer. "Your father is going to retire from congress, my boy, and if he doesn't desire to lose his grip he will have to keep wider awake than ever."

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

It Dulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the [illegible] the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus there may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or vol-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or fried bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 3,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phœnicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

THE CYNIC.

All of us are very clever in finding excuses for not working more.

The most sensible woman will "put on" a little before a preacher.

A man is not really prominent until he has officiated at three prominent funerals.

Some women who never work for anything else will work like slaves for a church.

An old maid dearly loves to watch a quarrel between a husband and wife to see how it comes out.

If a man truly loves his wife, he is very apt to become confidential and tell her a lot of stories on the other fellows.

In talking it is well to know that people will not remember what you are saying unless they can use it against you.

A man always rises in his own estimation when he gets on familiar terms with a person of whom he once stood in awe.

There probably never was a woman too good to try to pass her children off as under age when traveling on the railroad.—Atchison Globe.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Peacocks are reliable weather prophets. Before a storm the gaudy birds become restless and clamorous.

The green woodpecker is said to laugh his "Ya-ha-ha" in different, more liquid tones when rain is coming, and especially gifted persons claim his cry really changes to "rain, rain, rain!"

In Dorsetshire, England, they foretell storms by the flight of the rooks. When they are pitch falling or playing at tumbling, diving and wheeling in the air, they say a storm is due.

Sea fowl are very clever in foretelling a storm. To a sailor bad weather means wind, and to a landsman it means rain, but the screaming of the water birds usually foretells a change of some sort for the worse in the prevailing weather.

A GOLDEN DISCOVERY.

The famous Klondike region is not all gold. Hundreds of prospectors drop and die of hunger and fatigue without ever finding the precious metal. Often the most precious things of life are found only after infinite exertion and discouraging search. Many a man and woman looking vainly for health almost drops by the wayside before the golden means of relief is at last discovered.

"About twelve years ago," says O. S. Copenhaver, Esq., of Mount Union, Huntington Co., Pa., "I was suddenly taken with a pain in the pit of my stomach which was so violent I could not walk straight. It would grow more severe until it caused waterbrash and vomiting of a slimy yellow matter. I consulted a physician and he told me I had a form of dyspepsia, and treated me for about six months with but little benefit. I still kept getting so weak I could scarcely walk.

"I then tried another physician and he told me my liver was out of order and that I had indigestion. He gave me a treatment and I got some better but only for a short time. I then tried another one who said I had chronic indigestion, ulceration of the lining of the stomach, torpid liver and kidney affection. He treated me for more than a year and I felt much better but it did not last.

"I then took to using several widely advertised patent medicines, but received no more than temporary relief while using. I then tried Dr. Pierce's medicines, using his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and the 'Pleasant Pellets,' and in two months' time I was feeling better than I had for years before. I can truthfully say Dr. Pierce's medicines did me more good than any I had ever taken."

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Cocoanut oil thickens and darkens the eyebrows.

A raw egg swallowed will detach a fishbone in the throat.

A good cure for corns is to rub them night and morning with a piece of ordinary sandpaper. If this method is persevered in, great relief is at once obtained, and the corns will gradually disappear.

"A good stout toothbrush, plenty of water and some antiseptic dentifrice applied morning and night," says one who has given much thought in the interests of antiseptic purity, "will afford a greater safeguard against many diseases than most people are aware."

THE NEW SPAIN.

About the worst that can be said of Spain now is that it is the Washington Baseball club of nations.—Chicago News.

Nothing seems to be said about what Spain is going to do at the Paris exposition. It might at least make a display of mananas.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

Now that we are friends with Spain once more, she may give us the contract of building her new navy. She has reason to know that we build a fairly good article of warship.—St Louis Republic.

THE POULTRY YARD.

Pea fowls are small bodied birds, and it will not pay to raise them for their flesh.

Do not hatch bantams too early. Small size is desirable. Hatching in August will give the best results.

Lack of shade in hot weather and too much exposure in the sun are often prolific causes of disease.

Clean earth is a first class disinfectant and purifier. As long as it is dry it can rarely be used to excess.

Until your experience and accommodations warrant confine yourself to one or two well known varieties.

Feed systematically two or three times a day. Scatter the food so that the fowls cannot eat too fast or without proper exercise.

Get as many early chicks as you can. It means early laying pullets during the fall and eggs in winter, when good prices can be realized.

Retiring and Sleeping.

"When a person says he is going to retire," said the statesman's small son, "he means he is going to sleep."

"No," was the answer. "Your father is going to retire from congress, my boy, and if he doesn't desire to lose his grip he will have to keep wider awake than ever."—Washington Star.

When a person is down in the world, an ounce of help is better than a pound of preaching.—Bulwer.

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

It Dulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same fashion, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or vol-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or friend bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 3,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phoenicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

TED AND FRED.

For president and vice president, Ted and Fred, the twin terrors of the east and west.—Boston Globe.

For president, Theodore Roosevelt of New York; for vice president, Fred Funston of Kansas. Platform—Hooray!—Minneapolis Times.

Appearances.

Briggs—Appearances, you know, are often deceptive.

Griggs—Yes. A person can never tell just how much it is going to cost to keep them up.

THE HORSE REVIEW.

Robert B, 2:14¼ trotting and 2:12 pacing, stands 17¼ hands high.

Harry Pennington, 2:15¼, is on the road at Philadelphia, being driven by Tom Tunney.

Notwithstanding his severe lameness last season, Hans McGregor, 2:11¼, is reported in first rate form.

The Toledo Driving club will employ a regular starting judge this year, J. T. Dewey having been chosen.

Cora Tell, a 3-year-old filly by Axtell, out of Cora Belle, pole record 2:19¼, has been bred to Margrave, 2:15¼, and will be trained this season.

Irish Lassie, 2:16, the pride of the Hawaiian Islands, is being prepared at Honolulu for the June races. She is being trained by Jack Gibson.

It is said that Henry Fleischman will bring Derby Princess, 2:08¾, back from Austria. She has not done well since leaving Henry Sanders' stable.

Valney French has signed another year's contract with C. H. Anthony, Muncie, Ind., and will remove to that city. He will handle about 16 matinee horses for the local club.

W. B. Fisk, Coldwater, Mich., who owns Great Heart, 2:12¼, has sold Latitude, 2:19, to Mr. Johnson, Hubbard, O. Latitude is a great knee actor and may appear later in a bangtail costume.

George Dougherty, who trained Marion Mills, the late guideless pacing queen, has been engaged by E. R. Bulkley, Philadelphia, to educate the chestnut mare Lizzie Meyers and the bay mare Ravenwood to do the guideless act.

Helen K, 2:13¼, and mate, May K, who won the blue ribbon in the class for pairs to wagon at Boston horse show, are owned by W. M. V. Hoffman, New York. Helen was purchased by her present owner from the Forest City farm, Cleveland, and is a daughter of Patron.—Horseman.

FUNSTON AND HIS MEN.

General Funston has been in the swim.—Boston Herald.

Hail to General Funston, the unosculated Hobson of the orient!—Detroit Free Press.

Ten to one, when Aguinaldo gets his last ditch ready, that man Funston will be on hand to swim it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

General Fred Funston, the Kansas cyclone in the tropics, is not a Chicago man. He didn't stop to boil the water.—Omaha Bee.

Judging by the elegant fight he puts up, Fred Funston must have been a member of some Kansas church choir.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Twentieth Kansas is showing itself ambitious, ambidextrous and amphibious. It is right in the swim all the time.—Topeka Capital.

General Funston can have anything he wants in Kansas when he gets home, even Jerry Simpson's socks, if he can find them.—St. Paul Globe.

We will soon be hearing from the chaps who attended swimming school with General Fred Funston and tied knots in his clothes.—Washington Post.

General Luna is the first to see the sea serpent this season. Some observers say it was the Kansas regiment using a rope for a ferry.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

No wonder the Twentieth Kansas volunteers have invariably swept the Filipinos before them. Their battlecry is the Kansas university football yell of "Rock chalk! Jayhawk! K. S. U.!"—St. Louis Republic.

THE CYNIC.

All of us are very clever in finding excuses for not working more.

The most sensible woman will "put on" a little before a preacher.

A man is not really prominent until he has officiated at three prominent funerals.

Some women who never work for anything else will work like slaves for a church.

An old maid dearly loves to watch a quarrel between a husband and wife to see how it comes out.

If a man truly loves his wife, he is very apt to become confidential and tell her a lot of stories on the other fellows.

In talking it is well to know that people will not remember what you are saying unless they can use it against you.

A man always rises in his own estimation when he gets on familiar terms with a person of whom he once stood in awe.

There probably never was a woman too good to try to pass her children off as under age when traveling on the railroad.—Atchison Globe.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Peacocks are reliable weather prophets. Before a storm the gaudy birds become restless and clamorous.

The green woodpecker is said to laugh his "Ye-ha-ha" in different, more liquid tones when rain is coming, and especially gifted persons claim his cry really changes to "rain, rain, rain!"

In Dorsetshire, England, they foretell storms by the flight of the rooks. When they are pitch falling or playing at tumbling, diving and wheeling in the air, they say a storm is due.

Sea fowl are very clever in foretelling a storm. To a sailor bad weather means wind, and to a landsman it means rain, but the screaming of the water birds usually foretells a change of some sort for the worse in the prevailing weather.

SISTERLY CITIES.

Minneapolis has lost a dam, but then the town was never worth one.—St. Paul Dispatch.

What is being done for art in Chicago is not much. What is being done for art by Chicago is infinitely less.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

If the New York gas war keeps on at its present rate of progress, consumers will soon get the stuff for nothing, with a chromo and a pound of tea thrown in.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

New Yorkers are talking of having a self propelling fire engine. Come up this way, neighbors, and see what the metropolis of Connecticut can show you in that line. You're years behind us.—Hartford Courant.

FOUL TIPS.

For Sale—One baseball team. Answers to the name of "Giants." Any offer will be accepted.—New York Herald.

The ex-prides of Von der Ahe haven't as yet had their batting eyes forwarded from St. Louis.—Cleveland Leader.

As in previous years, the Washington team, as a matter of strict courtesy, will be known as a [illegible] club.—Chicago Record.

A GOLDEN DISCOVERY.

The famous Klondike region is not all gold. Hundreds of prospectors drop and die of hunger and fatigue without ever finding the precious metal. Often the most precious things of life are found only after infinite exertion and discouraging search. Many a man and woman looking vainly for health almost drops by the wayside before the golden means of relief is at last discovered.

"About twelve years ago," says O. S. Copenhaver, Esq., of Mount Union, Huntingdon Co., Pa., "I was suddenly taken with a pain in the pit of my stomach which was so violent I could not walk straight. It would grow more severe until it caused waterbrash and vomiting of a slimy yellow matter. I consulted a physician and he told me I had a form of dyspepsia, and treated me for about six months with but little benefit. I still kept getting so weak I could scarcely walk.

"I then tried another physician and he told me my liver was out of order and that I had indigestion. He gave me a treatment and I got some better but only for a short time. I then tried another one who said I had chronic indigestion, ulceration of the lining of the stomach, torpid liver and kidney affection. He treated me for more than a year and I felt much better but it did not last.

"I then took to using several widely advertised patent medicines, but received no more than temporary relief while using. I then tried Dr. Pierce's medicines, using his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and the 'Pleasant Pellets,' and in two months' time I was feeling better than I had for years before. I can truthfully say Dr. Pierce's medicines did me more good than any I had ever taken."

If you are one of those discouraged ones in the long and weary search for health, write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. He will send you friendly advice that will not cost you one cent.

For constipation, nothing is equal to Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

Scotch Fingering Yarn.

We are selling this year a heavy ribbed Worsted Stocking in the largest sizes for twenty-five cents. They are made on our own electric power knitting machines, from a fine quality of pure fingering yarn. The color is an excellent glossy black. This quality is usually sold from 40c. to 50c. per pair, yet our price is only 13c. in smaller sizes, running gradually up to 25c in the largest sizes. If you were able to get this yarn for 3c. per skein the yarn alone would cost all we ask, yet this yarn is sold for 8c per skein. Come and look at them and wonder how we do it. The Port Hope Knitting Works, 382 George street, Peterborough.

Both Arms Broken.

Master Harry, son of Mr. N. P. Clark, C. E., of Omemee, aged fourteen, met with an unfortunate accident yesterday. In descending from an apple tree he fell head first from a ladder and, alighting on his hands, broke both arms at the wrist. A similar accident almost identical happened to Mr. Harry Pope, Montreal, son of the late Robert Pope, street inspector, last fall.

Council Did Not Meet.

The adjourned regular meeting of the Civic Fathers called for last night, did not take place, owing to there not being sufficient members present to form a quorum. If possible to get our Aldermen together, Council will convene to-night.

Diamond Dyes
Can't Be Washed Out With Soapsuds

When any article of garment is dyed with the Diamond Dyes no amount of washing with soapsuds can in the slightest degree weaken the color.

No other dyes in the world are as strong, brilliant and unfading as the Diamond Dyes. Plain directions on each package tell how each dye is used, and the whole work is so simple that even a child can use them with profit and success. As there are vile imitations of Diamond Dyes see that your dealer gives you exactly what you ask for.

OUR SCHOOLS.

New Regulations Which Will Make Many Changes in School Work

Amended regulations have been issued by the Educational Department announcing some important changes in the course of study in the high schools and the higher forms of the public schools of Ontario. Agriculture is to be obligatory in Forms IV. and V. of the rural schools, and bookkeeping must be taught in the high schools. Gymnastics and manual training become optional subjects in the high schools. Needlework, domestic economy and manual training may be taken up in urban schools with the approval of the trustees. Pupils in high schools, who are aiming at some special department may, on the recommendation of the principal, be less confined to obligatory subjects.

At the high school entrance examination the paper in arithmetic will include such questions as will specially test the accuracy of the candidates in the simple rules, as well as their knowledge of the subject, and the paper in dictation will be for the study of the authorized spelling book.

The public school leaving examination will hereafter be identical with the examination prescribed for Part I. of junior leaving standing. Public school leaving certificates will be issued by the public school inspector to all pupils of public schools in his inspectorate who pass the examination of Part I. of junior leaving standing. The present holders of public school leaving certificates of having passed the examination of Part I. of junior leaving standing. The present holders of public school leaving certificates of having passed the examination of Part I. of junior leaving standing by passing the examination in arithmetic and mensuration, grammar and history, the prescribed per centage on the total of these subjects being also exacted.

There will no longer be held examinations for the high school Form I., but holders of Form I. certificates will be entitled to certificates of having passed the examination of Part I. of junior leaving standing by passing in the subjects of arithmetic and mensuration, grammar and history, the prescribed per centage on the total of these subjects being also required.

The abolition of the primary examination will not affect the rights of holders of primary standing obtained in 1898, or a previous year to attend county model schools. It should be understood that county boards of examiners are not allowed to award third-class certificates to candidates who do not make the higher per centage required by regulation 63. A district certificate shall not be granted under this section of the regulations unless there is a scarcity of teachers, and until the consent of the department has been first obtained. Renewals granted under regulation 67, are valid only in the county where issued. Beginning with the examinations of the model schools of 1900, an additional paper in methods will be submitted to test the ability of the students in training to teach drawing, writing, bookkeeping and elementary science (botany or agriculture). There will also be an examination reading.

A Woman on Her Way to Peterborough Meets With a Terrible Accident.

Stouffville, Ont., Sept. 11.—A well-dressed lady passenger, whose name is given as Mrs. Argent, and who was on her way to Peterborough, fell from the incoming express from Toronto, due here at 9.20 a.m., about two miles from Stouffville. It appears that the lady was taken with a fainting spell, and that on going out on the platform to get fresh air she accidentally fell off. It is believed that she is badly hurt internally. She was brought to into this place by the sectionmen, and medical aid summoned.

[Note—The Times is unable to learn anything of the unfortunate lady.]

Off on a Big Hunt.

Messrs. Tom Fitzgerald, Dixon Jewett and G. Gatterson leave this morning on the 7.10 express on a big hunting trip to Buffalo Lake, near Moosejaw, N. W. T. This is the happy hunting ground at which Mr. Fitzgerald bagged such a wonderful number of fowl last fall and the three this year expect to do something that will never be forgotten. They are taking out about a thousand rounds of cartridges each, enough to carry on a good sized campaign. Mr. Fitzgerald has secured the recipe used by the Hudson Bay Co. for curing game, having had to send to Boston for it, and by using it they expect to bring home fowl by the barrel.

Imprinted on His Side.

Mr. Wm. Forster, who was killed by lightning last week, had the impress of the leaves of a tree through which the lightning passed plainly impressed on his side. The impression was marvellously clear and distinct. This is a matter that excited much curiosity amongst scientific people as to to how the figures of leaves could be placed there without actual contact with the plant. The nearest tree was fully twenty feet away. It is said that the leaves being wet, the lightning ran off the the lower edge of the leaf and lit on the victim, leaving its impress in that form on the body just as it left the leaf. This is the theory of one of our leading local scientific men.

Big Money in Frogs.

The Hull correspondent of the Press states that the agents of a Cleveland firm are exporting Canadian frogs in large quantities. They operate in the northern counties, and the average daily catch of the three men engaged in the business is said to be about 800. The frogs are carefully packed up alive in boxes and sent to the United States, where they sell for $250 per thousand, which is at the rate of 25 cents per pair of frogs legs served on the table of the leading hotels and restaurants. The Otonabee River has long been a splendid frog fishery.

Not many years ago bananas were scarcely ever seen in Peterborough. Now there is a large daily consumption of them. Lindsay Post: The first voters' list for Sturgeon Point has just been published and it is unique in that it appears to be only three resident ratepayers. It also contains the assessed value of each lot so that you can tell how your neighbor is assessed. We think this is an excellent idea, and should be made compulsory in all municipalities.

Few of our people who have not made excursions into the country are aware to what extent the crops have suffered from drought. Most families have felt in their butter bills the effect of the parching up of the pasture, but all crops have been affected. Tomatoes are neither as plentiful nor as good in quality as they would have been had we had a few early showers; the potato crop is likely to be short, and corn has suffered. The dairyman who has resorted to soiling is to be congratulated this year.

FOOD ECONOMY
Bulk
vs.
Concentration
Grape-Nuts
Discussed Below.

The question of obtaining a high grade food at a moderate price is of interest to every housekeeper and provider.

Some food is so bulky that even at a very low price per pound the actual food value is so little that it is really expensive; on the other hand, there are concentrated foods, like, for instance, the famous breakfast food known as "Grape-Nuts," that sell at 15 cents per pound, but yield in food units so much value that but little of the food should be used at a time, and in reality, when properly used, the expense is about one cent per meal.

It is a common mistake to use too much of the food Grape-Nuts. Its taste is crisp, with the delicate sweet flavor of grape sugar, and one is inclined to eat double the proper quantity. A lady writes from Indianapolis, Mrs. A. L. Wilson, "We have been using your Grape Nuts now for two or three weeks, I cannot tell you how much I find it has benefitted me. My husband is a physician and he not only uses it at each meal, but likes it at bedtime."

Using the food in this way, some families might be impressed with the cost, but after all, good food, which keeps the family in prime condition of health, at a moderate cost, is very much more profitable, so far as dollars and cents are concerned, than to make use of low grade, bulky foods, and from time to time call in a physician to help out.

The use of "Grape-Nuts" in reasonable quantity costs one cent per meal, and the food stands without an equal in point of nutrition and value in building up the nerve centres and tissues of the body. The crisp, delicate, sweet taste comes from the grape sugar which is produced by the transformation of the starch of the cereals, and this grape sugar is presented all in the system ready for immediate assimilation. Grape-Nuts are sold by all first class grocers and made by the Postum Co. at their factories in Battle Creek, Michigan.

TO BE SIDE-TRACKED.

A Project on Foot to Divert the Line of the C. P. R.

A project is on foot to construct a line of railway from Cobourg to Tweed, via Campbellford. The Campbellford Herald says: The C. P. R. authorities are now engaged double-tracking the eastern section of their road, which will be extended as far as Tweed. At this or some other convenient point a branch from the main line will be built extending in a southerly direction to a point within two miles of Sterling. From there it will run westerly to Campbellford, where it may follow the route surveyed for the C. N. & P., touching at Warkworth and continuing through to Cobourg where it may be extended through to Toronto.

If this project is carried out, the line will be used as a great thoroughfare for C. P. R. passenger traffic, while the road as it now exists would be used almost wholly for freight.

With the early construction of a road from Lindsay to Bobcaygeon, on the west, which appears to be assured, and a line from Norwood to Apsley, it looks as if Peterborough was likely to be entirely side-tracked. The time has arrived for Peterborough to wake up and look after her interests if she proposes to preserve the back country trade.

DIED WITHOUT WARNING

IN GOOD HEALTH LAST NIGHT

Seized With a Sudden Attack About Midnight and Died in Five Hours.

All Members of His Family Present When the End Came—Death Caused by a Stroke of Paralysis—Sketch of His Life and work—An Immense Fortune.

New York Sept. 12—Cornelius Vanderbilt, sr., died this morning at 5.15 o'clock at his home at 57th street and fifth avenue, this city. There were with him at the time of his death his wife, his daughter Gladys, and Reginald, his youngest son.

Mr. Vanderbilt arrived at his Fifth avenue home from Newport with Mrs. Vanderbilt at nine o'clock last night. He appeared in excellent health and spirits, and retired soon afterwards. About midnight he was seized with a serious attack and the household was aroused. Telegrams were sent to Dr. Walter B. James, Dr. Janeway and several other physicians, who arrived in a short time. Everything possible was done for the patient but he grew rapidly worse and died at a quarter past five o'clock. Mrs. Vanderbilt and her daughter, Miss Gladys, are prostrated by the shock and physicians are attending them.

Stroke of Paralysis.

Mr. Vanderbilt's death was caused by a stroke of paralysis, and the second that he suffered. The first attack was in July, 1896 The patient was semi-conscious until death. Doctors Janeway and Butler were with him when he died.

Dr. Depew reached the Vanderbilt house at 7.30 o'clock. He remained but ten minutes. When he came out he was greatly affected, and with tears in his eyes said he was deeply grieved to give any information at that time.

William K. Vanderbilt, brother of the dead man, arrived soon after Mr. Depew.

Cornelius Vanderbilt was the eldest son of William H. Vanderbilt, financier. He was born on Staten Island, N. Y., on Nov. 27, 1843; was educated at private schools and trained to business. He was treasurer of the New York and Harlem railroad from 1867 till 1877, then vice-president till 1886, and since that date has been its president. In addition to his connection with the roads previously mentioned, in 1883 he became president of the Canadian Southern Company. He was a director in thirty-four different railroad companies, and was a trustee of many of the charitable, religious and educational institutions of New York City. Among Mr. Vanderbilt's benefactors are the gift of a building in New York City for the use of railroad employes, a contribution of $100,000 for the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral, and a collection of drawings by the old masters and the paintings of the "Horse Fair," by Rosa Bonheur, to the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

When Cornelius Vanderbilt was born his father was a farmer. Cornelius at the age of 18, left school and secured a place as messenger in the Shoe and Leather Bank. His grandfather, the Commodore, learning of this, sent for him and asked why he had not applied to him for a position.

"Because I did not want to ask you for anything," was the reply.

This pleased the Commodore and it is said that he made a codicil to his will a few days later leaving $1,000,000 to his grandson.

Cornelius left the Shoe and Leather Bank to go into the employ of Lissam Bros., bankers, but later his grandfather asked him to enter the railroad service. The first place given to him was that of assistant treasurer of the the New York and Harlem Railroad. His rise was rapid and he succeeded his father as head of the Vanderbilt system. He gave to the management much time and as chairman of the Board was not merely an observer of the other men's work, but a worker, patiently going through masses of business applying knowledge, initative, and executive force.

Trying to Sow Discord.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—The Kolnische Zeitug publishes a long letter from Apia under date Aug. 11, detailing events there chiefly with the object of sowing discord between Great Britain and the United States, and trying to prove that Germany, and not England, is in line with the United States.

Don't Cause a Revolution.

Vienna, Sept. 12.—The Austro-Hungarian and Russian Governments have sent a warning to King Alexander of Servia not to precipitate a revolution by sentencing to death any of the radical leaders in connection with the recent conspiracy to assassinate former King Milan.

ZOLA SWEARS TO DREYEUS' INNOCENCE

The Celebrated French Writer Issues His Second Epistle on the Dreyfus Case. A Masterly Effort.

FIGHT FOR JUSTICE AND TRUTH WILL NOT CEASE.

The French Government Can Set Doubts at Rest by Obtaining the Documents of the Bordereau From the German Government.

Paris, Sept. 12.—M. Emile Zola contributes a long letter to the Aurore this morning. It is a pendant to his famous "Taccuse" letter. It concludes thus:

"The Ministry, which its agents have betrayed, which has had the weakness to leave big children with muddled minds to play with matches and knives, the Ministry which has forgotten that to govern is to foresee, has only to hasten to act if it does not wish to abandon to the good pleasure of Germany the fifth act, the denouement before which every Frenchman should tremble. It is for the Government to play this fifth act as soon as possible in order to prevent its coming to us from abroad. It can procure the documents. Diplomacy has settled greater difficulties than this. Whenever it ventures to ask for the documents enumerated in the bordereau they will be given to it, and that will be the new fact that will necessitate a second revision before the Court of Cassation, which would be this time, I hope, fully informed and would quash the verdict without further trial in the plentitude of its sovereign magistracy, but if the Government were to recoil again the defenders of justice and truth will do what is necessary. Not one of us will desert his post.

At Versailles.

"The proof, the invincible proof, we shall finally end by obtaining. On November 23 we shall be at Versailles. My trial shall commence in all its fullness. If, meanwhile, justice is not done, we will again help to do it. My beloved, my valiant Labori, whose honor has but increased, will pronounce at Versailles the address which it was impossible to pronounce at Rennes, and it will be very simple. Nothing will be lost. As for me, I shall not be silent. He will merely have to utter the truth without fear of injuring me, for I am ready to pay for it with my liberty or my blood.

"Before the Seine Assize Court I swore to Dreyfus' innocence, I swear to it before the entire world, which now proclaims it with me. Truth is on the march, nothing will stop it. At Rennes, it has just made a giant's stride. I have no longer any fear except that I may see it arrive in a thunderclap of an avenging Nemesis, devasting the Fatherland, unless we hasten ourselves to make it shine forth under the clear sun of France."

Recommendation To Mercy.

Paris, Sept. 11.—The court martial signed a formal recommendation for mercy this afternoon. Its object is to eliminate the degradation feature of the punishment. The recommendation will be handed to Gen. Lucas for President Loubet. When M. Labori's secretary informed Dreyfus of this action he was greatly affected, and said: "I still have hopes."

In Paris it is said that President Loubet is anxious for conciliation all round, and that he will gladly free Dreyfus after a little delay.

Tarte's Organ Again.

Montreal, Sept. 11.—The Patrie, Mr. Tarte's organ is very indignant at the general tone of the press criticism of the Dreyfus verdict, which it says, was rendered by men of honor, men of knowledge, and conscientious soldiers.

It attributed the hostile criticism of foreign countries to the spite against France.

Boycott the Exposition.

London, Sept. 11.—In England, in Germany, and in the United States there is a strong movement on foot to boycott the Paris Exposition, as being an effective means of expressing disapproval of the shameful miscarriage of justice. The London Daily News urges individuals to boycott French pleasure resorts, especially the Paris Exposition. W. D. Stevens, a ship-owner and Royal Commissioner to the Paris Exposition, has declared that as result of the Dreyfus verdict he will not put his foot on French soil. He adds that thousands of his countrymen will do the same. Several important firms here have already declined to exhibit at Paris.

Motion in the House.

Washington, Sept. 11.—In Washington Congressman Levy announced today that as soon as Congress met he would introduce resolutions in the House withdrawing the support of this Government from the Paris Exposition on account of the Dreyfus case.

Nova Scotia Protests.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 11.—The Chronicle will to-day publish a letter from Hon J. W. Longley, Attorney-General of Nova Scotia, vigorously denouncing the Dreyfus verdict, and proposing that the nations of the world unite in a general boycott of the Paris Exposition. Mr. Longley says that the moral effect of such an object lesson for all mankind could not be overestimated.

POISON FROM A STRANGER.

A Young Woman in Woodstock Thinks Some One is Trying to Murder Her.

Woodstock, Sept. 12.—A young woman living in Oxford street, named Lattim, was taken violently ill about 6.30 last night, and a doctor was summoned. There were symptoms of poisoning. The doctor worked over her for several hours and finally got her out of danger.

When she recovered she related a remarkable story. Yesterday morning she said, while she was alone in the house, she received two notes, which were brought by boys, asking her to go to Victoria Park in the afternoon to meet some one. The notes were not signed.

Some time after noon a stranger, a tall, dark man came to the door. He said he was a medicine pedlar. He pushed his way into the house, and as soon as he got inside he told the girl that she was looking ill and that he had something to cure her. She got a spoon and he poured out some red liquid, which she drank. The moment she had done so the stranger laughed in her face, and seized the two notes which were lying on the cupboard, he hurried away.

The girl says she felt strangely, but went up town. She became so weak that she could hardly walk, and when she got home she was worse. She had severe pains in her stomach and had just time to run out and call for the neighbors when she became unconscious.

Buried Beneath a Wall.

Aylmer, Ont., Sept. 12.—A fatal accident occurred yesterday morning at the home of Wilson Pounds, near Fairview. Robert Moore, of Corinth, was taking out the brick frame of a well, when suddenly it caved in on him, killing him instantly. It was about half an hour after the accident took place before the unfortunate man could be reached, when he was found to be extinct. Deceased leaves a wife but no family.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS.

Construction of Georgian Bay and Ottawa River Canal Easier than Supposed.

Ottawa, Sept. 12.—Mr. H. A. F. McLeod, who is in charge of the party now surveying the proposed Georgian Bay canal, has sent in a report to the promoters, in which he states that the supply of water at the summit level is more than will ever be needed for canal purposes. It will, therefore, be easy to connect Trout Lake with Lake Nipissing, and the cost is now estimated at $750,000, instead of the $3,000,000 which was estimated some years ago by Mr. Walter Shanly. Mr. McLeod has discovered a series of lakes, three in number, between Trout and Nipissing Lakes, which he thinks is the proper channel to follow in making the connection. The composition of the land is clay and hard pan instead of rock, as was formerly supposed.

DREW HIS CASH AND VANISHED

Young Englishman Disappears From Toronto, Leaving Some Money Still in the Bank.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—The whereabouts of Thomas Chatburn, recently of the village of Maple, in York county, is a mystery to his friends, the more so as he has an account in the Traders' bank.

Five years ago Chatburn came to Canada from the Old Country. He worked for a time at Belleville and afterwards got employment at Cowain's carriage factory at the village of Maple. Last year Chatburn learned from his father that he had inherited $904. This money did not reach him, however, until about three months ago, when it was deposited in the Traders Bank in Toronto.

Shortly afterwards Chatburn came here and drew out $100, and on Saturday, August 6th, he took out $500 more. From that time he has not been seen or heard from, and his friends are at a loss to account for his disappearance.

If any trace of the absentee can be found County Constable Burns would be glad to hear of it.

THE METRIC SYSTEM.

Advantages to Canada of this System of Weights and Measures.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Secretary Wills of the Board of Trade, this morning received the appended self-explanatory note from Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere, Minister of Inland Revenue:

"Dear Sir: I have received a supply of weights and measures and charts of the metric system, and have much pleasure in sending you one set by express Herein you will find enclosed a short summary of the advantages attending the adoption of the metric system, and showing the necessity of our preparing beforehand for its inevitable adoption.

"The metric system is at present used by all civilized nations, with the exception of Great Britain, the United States and Russia. Indications point to its early adoption in the United States and Great Britain, partly because of its superiority and partly out of necessity for the preservation of their foreign trade which is handicapped in competition with foreign manufacturers, who derive considerable advantage by the use of weights and measures with which their customers are familiar and under which they run no special risk of mistake.

Gradual Preparation.

"We must gradually prepare for the adoption of the metric system in Canada," says the circular. "If we compare the two we shall soon find out how much the metric system of weights and measures is preferable to our present confused and irrational system, just as we found some years ago how much easier it was to calculate in dollars and cents than in pounds, shillings and pence. The whole metric system is based on a single unit, the metre, a measure of length one ten-millionth part of the distance between the equator and the pole. True, a slight error has been discovered in that measurement, which prevents it from being theoretically perfect.

"However much this may be regretted it does not interfere with the special advantages of the system over all others which consists in its being built and entirely based upon that one single unit of length, the metre, so that not only length, breadth and depth, but weight and capacity for both liquids and solids are all deducted from the metre and fractions thereof, with the additional improvements that all calculations are on the decimal principle both for fractions and multiples."

MARCHED OUT.

The 57th Battalion Paraded the Streets Last Night.

The 57th Battalion, accompanied by both bands, paraded the principal streets last night. The muster was not as large as might have been expected. The battalion will parade weekly until further orders. The following orders were read at the conclusion of the drill:—

Headquarters, Peterborough,
12th September, 1899.

Orders by Lieut.-Col. R. W. Bell, commanding the 57th Battalion of Infantry, P. R.:

No. 1—Detail of duty for week ending September 23rd. Subaltern for the week, Lieut. Walker, next for duty, Lieut. [illegible] Seymour, next for duty, Bugler Brundrette.

No. 2—The commanding officer has been pleased to make the following promotions:—"A" To Sergeant (prov.) Corp. Cameron, to be Corporal (prov.) "A" Co.—To be Corporal (prov.) Pte. Dewey, vice Cameron promoted.

No. 3—The Battalion will parade on Tuesday evening, 19th [illegible] with band, at 8 p.m.

By order,
R. A. Morrow,
Capt. and Adjt.

RECEIVES THE REPLY

Chamberlain's Note is Transmitted to the Transvaal This Morning.

THE INDIAN FORCE IS READY

Between 30,000 and 40,000 Men Will Be Engaged Against the Boers.

List of British Regiments Which Are Ordered to the Cape—Four Trains Containing Refugees Leave Johannesburg—Burghers Must Stay at Home.

Cape Town, Sept. 12.—It is understood that the reply of British Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, to the last Transvaal note has been received by the British High Commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner, and forwarded to Pretoria. It will probably be delivered to the Government of the Transvaal to-day.

Received the Despatch.

Pretoria, Sept. 12.—11.30 a. m.—The British Cabinet's despatch of Friday has just been handed to the Transvaal Government.

More Ammunition.

Lourenzo, Marquez., Delagoa Bay, Sept. 12.—A consignment of 547 cases of ammunition, presumably bound for the Transvaal, has been landed here.

The Indian Force.

Simla, British India, Sept. 12—The first Transport for South Africa sails with the field hospitals from Bombay Sept 16, and the entire force from India will be embarked by Sept. 25. General Hunter, the Chief of Staff, leaves Simla to-morrow for South Africa.

Regiments Ordered to the Cape.

New York, Sept. 11—The Herald publishes the following capable despatch:—

The total strength of the expeditionary force to be sent from England to South Africa in case of hostilities is said to be between 30 000 and 40,000 men, a large portion of whom would be employed in protecting the lines of communication and guarding against isolated attacks along the frontier.

It is officially announced to-day that the following home regiments have been selected for service in South Africa:—

1st Dragoons.
2nd Dragoons.
6th Dragoons.
6th Dragoon Guards.
10th Hussars.
12th Lancers.
Four battalions from the Grenadier Guards, Coldstream Guards and Scots Guards.
2nd Battalion Queen's Regiment.
2nd Battalion East Surrey Regiment.
2nd Battalion Devonshire Regiment.
2nd Battalion West Yorkshire Regiment.
2nd Battalion Royal Highlanders, the Black Watch.
1st Battalion Highland Light Infantry.
2nd Battalion Seaforth Highlanders.
1st Battalion Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders.
1st Battalion Inniskilling Fusiliers.
1st Battalion Connaught Rangers.
1st Battalion Royal Dublin Fusiliers.
1st Battalion Royal Irish Regiment.
2nd Battalion Royal Fusiliers, City of London Regiment.
2nd Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers.
1st Battalion Royal Welch Fusiliers.
2nd Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers.
2nd Battalion Scottish Rifles, the Cameronians.
3rd Battalion King's Royal Rifle Corps.
1st Battalion Durham Light Infantry.

To Protect Mining.

Pretoria, Sept. 12.—The tension remains high pending the receipt of Mr. Chamberlain's despatch. It is asserted on excellent authority that the Transvaal Government, with a view of keeping the mining industry going, has decided to protect it in every possible way. As a first step the Government has notified the Rand companies that their men will receive protection so long as they remain peaceful, and should war unfortunately occur the men will be given a reasonable time to leave the country if they desire. It is officially announced that the article in the gold law about the confiscation of claims and mines belonging to people convicted of treason or conspiracy against the State, which was last year eliminated, will be reinforced. The article also gives the Government power to order that the mines be worked and provides that if this instruction is disregarded the Government may work them through its own agents.

Refugees Leave Johannesburg.

Cape Town, Sept. 11.—Four trains containing refugees from Johannesburg have arrived here. Four hundred refugees have also arrived at Durban. During the past week the Relief Committee of Johannesburg assisted 2,310 cases of distress reported throughout the Transvaal.

Must Stay at Home.

Pretoria, Sept. 11.—President Kruger has forbidden the burghers to absent themselves beyond the Limpopo river without permission from the district authorities, which are strictly [illegible] to refuse in view of an [illegible] outbreak. The exodus from the Rand continues without abatement.

Rainfall in the Deccan.

Simla, British India, Sept. 12.—There has been a good rainfall over the Madras and Bombay Deccan. The situation elsewhere is unchanged.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 7, 1899

A NEW YEAR.

The advent of another September revives our quarrel with the old chroniclers who made the year begin in snow and ice. For us, custom has constructed the calendar, and it is the ninth month, rather than the first, which marks the opening of the new year. Vacation is over. Summer travelers are returning. The vast machinery of business life turns with accelerated motion. The churches enter upon a new campaign of evangelization. The schools gather in their vast population and lessons begin.

A thrill of fresh energy runs through our pulses, inspiring in us renewed hope, confidence, determination, and increased endeavor. Our "good-morning" to September is only freshly fallen from our lips, but in the hastening procession of the streets there will be encountered many returned travelers with faces bronzed by health-imparting contact with seaside sun, country air or mountain breezes. Head erect, eyes bright and foot firm, they step out buoyantly upon the unknown pathway of the new year. The stream of patrons toward the shops are daily swelling into their customary autumnal proportions, and employer and employed meet in the morning with aspect of "great things are to be done this day." Every profession and every employment which has yielded to the relaxation of summer now as promptly responds to the command for a resumption of fall activities.

There was no ringing of bells, nor booming of cannon in the still watches of the night, but we know that while we slept, another year was ushered in—a new and, hope whispers, a happy new year.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Good morning.

•• •• ••

Every year there is a protest against the date of Thanksgiving day being so late, but the objection is not raised until the government fixes the date and then it is too late to secure a change for that year. It is to be hoped that this time the government will drop the practice of imitating the United States and fix the date sometime in the latter part of October. It will distribute the holiday at a convenient time between Labor day and Christmas, and the weather at that season is usually sufficiently mild to enable the people to give thanks comfortably.

•• •• ••

By all means! Mr. W. W. B. McInnes should carry out his threat to resign. He would make place for a better man who could see beyond mere local issues and would not condemn a Government because Imperial interests demanded the veto of Japanese exclusion and Opposition obstruction compelled the postponement of the very anti-Chinese legislation for failing to pass which Mr. McInnes denounces the Laurier ministry.

•• •• ••

One object in giving the oyster a summer rest is to make him fatter for the sacrifice! His case is a hard one.

•• •• ••

There are many things the Transvaal will look over if forced to, and one is the sights of a rifle.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belted at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with pointed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phoebe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves?

At the Filipino theaters of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Venie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackay, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

THE BOOKMAKERS.

Margaret Deland says she reads economics, history and the newspapers for instruction and novels only for entertainment.

R. W. Chambers, when not writing books, gives his time to many fads. He collects butterflies, designs uniforms and keeps up his painting.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hampstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He compared the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate since you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Modern Celt.

"What I like about the Irish is that they are so modest and unassuming."

"Holy smoke!"

"Fact! When an Irishman does anything great, he does not go bragging of his ability, as another man would. He merely brags about Ireland."—Indianapolis

BRITISH STORM SUNTAI

Captain Williams, With Over 3,000 Men, Destroys a Niger Village.

BREACH MADE IN WALLS

A Defiant Chief Badly Defeated and Escapes With Only About Twenty Followers.

The Expedition Halted Outside the Town and Opened Fire With a Seven-Pounder at 450 Yards—A Storming Party of 80 Men Rushed Into the Place.

London, Sept. 12.—Details have been received of the operations of a British punitive expedition against the pagan town of Suntai in Upper Nigeria, which was entrusted by the Niger Company to Capt. Williams, of the South Wales Borderers, in order to avenge the death of Captain Parker, killed while operating against these same Pagans.

An expedition consisting of 150 troops of the Royal Niger Constabulary, assisted by some 3,000 Zibu and Dongalese friendlies, including 500 Falani horsemen, left Ibi, the military headquarters on the Binue, for Suntai. The expedition carried a Maxim and a seven pounder and the whole force was under command of Capt. Williams, assisted by two other officers, and accompanied by S. E. O. Hewby and Dr. Wells. It has now returned, after a successful but difficult campaign. The expedition marched in easy stages from Ibi to Suntai, a distance of fifty-five miles, and found the town surrounded by a 17 foot wall, behind which was a ditch 6 feet deep. The wooden gates of the town had been blockaded by the trunks and boughs of huge forest trees.

A Defiant Chief.

The Chief of Suntai had long defied the Royal Niger Company and his Fulani liege lord, the Emir of Bakundi, and had recently defeated a force sent against him by the company, in which poor Parker lost his life. He was known to have gathered round him some 400 Yukos and Bornuese adventurers like himself, and a bad lot generally.

The expedition halted outside the town, and opened fire on the place with the seven pounder at 450 yards. When a breach had been effected in the walls a storming party of eighty men rushed the place. Very heavy hand to hand fighting followed. The natives fought stubbornly, contesting every inch of ground, and had to be driven from street to street at the point of the bayonet. Their losses were comparatively large, and ours were by no means light (five killed and twenty-five wounded.) Not more than twenty of the defenders escaped, including the chief, who was shot in the cheek and had his horse killed under him, but nevertheless managed to get away. Suntai was destroyed.

WILLING TO PAY FOR IT.

What Uncle Bill Wanted the Newspaper Publisher to Do.

A number of newspaper men were exchanging reminiscences a few days ago in a Court street inn. One of them, by the way, was an ex-publisher—that is to say, he once owned and edited a paper in the upper section of the state. One of his subscribers was William Makepeace Thackeray Willington, whose neighbors called him "Uncle Bill" to save time and labor.

"One day Uncle Bill walked into my office," said the former publisher. "He placed his whip in a corner and removed his hat. He asked if I was the editor. I pleaded guilty. 'Shake,' said he. 'I am glad to know ye. When I was a young feller, I used to do some writin myself.'

"Uncle Bill lapsed into silence and did some solid thinking for several minutes. Then he resumed the conversation. He said he liked the appearance of The Banner of Freedom mighty well and hoped it was not only bringing me fame, but money also. Naturally my bosom swelled with pride. The old man said he had only a few minutes to spare, and, before leaving, he wished to ask a favor. I supposed that he was about to spring a little poem which he had dashed off all by himself, but that wasn't the case. Uncle Bill said:

"'My son, I want to ask you a special favor. My eyes are not as strong as they were, and I would like to have you print my copy of the paper in a type two or three sizes larger than you use in the regular edition. Now, mind, I don't want you to do this for nothin. I'm willin to pay for it. Here's the money, and if that isn't enough let me know when my subscription is due again and I'll pay what's owin.'

"The old man dove his right hand into his pocket, fished out a silver half dollar and planked it on my table, saying: 'There's the money. If that isn't enough to cover the extree expense, let me know when I call in next spring, and I'll make it good. I'm willin to pay for any little favors.' Before I could explain the impossibility of his scheme he jumped into his buggy and started off for Deep Hollow."

Cabinet Crisis in Australia.

Sydney, N. S. W., Sept. 11.—Right Hon. George Houston Reid, the Premier, Treasurer, and Minister of Railways, and the other members of the Cabinet, resigned to-day in consequence of the action of the Assembly, which Sept. 7th, by a vote of 75 to 41, passed a resolution declaring a lack of confidence in the Ministry. The resignation of the Ministers was accepted, and Lyne, the leader of the Opposition, was summoned to form a new cabinet.

Fear of Famine Gone.

Bombay, Sept. 11.—Rain has improved the crop outlook in Western India, and the fear of a famine has been removed. The weather conditions foreshadow more rain. The cotton crop has already been benefited.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. E. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from cooked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the banana should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

A Sporty Youngster.

He was the youthful son of a well known horseman. He had been to an evening party, and at 9 o'clock a servant announced that Master ——'s nurse had called for him.

The young gentleman replied as well as he could while burying his fourth piece of mince pie: "All right. Throw a blanket over her and let her wait."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

SHEPHERD DOGS IN WAR.

Scotch Collies Used in Germany for Finding the Wounded.

Berlin, Sept. 11.—For the last five years a society founded under the auspices of Herr Bungartz, the animal painter, has been training Scotch shepherd dogs to assist the relief parties in discovering the whereabouts of wounded in battle, and last week the general in command of the ambulance manoeuvres in connection with the 8th German army corps near Coblentz, allowed four of these sagacious creatures to take part in the exercises. Their value was abundantly proved, for they tracked down in a few minutes a score of men so concealed that the bearers could never have discovered them in daylight, much less at night. Herr Bungartz gave a lecture at the close of the proceedings on the breeding and education of these dogs of war, and several regiments are keeping small packs of them on their own account.

HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

Peculiar Experience of the Man Who Dealt in High Explosives.

"Nitroglycerin, sir; high explosives accomplished it," said a well dressed man with a youthful face and snow white hair to a chance acquaintance at the Great Northern.

"But your face is not scarred! It would seem that an explosion"—

"An impending explosion it was. Two years ago I was the most successful well shooter in America. I could make the oil loosen up where others had failed. The secret lay in the explosives I employed. I made them myself and had the business down fine. At that time I went to New York to figure on a big blasting contract that would have made me a pile. I failed to make the arrangement, and the very day the negotiations fell through I started suddenly for England on a similar mission.

"'Is there such a thing as high explosives ripening?' asked the Englishman I was accompanying on the second day of our voyage.

"The question brought me to my feet and caused an exclamation of horror to escape from my lips. Many explosives undergo a ripening process, which adds greatly to their destructive power, at the same time decidedly increasing the danger of handling them. That made by me was this character. Indeed 25 days after it is compounded it was almost certain to explode of its own volition, so to speak. On the upper shelf of the checkroom of my New York hotel I had left a large grip containing a 20 pound can of this compound, the ripening of which meant destruction and death.

"For an hour I was almost in a state of frenzy, freely denouncing myself as a multimurderer. In vain I drew an awful picture of the devastation that would overwhelm a certain New York hotel in exactly 17 days and called upon the captain to put his ship about. He promised to transfer me to a west bound steamer if an opportunity presented itself, but fortune failed me, and I was obliged to cross the ocean. On the morning of the twenty-fifth day of the life of my ripening high explosive I sprang from a carriage and rushed into the hotel.

"No reprieved murderer ever experienced greater joy than I did as I saw the last of the terrible fluid disappear in a catch basin. Ten minutes later I started back from the mirror of the hotel bar, where I had gone for a 'bracer,' in absolute dismay. My jet black hair had turned white as snow."

VETERANS UNDER FIRE.

The Reason They Don't Stoop When the Bullets Are Flying.

"The temptation to stoop when under fire is almost irresistible," said a veteran, "and that accounts for so many of the wounds received by raw troops. You see, when a man happens to be hit in a stooping posture the chances are that the bullet plows right through his body from end to end. On the other hand, if he is standing erect, the probabilities are in favor of the wound being slight, anyhow not mortal. Old soldiers are well aware of this, and while they will drop flat and hunt cover every chance they get they never stoop.

"After a soldier has been in a few engagements he learns such tricks, and, as far as the rest of it is concerned, he becomes simply a fatalist. There is nothing strange about it, for almost all his experiences appear to lend color to that doctrine. For instance, he never dodges, because he has seen men dodge and get killed when it really seemed as if they had reached for the bullet. In fact, the strangest things are continually happening, all apparently the pure whim of chance.

"I remember near Petersburg a comrade of mine, as brave a fellow as ever lived, took refuge behind a little hut. He was worn out under fire and wanted to get a moment's breathing space. Twenty feet in the rear and a little to one side was a pile of crossties full of wrought iron nails. A bullet came along, splintered a tie and drove out one of the nails at right angles. The jagged iron struck my chum in the side, penetrated his kidneys and killed him.

"That's the blind chance of war, and after getting a few such object lessons a fellow is apt to acquire a sort of sang froid that is immensely impressive to a recruit. It isn't because he has a contempt for danger; he has merely learned the folly of trying to evade it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age, always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

Report That Bridges for the Transvaal Have Been Ordered.

WHAT KRUGER MEANS

It is Said That Oom Paul Has Accepted the Joint Commission and Recognized Suzerinty.

The Coming of British Troops Not Regarded as Meaning Certain War—Reported That Boers Are Massing on the Frontier and There is No Abatement in Preparations.

London, Sept. 11.—The activity in the War and Admiralty offices continues to-day, though there is nothing new regarding the Transvaal situation. It is said that orders have been sent to America for light iron girders and bridging sections for probable use in South Africa. Transports are moving to the docks preparatory to embarking troops.

The Boer Explanation.

Pretoria, Sept. 11.—Excitement prevails here pending the decision of the Cabinet. Secretary of State Reitz has left this city for Johannesburg and Cape Town. The likelihood of war is much discussed. The coming of British troops is not regarded as meaning certain war, but merely as making up for the paucity of troops in South Africa, so much commented upon during the past month.

Proposal Accepted.

Pretoria, Sept 10.—In the course of an interview yesterday State Attorney Smuts said that he understands that the Transvaal's last despatch as an acceptance of the proposal for a joint commission of inquiry. With the withdrawal of the offer for a five years' franchise the condition thereto attached, namely the relinquishment of suzerainty, also falls to the ground. He declared he fully believed the British Government desired a peaceful solution of the difficulty, and expressed the opinion that the Transvaal's last despatch would further that end.

President Kruger is reported to be prepared to recognize Great Britain's suzerainty in the Transvaal.

Exodus Takes Place.

A despatch from Bloemfontein reports the distribution of arms and a considerable exodus to Cape Colony. According to this correspondent, the Boers are massing on the frontiers, and there is no abatement of the war preparations in the Transvaal.

Forming a Laager.

A despatch to the Daily Mail from Charlestown says that 200 men with six guns are forming a laager at Amesfort, thirty miles north of the Natal border, which is being patrolled by armed Boers. The Zululand Boers are flocking to the Transvaal expecting that there will be war with Great Britain.

Cannot Crush the Khalifa.

Cairo, Sept. 11.—It is reported from Omdurman that Sheikh Abdul Samad, who has been pursuing the Khalifa with friendly Arabs, has reached Int Seraid near the Khalifa's camp. Finding that the Khalifa's force consisted of 500 horsemen, 3,000 footmen, and 1,100 rifles—three times his own force—the Sheikh abandoned all idea of attack. The Kordofan tribes are evidently unable to unite and crush the Khalifa. Preparations at Omdurman point to a near expedition to Kordofan and Darfur.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. The Telltale Eye.

"No matter how self possessed a man may appear on the surface," said a close observer, "there are certain involuntary movements by which he will always betray himself to minute scrutiny. To illustrate the point, here's a neat little parlor trick in mind reading:

Seat yourself directly in front of your subject and tell him to hook his finger tips together before his chest and pull as hard as he can, at the same time thinking intently of some letter of the alphabet. Then look fixedly at his right eye and repeat the letters aloud, beginning with A. When you come to the one he is thinking about, a swift, indescribable change will flash across the pupil. It is purely unconscious and involuntary, and no human being alive can prevent it. The purpose of the finger tip pulling is merely to distract his thoughts and keep him from baffling you by concentration of will. Try it some time."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THIS ARMOUR IS TOUGH.

New Plates in England Cannot be Pierced by Shot.

London, Sept. 10.—Interesting experiment with a new armor plate for war ships have just been concluded at Shoeburyness, at the mouth of the Thames. The outer plate, six inches thick, is made of the best steel, the backing consisting of a special composition, the nature of which is being kept a secret. New plates were fired at with a 350-pound projectile at a distance of 200 yards. When black powder was used the armor plate was, after several shots found to be practically uninjured. The shot was in some instances reduced to powder by the force of the impact. With cordite it was found that the outer plate could be penetrated three inches, and under certain circumstances the shot went right through, but the severests tests failed to crack the plate. In naval warfare, a hole made by a shot below the water line can always be plugged up, but cracked and split armor plates necessitate dry-docking and new plates. When two shots were fired simultaneously, hitting the plate two feet apart, there was still no sign of fracture.

A FAITHFUL DOG.

Its Owner Realized Its Worth, as Well He Might.

"Well, I wouldn't have believed it," exclaimed Jones in astonishment as he dropped in to see Smith the other evening and was met in the hall by a St. Bernard dog.

"Wouldn't have believed what?" asked Smith.

"Why, that you'd have a dog in your house," continued Jones. "It belongs to one of your neighbors, I suppose?"

"No, sir; that's my dog," replied Smith proudly.

"You don't really mean it, old man? Why, I've known you now for five years, and you've always had a marked aversion for dogs."

"Yes, I did have until lately, but I wouldn't be without one now. This brute is a noble, faithful fellow, and I wouldn't take $100 spot cash for"—

But at this juncture he was interrupted by his wife calling down over the banister:

"Henry Smith, who was it that scattered these cigar ashes all over my dresser?"

"It must have been the dog, my dear," was his reply.

"And who was it that dropped these apple peelings on the floor?" she demanded.

"The dog, my dear," answered Smith.

"And there's a bottle of mucilage spilled on the hall carpet up here too. Is that some of your work, Henry?"

"No, my dear; the dog's to blame for that."

"And, goodness gracious," she continued angrily, "if some one hasn't been whittling up here again! How many times have I told you not to do that in the house?"

"But I had nothing to do with it, my dear. The dog's been up there probably chewing a stick."

"Well, it's a burning shame the way this house is mussed up. Your collars and ties are scattered all over the rooms."

"Are they, my dear? That dog's been up there again then. Yes," continued Smith as he drew his friend into the parlor, "I wouldn't take a big pot of money for that dog. Why, the noble fellow saves me about 20 jawings a week."

"So I see," chuckled Jones, "and you bet I'll have one before noon tomorrow." —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Deceived by a Thread.

As we came in on a Big Four train from Delaware we noticed a well barbered and highly scented "young man of the period" complacently admiring a fine pair of patent leather shoes which were elevated on the seat in front of him. Finally he espied a thread on one of his shoes, and, seizing it, he gently drew it to him. It seemed to be quite long, so he wound it about his kid gloved hand. After getting quite a knot of it he found it was fast to his side, and, glancing along his leg, he discovered that he had unraveled one seam of his trousers leg, which hung in a loose flap. The last we saw of him he had borrowed two pins from the conductor and was retreating sidewise toward the smoking car with horror and disgust plainly depicted on his countenance.—Ohio State Journal.

The Busby is Doomed.

London, Sept. 10.—The imposing headgear of the Guards, the classic bearskin, is doomed. It appears that great difficulty has been experienced of late in keeping up the necessary supply of busbies, in consequence of bearskins becoming so scarce, and a committee will shortly meet to consider the important question of a new helmet.

They Refuse Obedience.

London Sept. 9.—The Church of England fight continues to attract attention. Most of the bishops, including the Bishop of Lincoln, Right Rev. Edward King, who were tried several years ago for ritualistic practices, have issued letters to their various dioceses, ordering obedience of the archbishop's decision. Many of the clergy, however, frankly announce that they will not do so.

Often in the morning there comes a feeling of weariness, indescribable; not exactly ill, nor fit to work, but too near well to remain idle.

A Ripans Tabule taken at night, before retiring, or just after dinner, has been known to drive away that weariness for months.

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. Send five cents to Ripans Chemical Co., 10 Spruce Street, New York, for 10 samples and 1,000 testimonials. R·I·P·A·N·S, 10 for 5 cents, or 12 packets for 48 cents, may be had of all druggists who are willing to sell a standard medicine at a moderate profit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the packet. Accept no substitute.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

After a good soaking shower is the best time for hand weeding.

A good plan is to keep the growing orchard in cultivation until it comes into bearing well and then seed to clover.

Increased sunlight among the trees brings increased growth and blossom and decreases the tendency to mold and rot.

Peach, cherry and pear trees will bear very little forcing, and on this account wood ashes are better for them than ground bone.

Fruits, especially the apple, are largely controlled in character by soil and climate. Get varieties that are adapted to your locality.

Scraping the moss and old dead bark off the mature trees in the orchard and washing the trunks with some alkaline liquid can always be recommended.—Exchange.

OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT.

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on their alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was "out after elephants" and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums.

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fed the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

The Fitness of Things.

"Yes, that's the bride."

"Very young, isn't she?"

"Nineteen, I believe."

"Who are those middled aged women with her?"

"Those are her unmarried sisters. She's chaperoning them."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Notes and Notes.

"Does your wife play by note?"

"Um—er—yes. The piano dealer holds mine for $500."—Colorado Springs Gazette.

The turkey was first discovered in America and was brought to England in the early part of the sixteenth century. Since then it has been acclimated in nearly all parts of the world.

THE TURF REVIEW.

It is reported that $5,500 was refused a few days ago for Jasper Ayres 2:09.

Phenol, 2:07¼, pacing, by Jersey Wilkes, has been bred to Joe Patchen.

Bingen was shown in nine classes at two horse shows and took nine blue ribbons.

The only mare bred to John R. Gentry last year is said to be Belle Warren, and she has a fine filly foal.

The Director-Winifred colt, for which George Starr paid $4,500, has been registered as The Director General.

Mr. Winters will build a mile track at the Penn Valley Stud farm. The half mile track now there is too sharp at the curves.

James Gatcomb is training Zombia, 2:13¼, now owned by Mr. A. H. Bigelow of Boston, a gentleman who is accumulating a good stable.

It has been pointed out that the stallion trotting records of the great Wilkes and Electioneer families are identical, 2:06¾, for Ralph Wilkes and Bingen.

Bonnie Boy, by Patchen Wilkes, and the sire of nine in the list, has a record of 2:25, made at Cuba, N. Y., in 1897, which has never reached the Year Book authorities.

Fletcher Driver, formerly trainer for Major H. C. McDowell, who has been identified with runners for a couple of years, is to return to the trotters and pacers.

Mr. Nathan Straus, the other day, on the Speedway at New York, turned the tables on David B, with Cobwebs, although the former was driven by professional Jerome Whelpley.

Attention is called to the fact that Nancy Hanks is not the only ex-queen of the turf that was bred to a thoroughbred horse, Flora Temple having been bred to imp. Leamington.—Turf, Field and Farm.

Hetty Green has not yet approved Andrew Carnegie's declaration on the disgrace of dying rich.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Funston has not yet decided whether to be governor, United States senator or just champion swimmer of the world.—Pittsburg News.

Russell Sage is willing the paragraphers shall have a joke at his expense as long as that is all anybody ever gets at his expense.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Since the Rev. Dr. Parker of London has been quoted the Rev. Sam Jones is wondering at his own moderation in language.—Peoria (Ills.) Herald.

Richard Harding Davis, after recovering from the fatigue incident to his defeat of the Spanish at Santiago, has renewed his career of conquest by capturing a bride.—Omaha Bee.

Mr. Hobart's dyspepsia must be the result of imprudent eating. As he has been in the vice presidency several years, it could not have come from worry and nervous excitement.—Kansas City Journal.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Cultivate the young orchard thoroughly early in the season.

In selecting trees, take those with smooth, healthy looking bark.

Ground bone is good for small fruit plants, grapevines and bearing apple orchards.

The deeper the culture the larger the reserve of moisture for the roots in time of drought. To secure quick growth prepare the soil deeply.

Bone dust for raspberries and blackberries may be simply scattered broadcast over the ground, as the necessary cultivation will work it sufficiently in with the soil.

While peach seedlings are usually healthier and last longer than budded trees, one is never sure what kind of fruit a seedling will produce when it comes into bearing.—Exchange.

THE PUNSTER.

It's easier to pass a resolution than it is to keep it.

When the baby is asleep, it's a case of kid napping.

"Never wear shoes too small for you" is a good foot rule.

A telegraph operator demands cash for what he does on tick.

It's surprising how easy it is to get something you don't want.

Law books are bound in sheep out of respect for those who go to law.

Some people are so miserly one can't even have a joke at their expense.

A married man says the jaws of death are not to be compared with the "jaws" of life.

The poet probably sings of the silvery moon because it comes in halves and quarters.—Chicago News.

FOR YOU, YOUNG LADY.

How many thoughts a day for mother's comfort do you give?

Never mind about the dimples if there's sunshine in your smile.

Neatness of dress first and style may come as an afterthought.

At least one little act of kindness a day and an easy pillow at night.

One frown a day when she's in her teens will wrinkle a girl's forehead like a crone's by the time she is 20.

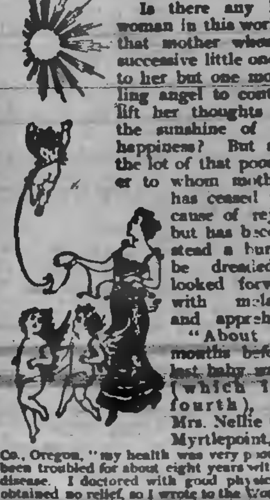
Try making yourself as agreeable to your brother as if he were some other girl's brother. It will pay to win his boyish confidence.—Boston Herald.

POLITICAL QUIPS.

Politicians resemble shoes in one respect—the higher grade are not machine made.—Chicago News.

The strongest indication, so far visible, that General Funston will enter politics [illegible] is the fact that he was born in Ohio.—Topeka State Journal.

A politician is smart when he writes out his declaration of principle speech for the press. Then he can say what he pleases when he gets up to talk.—New Orleans Picayune.



ANGEL CHILDREN.

Is there any happier woman in this world than that mother whose each successive little one seems to her but one more darling angel to continually lift her thoughts toward the sunshine of perfect happiness? But sorry is the lot of that poor mother to whom motherhood has ceased to be a cause of rejoicing, but has become instead a burden to be dreaded and looked forward to with melancholy and apprehension.

"About three months before our last baby was born (which is our fourth)," writes Mrs. Nellie Carl, of Myrtlepoint, Coos Co., Oregon, "my health was very poor. I had been troubled for about eight years with female disease. I doctored with good physicians but obtained no relief, so I wrote to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, and was advised to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I did so, and am happy to say my health began to improve and I did my work up to the last, and felt splendid.

"I got along finely during confinement, and have the healthiest baby I ever saw. When he was three months old he weighed eighteen pounds: he is now seven months old and weighs twenty-four pounds. I can say I have had no return of my old troubles. I thank you very much for the good you have done me."

Any woman may write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., a statement of her case, which will be considered in absolute confidence by this physician who stands among the foremost specialists of the century in the treatment of women's diseases. He will send her (in a plain, sealed envelope) sound, sensible, valuable advice free of all charge.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page, illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 31 one-cent stamps, to pay the cost of customs and mailing only, or cloth-bound for 50 stamps.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Menaine, Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim adjoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16 [illegible] in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Tom. Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorised me to place a small amount of this stock at 3½ cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 600 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.00 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3½ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

LAST OF THE SEASON.

A large consignment of Plums and Peaches just received to-day, Tuesday, R. R. Phillip & Co., George Street. Last shipment of the season. First come first served.

It Was Mrs. Sargent.

It was learned yesterday that the lady who fell from the G. T. R. train near Stouffville on Monday while on her way to Peterborough was not Mrs. Argent, as was stated in the despatch, but Mrs. Sargent, who is from the old country and was on her way down from Toronto to Peterborough to visit friends. She must have rolled from the platform of the train as she was but little injured. She arrived in town from Stouffville on Monday evening and was suffering only from bruises of the shoulder and hip. She spent the night at the White House and went out to Mr. Robert McKee's Smith, yesterday.

Arouses Public Interest.

One of the most telling features of careful newspaper advertisements is the infinite variety of their composition and typographical appearance. Variety is, indeed, the very spice of life, and the tradesman who makes use of a great newspaper like the Times, in which to exploit his wares, may be sure to find himself reaping rich benefits from the public interest aroused by the diversity of his business announcements. The right kind of advertising speaks in no uncertain manner, and always to the profit of the advertiser. And Times advertising is the right kind.

BURLEIGH POWER SCHEME.

Mr. Culverwell Again in Town and Talking Up the Scheme.

Mr. Alex J. Culverwell, the promoter of the Burleigh Falls Power scheme, is registered at the Oriental. Mr. Culverwell states that his scheme, by which power is to be transmitted from Burleigh Falls to Lindsay, via Lakefield and Peterborough, is sure to go through. He states that it was only lately that the New York people met one of Peterborough's prominent citizens, already interested in local power development, who has consented to act as Vice-President of the company. It is understood that a prominent Liberal Cabinet Minister will also be on the board. Engineers have been up to Burleigh Falls lately and plans for the power house and dams are now completed, proving what he had maintained that this was the cheapest power development on the continent. It also showed that some 4,500 horse power is available at Burleigh Falls for power and lighting purposes.

The company starts operations, he states, with a contracted revenue of $25,000 a year, including those of consolidated concerns already arranged.

Interesting developments, Mr. Culverwell says, will be made public in a few days.

A FINE EXHIBIT.

The Exhibit of the Peter Hamilton Co. at the Industrial.

The Toronto Globe of Saturday says of the exhibition of the Peter Hamilton Mfg. Co., of Peterborough:

"This well-known implement firm has almost as long a history as the thriving town of Peterborough, where this industry is one of its most important factors. As usual, the Hamilton exhibit was a varied and excellent one, made up of binders, mowers, seed drills, straw and ensilage cutters, sulky rakes, cultivators, etc. In the main these farm appliances need no description as their excellence is so well known, but reference may be made to their new "Bonnie" binder, which was admired and praised by thousands. This year it was fully tested, and next year it will be the firm's leading specialty. It cuts six feet six inches and yet will go through a twelve-foot gate. Delivers grain in perfect order, even if rye seven high. A whip holder is a handy device. The [illegible] seed drill is driven from both ends of the axle, securing continuous feed. Is controlled by a lever so easily that a boy can handle it. The Hamilton new No. 7 ensilage and straw cutter, with reversible belt feed, is the perfection of this useful appliance. It works equally in long or short stuff and has a capacity of one ton of corn in eight minutes. The knife is concave, and thus is even cutting all along the blade, an advantage every farmer will appreciate. The firm's motto is "Trifles make perfection, but perfection is no trifle," and they live up to it by sparing no pains to turn out the best implements in Canada."

The Country Fair.

We have reached the happy season
Of the good, old country fair,
When the rural population
Breaks away from toil and care.
There is hitching up of wagons,
Buggies, surreys, traps and carts.
And a packing of baskets,
With bread, meats, cakes and tarts.

Now the farmer lad and lassie,
And the mother and the sire,
Start away on brief vacation,
Every one in best attire.
City cousins often join them.
And quite merrily they go
Where are seen the varied wonders
Of the famous rural show.

There are peaches, pears and pumpkins
That are noted for their size;
There are porkers, whose dimensions
Cause expressions of surprise.
There are horses, sheep and cattle,
Stock of all the fancy breeds;
There are samples from the harvests,
And all kinds of fruits and seeds.

There the sweetest kind of cider
By the press is freely shed;
There to stop the pangs of hunger
Is the best of gingerbread.
There are fakirs by the dozen,
With all sorts of things to sell,
And there prowls the artful stranger
With the game of pea and shell.

There the horses are displaying
Speed in run and trot and pace;
There is often change of money
As the sequel of a race.
But though pockets oft are lightened.
Not a bit the farmers care,
For they're taking in all pleasures
At the good old country fair.

A Strange Incident.

"One of the strangest incidents that I ever witnessed," remarked a traveller, who had been spinning stories in the back parlor of the Snowden House, "occurred when I was down South last year on a trip for the house. It was this way continued the traveller a gentleman arrived at the hotel early one morning where I was stopping, and while making some requests of the landlord, who rented the hotel, received a very short reply. Thereupon he inquired as to who owned the hotel. After receiving the information he hunt out and succeeded in finding the owner, and actually paid $10,000 for the building, and in less than three hours returned to the hotel with the keys and a deed to the property and locked up the hotel, with the remark that 'if the hotel could not be run decent he'd just close it up.'"

A Fine New Hearse.

Mr. A. Comstock, undertaker, has made the purchase of a new funeral car from Mr. Guy, maker, Toronto. The hearse is a very fine one and will be a creditable addition to Mr. Comstock's establishment. It is heavy, massive and solid in appearance. The outside is of inky black while the inside is [illegible] ed with black and white silk curtains. The wheels are fitted with heavy rubber tires. Mr. Comstock's enterprise entitles him to liberal patronage.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Miss Mary H. Fife, B.A., Appointed to Fill the Vacancy on the Collegiate Institute Staff.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Education was held last night in the office of the secretary, Mr. W. G. Morrow. The following report of the Committee on Appointments was received and adopted:—

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education:

Gentlemen,—Your Committee on Appointments beg leave to report that they have carefully considered the applications received for the vacancy on the Collegiate Institute staff and recommend that Miss Mary H. Fife, B. A., who is well qualified to fill the position, be appointed at a salary of $650 a year, her duties to commence immediately.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A CURIOUS OLD PAPER.

A Newspaper Over 126 Years Shown The Times.

The Times was shown a copy of the Maryland Journal and Baltimore Advertiser, dated August 20, 1773. The paper was in the possession of Mr. S. D. Webster, who was on his way to the Western States. Mr. Webster has a sister living in Peterborough, and dropped off en route to pay her a visit. The paper was formerly the property of an uncle, who resided in Baltimore till the time of his death, when it passed into the possession of the present owner.

Yellow with age, and queer and quaint with its long s's and verbose style, one handles the soiled pages with something akin to reverence, because of the memories they evoke of the sacred past.

At the top of the first page the coat of arms of the state of Maryland appears, and on either side of it a quotation from Horace. The editor, W. Goddard, writes a column communication, in which he takes the public into his confidence, assuring them that unless "the entrance money" is in every case forthcoming "the life of the paper will be of short duration," and he also assures them that a "personal application will be very painful."

The headlines for the second column "A Letter from the Bishop of C. to the Earl of Bellamont, on His Last Duel with Lord Townshead," are obscurely placed at the bottom of the first column. The good Bishop tells his lordship in the beginning: "Be not, however, terrified, my lord, though an old man, and that man of some ecclesiastical consequence, too, breaks thus abruptly upon your retirement. He will talk to you as fashionably as if he did not think religiously, and make, the better to answer his purpose, a serious question in morals, an object of polite investigation."

But the Bishop's letter pales into insignificance in the estimation of the patriotic American, as he turns the page and discovers a communication dated "Mount Vernon, in Virginia, July 15, 1773," and signed "George Washington." The future father of his country, in his peaceful occupation of surveyor, having "obtained patents for upwards of 20,000 acres of land on the Ohio and Great Kanawa, proposes to divide the same into fixed tenements, and lease them upon moderate terms, allowing a reasonable number of years rent free, provided that within two years three acres of every fifty shall be cleared, fenced and tilled, and that five acres of every hundred be laid off in meadow and fifty fruit trees for every hundred acres be planted." He goes on to state the natural advantages of the land, and ends with the statement that if ever a new government is established on the Ohio its seat will likely fixed at the mouth of the great Kanawha, Galipolis, on the Ohio River, is situated near the site to which he referred, but the "seat of government" is somewhat distant, for the great Washington, in his calculations, did not make allowances for railroads in the scheme he contemplated.

There is a very wise dissertation addressed to "Mess." Chase and Paca, in which the writer proves in more than a column of space that those who deny tithes are in danger of "growing desperate" and finally drowning themselves. It is signed "[illegible]."

Mr. Rathell, formerly of Annapolis, advertised for pupils among such "young Ladies and Gentlemen of Baltimore Town whom it has not suited to finish their education at school."

One of the best advertisers is Christopher Hughes, who takes lots of trouble to inform his friends exactly as to his whereabouts, and it is to be hoped that he succeeded, for he announces "Christopher Hughes and Co., Goldsmiths and Jewelers, At the sign of the Cup and Crown, the corner of Market and Gay streets, in the house where Mr. Jacob Myers formerly lived, and opposite Mr. Usher's new store, late Mr. Little's Coffee House in Baltimore. Beg leave to inform their friends and the public that they have for sale a neat and elegant assortment of Plate and Jewellery."

A Mr. Polo bemoans the fact that he has lost six horses, and a man named Wallace. One is not surprised to find black men running away, but it is something of a shock to read the advertisement of Bernard Reily, who makes known the fact that an "Irish Servant Man, named Owen McCarty, about forty-five years old," ran away on July 6. The advertisement, after describing the personal appearance of the man, and the clothing which he wore goes on to state that he was a soldier in some part of America about the time of Bradford's defeat, and can give a good description of the country. A reward of £5 for his capture in the county, or £10 out of the county, is offered.

In these days of rapid transit and telegraphic communication, it is interesting to read in the want column: "An active, faithful man, who can write a tolerable hand and keep a fair account, and is otherwise well qualified to ride as a private Post or Carrier, between this Town and Philadelphia, once a week, is requested to apply without delay to the Printer hereof."

Dennis Grant, who lately kept tavern at the sign of the Buck near Philadelphia, begs leave to inform the Public that he has opened an Inn and Tavern at the sign of the Fountain, in that large and commodious house lately built by Mr. Gough, in Market street, Baltimore."

Thomas Bruretons announces that he has for sale a "Pocket of Hops, a 10-inch new cable, and wants to buy a Negro Girl about 12 years old."

The paper was printed by William Goddard, at the printing office in Market street, opposite the Coffee House, and was sold at 10 shillings per annum.

Wolves in Haliburton.

Wolves are numerous in the county of Haliburton and some of them are enormous fellows. Last week Mr Jos. Pritchard, of the township of Stanhope, shot one that measured nine feet from tip to tip. The brute had just killed two of Mr. Pritchard's sheep and mangled several others. Mr. A. P. Moore reports that many farmers in that district have lost sheep recently owing to the wolf's love of fresh mutton.

SUBLIME IMPRUDENCE!

A Yankee Lawyer Calls Upon McKinley to Interfere in South Africa.

TWISTING THE LION'S TAIL.

A Little Abuse of Great Britain Thrown in as a Relish to Tailwister.

W. Bourke Cockran, the Democratic Politician, Writes an Open Letter to President McKinley About the Transvaal—A Danger Now Threatening the Peace of the World.

New York, Sept. 13.—Ex-Congressman W. Bourke Cockran has written the following open letter to President McKinley about the Transvaal:

You will, I am sure, excuse this invasion of your holiday, when I explain that its object is to evoke the exercise of a power which Providence seems to have placed in your hands with special reference to a danger now threatening the peace of the world. It can hardly be questioned that a proffer of friendly mediation by you would suffice to delay, if not to prevent, the threatened invasion of the Transvaal.

If this Government be justified in exerting military force to restore order at the other side of the globe, surely it should exert every moral force to preserve order at half the distance.

A recourse to arms, which might result in kindling a fearfully destructive conflagration throughout Christendom, on such questions as those at issue between Great Britain and the Boer Republic, would be an injury to civilized society, which all the force of civilization should combine to resist.

An Impudent Attitude

The assertion at the point of the bayonet by one power of a right to control or prescribe the conditions governing the electoral franchise in another country admitted to be independent, would be an act of "criminal aggression," the enormity of which has been described in clear, vigorous and scathing terms by the present English Colonial Secretary.

You cannot be indifferent to the fact that when Mr. Chamberlain denounced as indefensible any suggestion of interference by the British Government in the purely domestic affairs of the Transvaal, the relations between this country and England were strained over the Venezuelan boundary, while now that these relations have become cordial, the same statesman feels emboldened to trample upon his professions, if not to violate his principles.

Twisting the Lion's Tail.

An Anglo-American alliance can hardly be a force for the maintenance of justice and the spread of civilization, and its advocates contend, if England's foreign policy be marked by respect for justice while the two countries are estranged, and by wanton acts of aggression while their relations are cordial. It is not extravagant or unreasonable to insist that any country seeking alliance, formal or tactic, with the United States must show some semblance of regard for the moral law, at least during the period of courtship.

If there be other and sounder reasons than those assigned by the press for the attitude of the British Government in South Africa, its position will be strengthened by a disclosure of them.

Friendly but Urgent

tender of your good offices would undoubtedly evoke a full and complete statement of the grounds on which the peace and integrity of the Transvaal are threatened. Such a statement would be a powerful obstacle to the hostilities, for it would enable the civilized world to form a judgment on the merits of controversy, and in all probability that judgment would impose itself on both disputants. Public opinion is a force which in these days no nation can disregard.

Allow me to add these suggestions are offered solely from a regard for the welfare of humanity and the true glory of our Flag, which, I hope, will remain forever inseparable.

Max O'Rell's Appeal.

London, Sept. 13.—While the papers are full of letters from individuals and several firms announcing their withdrawal from the Paris Exhibition, and urging the Government to do likewise, there is no intention upon the part of the British Government of taking any such step. It seems also unlikely that the present agitation will result in any great withdrawal of British exhibits.

M. Max O'Rell, Paul Bouet, has written a letter to The Daily Chronicle saying that a public expression of sympathy will go against Dreyfus, adding: 'For God's sake use your influence to stop it. But for the universal sympathy shown for Dreyfus whom I, personally, believe to be innocent, in England and Germany, he would have been acquitted. It is a terrible thing to say, but I say it and am not afgraid of contradiction."

AN IMMEDIATE REPLY REQUESTED BY BRITAIN

Terms Offered by the Boers are Insufficient, Says Mr. Chamberlain, and Another Conference Suggested.

IRISHMEN OFFER TO FIGHT AGAINST BRITAIN.

Natives of the Emerald Isle Form a Company in the Raad, and Tailtwisters in New York Declare Their Readiness to Assist the Transvaal.

London, Sept 13. — The message of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain says he understands that the concessions made in President Kruger's note of August 18 have been withdrawn on account of the British attitude regarding suzerainty, and adds "Her Majesty's Government have absolutely repudiated the view of the political status of the Transvaal taken by the Transvaal Government, claiming the status of a sovereign state, and, therefore, are unable to consider any proposal made conditionally on their acceptance of this view."

Continuing, the note says the British Government is satisfied that the law embodying the proposed alleviating measures for Outlanders is insufficient to secure immediate and substantial representation, which, it is understood, the Transvaal admits to be reasonable. It then says:

No Impairment Threatened.

"Moreover, the presentation of the proposals in the note of August 19 indicates that the Government of the South African Republic themselves recognize that their previous offers might with advantage be enlarged and the independence of the Republic thereby in no way be impaired."

The despatch then goes on to say that Great Britain is still prepared to accept the franchise proposals of August 19, provided a court of enquiry, whether joint or unilateral, shows the new scheme to be unencumbered by nullifying conditions. In this connection the British Government assumes that the new members of the Raad will be allowed to speak their own language, and adds that the acceptance of these terms would at once remove the tension and would, in all probability, render unnecessary any further intervention of Her Majesty's Government to secure redress for grievances which the Outlanders themselves would be able to bring to the notice of the Executive Council and Volksraad. Her Majesty's Government is increasingly impressed with danger of further delay in relieving the strain which has already caused so much injury to the interests of South Africa, and they earnestly press for an immediate reply.

Another Conference.

"If acceded to they will be ready to make immediate arrangements for a further conference between the President and the High Commissioner to settle all details of the proposed tribunal of arbitration, and the questions referred to in my note of August 30, which are neither Outlander grievances nor questions of the interpretation of the convention, but which might be readily settled by friendly communication between representatives of the two Governments. If, however, as they most anxiously hope will not be the case, the reply of the Transvaal should be negative or inconclusive I am to state that her Majesty's Government must reserve to themselves the right to consider the situation de novo and formulate their own proposals for a final settlement."

The exact franchise proposals which Mr. Chamberlain says Great Britain is still prepared to accept with the court of inquiry proviso, are five years' franchise, a share for Outlanders in the election of the President, and equal rights, and increased representation for the gold fields to the extent of eight new seats. These were presented by President Kruger, Aug. 19 and later were withdrawn.

WAR IS INEVITABLE.

London, Sept. 13.—A special despatch to The Pall Mall Gazette from Cape Town says the British reply is regarded as equivalent to an ultimatum, and the correspondents' advices from Pretoria indicate that war is inevitable. A Pretoria special to the Cape Times says the Transvaal has notified the miners of [illegible] that it will give them a safe conduct and protection in case they wish to remain in the Transvaal. The report that the Rand Irishmen have formed a corps to help President Kruger is confirmed, and it is said at Cape Town that a cablegram has been received there from New York saying ten thousand Irishmen there are ready to help the Transvaal.

The Orange Free State burghers are reported to be bitterly divided over the merits of the controversy, and their probable course in case of war.

The British message to the Transvaal does not demand a reply in 48 hours, the exact wording being a request for "an immediate reply." A copy of the message has been seen by the representative of the Associated Press. It is not an ultimatum in the generally accepted sense of the word. It expresses the hope that President Kruger will accept the propositions to remove the present tension.

The only part which is at all aggressive is the reiterated declination of the British Government to discuss the matter of sovereignty in any shape or form.

CONSULTING WITH HIS NEIGHBOR

Pretoria, Sept. 13.—The Executive has already deliberated upon the British reply, and has been in telegraphic communication all the afternoon with the Orange Free State Government, which President Kruger consulted in regard to his reply, which will be drafted to-morrow morning after the views of the Orange Free State have been ascertained. It will then be submitted to the Volksraad. The situation is regarded as grave, but Secretary of State Beitz, in an interview, has declared that he did not consider it altogether hopeless.

WHAT GREAT BRITAIN DEMANDS

London, Sept. 13.—The reply of the British Secretary of State for the Colonies to the last Transvaal note was read in the Volksraad yesterday. Britain proposes:

First—A five-year franchise.

Second—A quarter representation in the Volksraad for the gold fields.

Third—Equality of the [illegible] and English in the Volksraad.

Fourth—Equality of the old and new burghers regarding Presidential and other elections.

No mention of the question of suzerainty is made, and no definite time limit is set for an acceptance of the conditions, although the reply states that an acceptance is demanded without delay or otherwise Britain will immediately reconsider the whole situation, and act so as to ensure a settlement.

If the foregoing proposals are accepted, a conference will follow for the purpose of drafting the necessary measures.

Great Excitement.

In the Volksraad the reading of the note caused the wildest excitement, and the situation is acute. There is no indication as yet of the views held regarding it in official circles.

The balance of opinion in the London papers seems to regard the reply as a rather moderate document, leaving the way open for further negotiations. The Times says: "It is incredible that all mention of suzerainty and the other matters in controversy has been passed over or ignored."

An Inspired Article.

In referring to Secretary Smut's statement that the question of suzerainty was dropped when the franchise scheme was withdrawn, The Times in an article, probably inspired by Mr. Chamberlain, says that the matter cannot be so easily dropped. The demands of the Boer Government for absolute independence resulted in the sending out to Africa of more than 10,000 troops up to date. Even if war does not occur, Kruger, The Times says, must bear the brunt of the expenses necessitated by his obstinacy. Great Britain will go even further, and demand absolute assurances that no claim for independence shall be put forward in the future, and probably ask a much more definite declaration of British suzerainty than that contained in the 1884 convention.

Objects to Imperialism.

Bremen, Sept. 13—The Weser Zeitung says that Mr. Louis Lange, jr., jr., United States Consul in Bremen, has resigned his post because of his disapproval of what he characterizes as the "Imperialistic policy of the McKinley Administration," which he has attacked in his Chicago newspaper, Dierundachan, a Lutherian weekly.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Baseball.

The Times cordially endorses the proposal of giving Dan McCabe a rousing benefit on Saturday afternoon. Let everybody buy a ticket, whether they can go or not. Dan deserves a good sized pot.

Tennis.

The Peterborough Lawn Tennis Club is playing off its annual Fall Tournament and the following draws have been made:

Ladies' Singles.

Mrs Torrance vs Miss G Dennistoun.
Miss G Meade vs Miss J Bell.
Miss Margaret Rogers vs Miss E Rackham.
Miss A Hall vs Mrs Aylmer.
Miss Sherwood vs Miss M Rogers.
Miss Hatton vs Miss W Carnegie.
Miss L Dennistoun vs Miss M Carnegie.
Miss H Rogers vs Miss J Dennistoun.
Miss I. Rogers a bye.

Men's Singles.

W H Cluxton vs Dr Young.
A Morrow vs Mr Lamprey.
A A Hollingshead vs H Ritchie.
F D Kerr vs F C Napier.
G Bell vs H S Greenwood.
G Bell vs H Morrow.
Rev W L Armitage vs E Milburn.
E Bradburn vs Mr Smart.

The draws have not been made as yet for the doubles.

Mr F C Napier has offered a prize of a racket for the winner of the ladies' singles, and Mr H Napier will give two rackets to the winners of the mixed doubles.

Golf.

The Times is requested to state that all those who have not played off their draw for the President's medal must do so by Saturday, 16th inst., or they will not be eligible for the next draw.

Football.

Editor of the Times.

Hints to Capt. McWilliams in picking a team to play Ireland in the near future.

Sporting Editor of the Times:

Sir,—Well, to begin with, I would start with the best man, who I think is Harry Rush. He's tall and bony, still he cuts a pretty figure in his padded suit. It is always good to give him plenty of room to get round in, as he is as likely to fall over himself as he is to fall or touch the the ball, but in about twenty-five years practice he would show up alright.

Campbell is a starter, but is showing up alright for a greenhorn. He generally plays a lone game away from the ball.

Davie Dumble, (Whaffer) ought to turn out and stretch his little stumps as he might have a show for the junior team.

"Fergy" Ferguson is getting in fine trim, getting up before breakfast and running around the back yard. He has blown himself on a new suit, and that ought to secure him a place on the team as spare man.

"Jack" Burnham shows up well for the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Co., as he plays a good game, coming over to practice just as the others are leaving. Still he can set quite a pace around the field and ought surely to be put on as [illegible]back.

"Bock" Sawyers turned out to day and promises to be good stuff, and will play if he can only get a situation in town for the season.

The boys are turning out in good style, and, with these as helps and coachers would play successfully against any team on the field.

And, now, Mr. Editor, thanking you for your space,

I remain, yours, etc.,
AN OLD-TIME SPORT.

A GENERAL ELECTION

The Ontario Legislature is Likely to be Dissolved Immediately.

AN APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE.

The Ontario Premier Said to be Contemplating a Big Move.

Should the First Bye Election Go Again the Go Against the Government, lution Will Follow Immediately they Will Go the Country on Thei cord.

Special to the Times.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—There is every reason to believe that the Hon. Mr. Hardy contemplates an early dissolution of the House and an appeal to the people. The matter will be decided in a few days. Should the first of the bye-elections go against the Government, dissolution will follow at once, and the Government will go to the country on their record. It is thought, with the great boom in business that now exists, together with the popular policy of the Government on the saw log question, that the Government has a fair prospect of being sustained.

A prominent politician, who has the ear of the Premier, told the Times representative to day that the Government had several good trump cards up its sleeve which would be played at the proper time with effect.

There is one thing certain, the Government will never face the House with a majority of four or five, as at present. There is now three vacancies in the House—West Huron, South Ontario and West Elgin, with North Waterloo on the horizon.

Hon. Mr. Ross, it is said favors bringing on all four elections simultaneously, in order to weaken the hands of the Conservatives, as it were, as the Liberals have plenty of good speakers and the Opposition have not. Besides, the power and influence of the Ottawa Government will be used with effect. It will be a life and death struggle.

The situation, briefly, is as follows:—

Some of the Cabinet are in favor of an immediate appeal to the people.

Others favor trying results in one of the vacant constituencies. If the Government is sustained in the first bye-election, the others will probably go with the Government. If the first is lost dissolution will follow at once.

As far as the Times can gather from those who are in a position to know around the Legislature Chambers, the province will be in the throes of another general election before the snow flies.

ABANDON THEIR TRIP.

Seven Hundred Indignant Chicagoans Refuse to Visit Paris Exposition.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Indignation over the outcome of the Dreyfus trial has caused a party of over 700 Chicagoans who were going to the Fair in a body to abandon their trip. Louis Halle, who is the treasurer of the party, and who since the scheme was inaugurated a year ago has been receiving weekly remittances from those who proposed going, to-day issued notices to the members to call at his offices and get their money. Immediately after the verdict in the Dreyfus trial, Mr. Halle commenced receiving letters from members of the party saying that under no circumstances would they visit France. So many of these letters were received that a meeting of the Executive Committee was called, and it was deemed advisable to call the meeting off.

A Meeting of Protest.

Washington, D.C. Sept. 13.—About a thousand persons attended a mass meeting at the Masonic Temple last night to protest against the verdict of the Rennes court martial in the Dreyfus case. The speakers included all creeds, Hebrews, Protestant and Catholic. After a number of addresses the meeting adopted a set of resolutions affirming belief in the innocence of Dreyfus, condemning the proceedings of the court martial and pledging those present to use every lawful means to prevent the co-operation of the United States in the Paris Exposition.

Storm In a Teacup.

Berlin, Sept. 13.—The German Government organs have been quick to issue a warning against the proposal to boycott the Paris Exhibition. "Germany has no occasion to take the lead in this matter," says The Cologne Gazette. "She is going to leave this to other States which, perhaps, would not considerable that Germany, of all powers, should adopt a hostile attitude towards France in this matter."

Geheimrath Lewald, a member of the [illegible] "What has the Exhibition to do with politics; its sole object is commercial. I am convinced the whole movement is only a storm in a teacup."

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 14, 1899

SATAN'S REPROOF.

It ill becomes American journals that glory in every successful onslaught on the Filipinos to rebuke Britain for her attitude towards Oom Paul Kruger. The Filipinos' refusal to be delivered in the carrying out of a bargain between Spain and the United States gave the latter a technical excuse for waging war on the blacks just as Britain might make Kruger's denial of suzerainty sole ground for commencing hostilities on the Boers. In the sight of justice Britain bringing Oom Paul Kruger to terms is a much more seemly spectacle than the United States letting its armies loose on the Filipinos. American interests in the Philippines had suffered no outrage at the hands of the natives. British subjects in South Africa on the other hand have been outrageously oppressed.

Even though there is manifest justice in Britain's warlike demeanor towards the Transvaal some sympathy is felt for Oom Paul Kruger. How much more sympathy then for Aguinaldo and reproach to the United States. Aguinaldo's withstanding of the Americans can never be distorted into other than patriotic defence of the islands against an invasion void of moral aggravation. To condone the slaughter of Filipinos and at the same time denounce Britain's treatment of the Transvaal is to take a position unfair as it is absurd.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Good morning.

•• •• ••

The general opinion is that in voting to purchase Dundurn park, Hamiltonians have Dundurn well.

•• •• ••

With some people the antagonism to the collection of duties is ingrained. Some growl when they have to pay a dog tax.

•• •• ••

Why should there not be lots of forgeries in the case? See how long they've had Dreyfus between the hammer and the anvil.

Hugh John Macdonald is an estimable citizen, but he is only a pocket edition of his great father. Hugh John expects to be Premier of Manitoba when the conservatives turn the other rascals out.

The man with the Dough was quite conspicuous in North Waterloo.

The woman who marries her ideal man generally wishes that she hadn't.

•• •• ••

While it certainly does look dark as between Boer and Britain in South Africa, little radiance is lent the situation by their letting daylight through each other.

•• •• ••

All to be said is, if it goes so far as to see the Boers and English meet at Standerton Pass, things will have come to a pretty pass.

Degenerate France is in great need of a Mark Antony to cry over the mutilated body of [illegible] "Oh judgment thou art fled to brutish beasts and men have lost their reason."

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and cocky about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get added up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him I tried my dernedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

REGEIVES THE REPLY

Chamberlain's Note is Transmitted to the Transvaal This Morning.

THE INDIAN FORCE IS READY

Between 30,000 and 40,000 Men Will Be Engaged Against the Boers.

List of British Regiments Which Are Ordered to the Cape—Four Trains Containing Refugees Leave Johannesburg—Burghers Must Stay at Home.

Cape Town, Sept. 12.—It is understood that the reply of British Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, to the last Transvaal note has been received by the British High Commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner, and forwarded to Pretoria. It will probably be delivered to the Government of the Transvaal to-day.

Received the Despatch.

Pretoria, Sept. 12.—11.30 a. m.—The British Cabinet's despatch of Friday has just been handed to the Transvaal Government.

More Ammunition.

Lourenzo Marquez, Delagoa Bay, Sept. 12.—A consignment of 517 cases of ammunition, presumably bound for the Transvaal, has been landed here.

The Indian Force.

Simla, British India, Sept. 12.—The first Transport for South Africa sails with the field hospitals from Bombay Sept 16, and the entire force from India will be embarked by Sept. 25. General Hunter, the Chief of Staff, leaves Simla to-morrow for South Africa.

Regiments Ordered to the Cape.

New York, Sept. 11.—The Herald publishes the following capable despatch:—

The total strength of the expeditionary force to be sent from England to South Africa in case of hostilities is said to be between 30,000 and 40,000 men, a large portion of whom would be employed in protecting the lines of communication and guarding against isolated attacks along the frontier.

It is officially announced to-day that the following home regiments have been selected for service in South Africa:—

1st Dragoons.
2nd Dragoons.
6th Dragoons.
6th Dragoon Guards.
10th Hussars.
12th Lancers.
Four battalions from the Grenadier Guards, Coldstream Guards and Scots Guards.
2nd Battalion Queen's Regiment.
2nd Battalion East Surrey Regiment.
2nd Battalion Devonshire Regiment.
2nd Battalion West Yorkshire Regiment
2nd Battalion Royal Highlanders, the Black Watch.
1st Battalion Highland Light Infantry.
2nd Battalion Seaforth Highlanders.
1st Battalion Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders.
1st Battalion Inniskilling Fusiliers.
1st Battalion Connaught Rangers.
1st Battalion Royal Dublin Fusiliers.
1st Battalion Royal Irish Regiment.
2nd Battalion Royal Fusiliers, City of London Regiment.
2nd Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers.
1st Battalion Royal Welsh Fusiliers.
2nd Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers.
2nd Battalion Scottish Rifles, the Cameronians.
3rd Battalion King's Royal Rifle Corps.
1st Battalion Durham Light Infantry.

To Protect Mining.

Pretoria, Sept. 12.—The tension remains high pending the receipt of Mr. Chamberlain's despatch. It is asserted on excellent authority that the Transvaal Government with a view of keeping the mining industry going, has decided to protect it in every possible way. As a first step the Government has notified the Rand companies that their men will receive protection so long as they remain peaceful, and should war unfortunately occurr the men will be given a reasonable time to leave the country if they desire. It is officially announced that the article in the gold law [illegible] belonging to people convicted of treason or conspiracy against the State, which was lately eliminated, will be re-enforced. The article also gives the Government power to order that the mines be worked and provides that if this instruction is disregarded the Government may work them through its own agents.

Refugees Leave Johannesburg.

Cape Town, Sept. 11.—Four trains containing refugees from Johannesburg have arrived here. Four hundred refugees have also arrived at Durban. During the past week the Relief Committee of Johannesburg assisted 2,000 cases of distress reported throughout the Transvaal.

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sung it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $80 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

Reciprocal.

"Yes, sir," remarked the amiable man, "I look to see an Englishman come over here and drop his h's once in awhile."

"Yes," answered the man who has been to Epsom downs, "and he likes to see us go over there and drop our [illegible]"

DIED WITHOUT WARNING

Cornelius Vanderbilt, the Money King, Dies in New York.

IN GOOD HEALTH LAST NIGHT

Seized With a Sudden Attack About Midnight and Died in Five Hours.

All Members of His Family Present When the End Came—Death Caused by a Stroke of Paralysis—Sketch of His Life and Work—An Immense Fortune.

New York Sept. 12—Cornelius Vanderbilt, sr., died this morning at 5.15 o'clock at his home at 57th street and fifth avenue, this city. There were with him at the time of his death his wife, his daughter Gladys, and Reginald, his youngest son.

Mr. Vanderbilt arrived at his Fifth avenue home from Newport with Mrs. Vanderbilt at nine o'clock last night. He appeared in excellent health and spirits, and retired soon afterwards. About midnight he was seized with a serious attack and the household was aroused. Telegrams were sent to Dr. Walter B. James, Dr. Janeway and several other physicians, who arrived in a short time. Everything possible was done for the patient but he grew rapidly worse and died at a quarter past five o'clock. Mrs. Vanderbilt and her daughter, Miss Gladys, are prostrated by the shock and physicians are attending them.

Stroke of Paralysis.

Mr. Vanderbilt's death was caused by a stroke of paralysis, and the second that he suffered. The first attack was in July, 1896. The patient was semi-conscious until death. Doctors Janeway and Butler were with him when he died.

Dr. Depew reached the Vanderbilt house at 7 30 o'clock. He remained but ten minutes. When he came out he was greatly affected, and with tears in his eyes said he was deeply grieved to give any information at that time.

William K. Vanderbilt, brother of the dead man, arrived soon after Mr. Depew.

Cornelius Vanderbilt was the eldest son of William H. Vanderbilt, financier. He was born on Staten Island, N. Y., on Nov. 27, 1843; was educated at private schools and trained to business. He was treasurer of the New York and Harlem railroad from 1867 till 1877, then vice-president till 1886, and since that date has been its president. In addition to his connection with the roads previously mentioned, in 1883 he became president of the Canadian Southern Company. He was a director in thirty-four different railroad companies, and was a trustee of many of the charitable, religious and educational institutions of New York City. Among Mr. Vanderbilt's benefactions are the gift of a building in New York City for the use of railroad employes, a contribution of $100,000 for the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral, and a collection of drawings by the old masters and the paintings of the "Horse Fair," by Rosa Bonheur, to the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

When Cornelius Vanderbilt was born his father was a farmer. Cornelius at the age of 18, left school and secured a place as messenger in the Shoe and Leather Bank. His grandfather, the Commodore, learning of this, sent for him and asked why he had not applied to him for a position.

"Because I did not want to ask you for anything," was the reply.

This pleased the Commodore and it is said that he made a codicil to his will a few days later leaving $1,000,000 to his grandson.

Cornelius left the Shoe and Leather Bank to go into the employ of Lissam Bros., bankers, but later his grandfather asked him to enter the railroad service. The first place given to him was that of assistant treasurer of the the New York and Harlem Railroad. His rise was rapid and he succeeded his father as head of the Vanderbilt system. He gave to the management much time and as chairman of the Board was not merely an observer of the other men's work, but a worker, [illegible] of business applying knowledge, initiative, and executive force.

Before Rear Admiral Kautz left for Samoa a young woman asked him whether he had ever "felt afraid in battle." "Once," he answered. "A stray ball knocked my cigar out of my mouth and there wasn't another aboard."

The late ex-Governor Flower was once asked by a less successful financier how to succeed in Wall street. "By working harder than at any other trade or profession on earth," was the answer. "But won't that wear you out?" "Not before your time."

Mayor Moir of Scranton was years ago a journeyman tailor in Philadelphia. John Ross of the former city needed a workman, and Mr. Moir being recommended, was offered inducements to go to Scranton. In February last Mr. Moir was elected chief executive of the city.

Russell Sage is no friend of the camera, and very rarely is it that a photographer is quick enough to get a snap shot of the millionaire. As for sitting for a picture, that has probably occurred less frequently during the millionaire's long life than that of any other equally prominent man in the country.

TOWN TOPICS.

The curfew bell was rung last night at 8:30 o'clock. Nothing sensational resulted. It just rung, that was all.—Freeport Bulletin.

Abilene is getting to be a front porch town. Nearly every resident improvement includes a porch.—Abilene (Kan.) Reflector.

The companies are selling their gas so cheaply in New York that several of the metropolitan newspapers are filled with it every day.—Detroit Journal.

Buffalo is to have a new union station to cost $6,000,000, with a waiting room 80 by 385 feet, that will be the largest in the world. How about this, Boston?—Gardiner Reporter-Journal.

Buffalo is in a flutter over an extremely wicked Midway that it expects to have at the Pan-American exposition, and can't think of a suitable name for it. Why not call it Hamburg Paradise?—Rochester Democrat.

All because of a blessed war to the knife squabble between rival companies New York is now enjoying 65 cent gas. Father Knickerbocker will be a weak old gentleman if he lets them restore the higher rate.

MOTIVES AND METHODS.

A Missouri girl killed herself because her sweetheart had gone to the war.

Robert F. Hayes, a Boston clerk, hanged himself with his necktie as the noose.

Because his mother would not let him go in swimming an Arkansas boy cut his throat.

Forked branches of an apple tree were used as a noose by a Stroudsburg (Pa.) suicide.

Champagne with arsenic in it was used by a San Francisco man as a means of self destruction.

Her husband wanted to move, and she did not. That led a Connecticut woman to drink poison.

Fearing that his wife would scold him for getting home late a newly made London bridegroom committed suicide.

"Ah, to see the moon at a distance of one meter," was the note left by a Paris suicide explaining his motive for death.

THE CYNIC.

After a man has told you his troubles, you know more about his kin.

You will find a loafer leech attached to every industrious man or woman.

An honest man is one who admits that his baldness is due to old age and not to sickness.

Every bridegroom finds an excuse to return from his wedding journey sooner than originally planned.

Every circus man lays all his plans on the assumption that the people are chumps. Every circus man gets rich.

After the people have worked themselves to death to raise a preacher's salary, he decides that he can do better elsewhere and resigns.

It would be interesting to know how much longer the week should be, in order that the men may find their Sunday underwear ready without fussing.—Atchison Globe.

ELECTRIC SPARKS.

Work of laying the cable from Vancouver to Fanning island and thence to Australia and New Zealand will begin this summer, it is announced.

The new Nernst electric light dispenses with the usual vacuum bulb and replaces the hairlike filament with a short bar of refractory material, thereby greatly increasing the light and cheapening the cost.

Experiments have been made lately by French government officials with a new telephone, which enables persons to converse without putting their mouths and ears to the apparatus, the words being distinctly audible in any part of the room.

[illegible]

Toronto, Sept. 12—Secretary Wills of the Board of Trade this morning received the appended self-explanatory note from Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere, Minister of Inland Revenue:

"Dear Sir, I have received a supply of weights and measures and charts of the metric system, and have much pleasure in sending you one set by express. Herein you will find enclosed a short summary of the advantages attending the adoption of the metric system, and showing the necessity of our preparing beforehand for its inevitable adoption.

"The metric system is at present used by all civilized nations, with the exception of Great Britain, the United States and Russia. Indications point to its early adoption in the United States and Great Britain partly because of its superiority and partly out of necessity for the preservation of their foreign trade which is handicapped in competition with foreign manufacturers, who derive considerable advantage by the use of weights and measures with which their customers are familiar and under which they run no special risk of mistake.

Gradual Preparation.

"We must gradually prepare for the adoption of the metric system in Canada," says the circular. "If we compare the two we shall soon find out how much the metric system of weights and measures is preferable to our present confused and irrational system, just as we found some years ago how much easier it was to calculate in dollars and cents than in pounds, shillings and pence. The whole metric system is based on a single unit, the metre, a measure of length one ten-millionth part of the distance between the equator and the pole. True, a slight error has been discovered in that measurement, which prevents it from being theoretically perfect.

"However much this may be regretted it does not interfere with the special advantages of the system over all others which consists in its being built and entirely based upon that one single unit of length, the metre, so that not only length, breadth and depth, but weight and capacity for both liquids and solids are all deducted from the metre and fractions thereof, with the additional improvements that all calculations are on the decimal principle both for fractions and multiples."

Trying to Sow Discord.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—The Kolnische Zeitung publishes a long letter from Apia under date Aug. 11, detailing events there chiefly with the object of sowing discord between Great Britain and the United States, and trying to prove that Germany, and not England, is in line with the United States.

Don't Cause a Revolution.

Vienna, Sept. 12.—The Austro-Hungarian and Russian Governments have sent a warning to King Alexander of Servia not to precipitate a revolution by sentencing to death any of the radical leaders in connection with the recent conspiracy to assassinate former King Milan.

Rainfall in the Deccan.

Simla, British India, Sept 12.—There has been a good rainfall over the Madras and Bombay Deccan. The situation elsewhere is unchanged.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 75.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mrs. Fit" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Therese," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondanes, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 56-year-old baldheaded Cæsar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his presence.

EUGENE FIELD AND TABOR.

How the Humorist Made Life a Burden For the Millionaire.

"Up to middle age the late Senator Tabor's life was one of great hardship," said a former resident of the Silver State, "and when he suddenly became fabulously rich he plunged into luxuries like a starving man wading into a banquet. One of his early freaks was the purchase of several magnificent lace nightrobes which cost $100 apiece and which he kept locked up in a safe during the day. Eugene Field was editor of the Denver Tribune at the time, and these lace nightrobes made him simply hysterical. He wrote column upon column about them, describing the garments in detail, with numerous diagrams depicting sections fore and aft. The diagrams were hideous affairs, which Field carved out himself with a penknife on the back of old wood type. He used to describe how Tabor would forget the combination of the safe and sit up, shivering and naked, half the night trying to remember the right figures.

"Altogether he kept Denver in a roar for weeks and made Tabor so wild that one day he rushed into his office, snatched the unfortunate nightrobes out of their compartment and tore them to threads. 'There, now!' he exclaimed, wiping his forehead and kicking the tattered fragments into a corner, 'I hope that fool will be satisfied. I'll be hanged if I ain't going to get a gunny sack,' he continued, 'cut some holes in the end for my head and arms, and then sleep in it for the rest of my life!'

"When Tabor was appointed to the senate to fill an unexpired term of exactly 30 days, Field broke loose again and had all kinds of fun with the old man. He declared that Tabor opposed the tariff bill on the ground that it encouraged lawlessness in the west. 'I don't know this tariff bill,' he reported the senator as saying in a speech, 'but we have entirely too many of 'em out where I live. There's Wild Bill and Pecos Bill and Billy the Kid—all no good. If you let Tariff Bill have everything to do with the custom house he is liable to steal the Atlantic ocean.' Many of the honest frontier folk took these flights of fancy seriously, and drove Tabor nearly distracted by long letters of remonstrance, urging him to read up and get posted, so as not to disgrace the state.

"At the expiration of the senator's brief term he circulated an autograph album among his fellow members, and the incident tickled Field immensely. He gave what purported to be a copy of the 'sentiments' inscribed in the volume by the different statesmen—such things as 'When this you see, remember me, Roscoe Conkling,' and 'Sure as the moss grows 'round a stump you are my darling sugar lump—I mean chump—George F. Hoar,' and similar nonsense, all of which maddened his victim.

"I think 'Gene Field was the only man Tabor never forgave, for in spite of his gaunt, forbidding exterior, the miner magnate was as tender hearted as a girl. He was really full of sterling qualities, and in his proper sphere he would have been anything but grotesque. One thing is sure—if every fellow he helped in secret would have joined his funeral procession he would have gone to his grave like an emperor of old."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Shopgirl's Hard Lot.

Persons complain that shopgirls do not jump actively to wait upon them when they enter a store. Why not? The other day I saw a girl approach a respectably dressed woman of middle age—that's 35—and heard her ask, over the counter, "What would you like, ma'am?"

To this polite attention I was shocked to hear the woman reply: "You shut up! Don't you talk to me! I can ask for what I want, and I don't want any impudence from clerks!"

A few rebuffs from such creatures are quite enough to cool the ardor of any shopgirl.

FUNSTON AND HIS MEN.

General Funston has been in the swim.—Boston Herald.

Hail to General Funston, the unosculated Hobson of the orient!—Detroit Free Press.

Ten to one, when Aguinaldo gets his last ditch ready, that man Funston will be on hand to swim it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

General Fred Funston, the Kansas cyclone in the tropics, is not a Chicago man. He didn't stop to boil the water.—Omaha Bee.

Judging by the elegant fight he puts up, Fred Funston must have been a member of some Kansas church choir.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Twentieth Kansas is showing itself ambitious, ambidextrous and amphibious. It is right in the swim all the time.—Topeka Capital.

General Funston can have anything he wants in Kansas when he gets home, even Jerry Simpson's socks, if he can find them.—St. Paul Globe.

We will soon be hearing from the chaps who attended swimming school with General Fred Funston and tied knots in his clothes.—Washington Post.

General Luna is the first to see the sea serpent this season. Some observers say it was the Kansas regiment using a rope for a ferry.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

No wonder the Twentieth Kansas volunteers have invariably swept the Filipinos before them. Their battlecry is the Kansas university football yell of "Rock chalk! Jayhawk! K. S. U.!"—St. Louis Republic.

THE CYNIC.

All of us are very clever in finding excuses for not working more.

The most sensible woman will "put on" a little before a preacher.

A man is not really prominent until he has officiated at three prominent funerals.

Some women who never work for anything else will work like slaves for a church.

An old maid dearly loves to watch a quarrel between a husband and wife to see how it comes out.

If a man truly loves his wife, he is very apt to become confidential and tell her a lot of stories on the other fellows.

In talking it is well to know that people will not remember what you are saying unless they can use it against you.

A man always rises in his own estimation when he gets on familiar terms with a person of whom he once stood in awe.

There probably never was a woman too good to try to pass her children off as under age when traveling on the railroad.—Atchison Globe.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Peacocks are reliable weather prophets. Before a storm the gaudy birds become restless and clamorous.

The green woodpecker is said to laugh his "Ya-ha-ha" in different, more liquid tones when rain is coming, and especially gifted persons claim his cry really changes to "rain, rain, rain!"

In Devonshire, England, they foretell storms by the flight of the rooks. When they are pitch falling or playing at tumbling, diving and wheeling in the air, they say a storm is due.

Sea fowl are very clever in foretelling a storm. To a sailor bad weather means wind, and to a landsman it means rain, but the screaming of the water birds usually foretells a change of some sort for the worse in the prevailing weather.

SISTERLY CITIES.

Minneapolis has lost a dam, but then the town was never worth one.—St. Paul Dispatch.

What is being done for art in Chicago is not much. What is being done for art by Chicago is infinitely less.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

If the New York gas war keeps on at its present rate of progress, consumers will soon get the stuff for nothing, with a chromo and a pound of tea thrown in.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

New Yorkers are talking of having a self propelling fire engine. Come up this way, neighbors, and see what the metropolis of Connecticut can show you in that line. You're years behind us.—Hartford Courant.

FOUL TIPS.

For Sale—One baseball team. Answers to the name of "Giants." Any offer will be accepted.—New York Herald.

The ex-prides of Von der Ahe haven't as yet had their batting eyes forwarded from St. Louis.—Cleveland Leader.

As in previous years, the Washington team, as a matter of strict courtesy, will be known as a ba chall club.—Chicago Record.

Men put in the best years of their lives in the pursuit of riches. One class works with the head, and the other with the muscles. Each cares more for dollars than for health. The brain is taxed to the utmost in evolving and executing schemes, and the body is worn out with constant, unremitting toil. Just about the time a man stops to take account of things, he finds the dollars have come, but health has departed. Then he reverses matters completely. He devotes the rest of his life to spending his dollars to regain his health.

What a man with worn-out body and tired brain needs most of all is a good stomach. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the proper remedy to set the stomach right. This medicine will make his appetite good, make his weak stomach strong and help it to digest the food he puts into it. Good digestion makes pure blood, and pure blood vitilizes the whole system. This great remedy also cures those who have sore throat, a persistent cough, weak and bleeding lungs and bronchitis, all of which often arise from weak stomach and consequent indigestion. It is a cleansing, strengthening, purifying, invigorating alterative tonic. It puts life into the blood and nerves, into the brain and body. It cures every form of indigestion, makes the sleep sound, and nerves steady. There is nothing so good, and you should refuse all substitutes offered by dealers.

"I had catarrh for four years and also liver and kidney trouble," writes John A. Calloway, Esq., of No. 218 26th Street, Columbus, Ga., "when it would commence troubling me, I would have a slight aching a little below the chest. In 1894 I broke out in lumps all over and when these left the skin peeled off. I took six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, two bottles of his 'Pleasant Pellets,' and I believe I am sound and well. I have a good appetite; before I commenced treatment I had no appetite at all."

Revising C. P. R. Train Rules.

Mr. J. W. Leonard Divisional Superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, is in Montreal attending an important conference of the railway company's officials, which is being held in Montreal. The object of the meeting is the revising of the rules governing the running of trains, and as these rules govern most of the employees in the company's service the conference will be a very important one. The presiding officer at the meeting is Mr. Thomas Tait, Superintendent of the line east of Fort William, and there are present three general superintendents, ten superintendents, five train masters, and twelve train despatchers. The results of the conference will be embodied in book form.

Douro's New Treasurer.

The Douro Council ment on Tuesday and appointed Mr. James Leahy in the office of treasurer of the municipality in place of his father, Mr. John Leahy, who recently died. There were a number of applications for the office, but all were withdrawn when Mr. Leahy consented to act. It will be difficult for Mr. Leahy to fill his father's place, who was the soul of honor and uprightness, but he will be as worthy a successor as could be found anywhere.

Deepening the Channel.

Mr. "Cass." Gordon and his force of about 16 men have completed the excavation of the river bed at Hastings and are now at work deepening the channel at "Yankee Bonnet." A steam rock borer and dredge is used, and some heavy charges of dynamite are being set off. As soon as the work at this place is completed the force will move up to the locks, where their services are needed. The work will take several months to complete. Mr. Frank Fehren is Government time keeper and attends to the buying for the "camp."

Mr. [illegible] Ill.

The Times regret to learn that Mr. T. [illegible] is seriously ill. He was taken with a chill on Tuesday afternoon and became sick. His many friends hope to hear of his early recovery.

THE RENTALS INCREASED.

The report of the arbitrators to appraise the value of the ground rental of the town property on George street, lots 1 to 6 south of Simcoe and east of George-street made their report on September 1st "taken up" and the details of show substantial increases.

Thos. Bradburn, lots 1 and 2, plan 108, (occupied by China Hall and the Matthews Company). old rental, 21 years lease per year $124; rental under award $500; increase $375.

J. J. Lundy, lots 3 and 4, plan 108, (occupied by R. Neil's double store), old rental $93 73 per year; rental under award $450; increase $356 24.

[illegible] Estate and E. [illegible], (occupied by Times and Palace Restaurant), old rental $65; rental under award $420; increase $325

The total annual rental under the old leases, $293 75. The total annual rental under the award, $1,350. Total increased rental for the currency of the new lease, $22,181.25.

The arbitrators were, on behalf of the lessees, Mr. Wm. Langforp; on behalf of the town, Mr. Thos. Cahill, and selected by these two, Mr. E. H. D. Hall.

BEFORE MAGISTRATE EDMISON.

Several Cases Disposed of This Afternoon.

Peter McCrath of Ennismore, was charged before the County Magistrate Edmison yesterday afternoon by Wm. Perdue, with having committed an assault upon the latter on Sept. 8th. Accused pleaded not guilty.

Both parties appear to have been upon bad terms with each other for some time, and matters reached a climax on Friday last. Complainant on his oath told how McGrath had insisted on crossing complainant's farm and on Friday last the day of the alleged assault, accused brandishing a pitchfork, declared would be the death of Perdue.

McGrath was found guilty and fined $2 and costs, amounting in all to $10.42, to be paid within three days, or in default of payment, twenty-one days in jail.

Wm. Portway was charged by Fred Ashley with having assaulted the latter on Tuesday, the 5th of September last. Accused pleaded not guilty and was fined $2 and costs.

Untiring in Strength

Former Invalid
RESTORED BY Grape-Nuts
FOOD

A RATIONAL FOOD CURE.

One of the well-known grocers in Washington, D. C., who supplies the food of many of the brainy, representative men of the country, says: "I have become an enthusiastic consumer of Grape-Nuts. It has constituted solely my morning and evening meal for the past eight months. Previous to this, worn out with overwork, broken down in health, dyspepsia having led to Bright's disease, heart trouble and what not, I was given up to die. This food came to my notice trough one of my customers. The name suggested something in the desert line—dried fruit, prunes, raisins or the like, and when I put it in the store, a glance at the label persuaded me to make a trial personally.

I had at the store for my supper a dish and a half dish, and was impressed, perhaps unfavorably, with its richness, perceiving at the same time how very appropriately the new food was named. Strange as it may appear, its effect was almost at once apparent. Seated that evening at my home, I remarked to the family that it was the first time in a whole year that I had felt like myself. I was much elated and naturally attributed the change to Grape-Nuts. My improvement since then has been continuous, my health is better than ever before; I look ten years younger and am untiring in strength." (The gentleman does not care to have his name quoted publicly, but his store can be found at 726 Eighteenth Street, Washington, D. C).

Now for the reason. The man or woman worn out with overwork or nervous prostration will find an immediate gained strength by the use of Grape-Nuts and cream, because of the fact that the natural phosphate of potash obtained from certain parts of the grains is one of the strong elements in Grape-Nuts, and this is presented to the system in the form demanded by nature; not as a drug.

The system takes up the needed particles of phosphate of potash and it is known that the soft gray matter which fills the delicate nerve centers throughout the body as well as the brain and the solar plexus, can only be made and renewed from day to day by the action of phosphate of potash on albumen. Albumen is one of the principal elements of all food, but unless albumen has with it in the system a sufficient amount of phosphate of potash, it cannot be transformed into brain matter without the action of this particular element, for there is no known way to make grey matter except by the combination of albumen and phosphate of potash

Therefore, when one uses Grape-Nuts, he makes use of the best scientific knowledge of the day in the selection of food for invigorating and re-vitalizing the body. This food has become famous throughout the world, and it is to be found in every first-class grocery store. Grape-Nuts are made by the Postum Co. at their factories in Battle Creek.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Mr. James Gordon has an Exciting Experience this Week.

Mr James Gordon, youngest son of Mr. James Gordon until lately night watchman in town, had an experience that he would not care to repeat, and which nearly cost him his life. Jimmy has gone into railroading, in the capacity of fireman, and while making a run with a light engine from Midland to Lindsay, engineer Haugh discovered that one of the driving rods was broken when a few miles out of Coldwater. This was about four o'clock in the morning. Breaks were at once applied but they failed to hold the engine.

It was then that the engine left the rails, and the engineer called out to Jimmy to jump. They were running at about 40 miles an hour on a down grade. Both men left the engine, Jimmy alighting on his shoulder, breaking a collar bone, and receiving other bruises, Haugh had his head cut, and it is feared internally hurt.

They lay for hours suffering untold agonies, until aid arrived. Haugh was brought to his home in Lindsay, and Jimmy to Peterborough, where he is doing as well as could be expected.

A Peculiar Incident.

Sandy Hook, Sept. 12.—After a very rough experience yesterday, the Shamrock bent on a new mainsail this morning and prepared for a long formal trial before the cup races. The mainsail is the one which she will probably carry during the coming race with the Columbia, as it is on a steel boom and aluminum gaff, which will also be in the boat during the races. The mainsail set beautifully. A new club topsail was also set over the mainsail for an hour or two. The boat lay at her moorings while those on the Erin looked over her sails.

The storm yesterday nearly wrought the Shamrock's destruction, as the Ulster dragged her anchor and came within a hundred yards of running down the Shamrock. Full steam was got up on board the Erin and preparations were made for saving the Shamrock from being run down by the lighter. The launch of the Erin ran alone to the Shamrock and in doing so was nearly capized. Fortunately the gale abated at about 8 o'clock, so that

Applications for Space Still Pouring in and no One Wants to Withdraw.

Ottawa, Sept 13.—There is no truth in the report that the Commissioners to the Paris Exposition, who are meeting here to-day to arrange about space and other matters, have been notified that certain applicants for space have refused to exhibit on account of the Dreyfus affair.

Mr. Jardine, the Commissioner for Ontario, and Mr. W. D. Scott, the Commissioner for the country west of Ontario, were seen to-day, and gave the story a most unqualified denial. They stated that the time for application for space had expired on June 30, yet applications were still coming in at the rate of about 27 a day, and it was to consider these among other things, that they were meeting to-day.

All applications for space pass through the hands of the secretary of the Commission and he states that no one had declined to exhibit for the reason mentioned or for any other reason. The applications, he said, were pouring in daily.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate since you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and get to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproar of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

And Decline to Take Action Regarding Tartar's Detention.

TRANSPORT CANNOT GO

Consul Wildman's Protest Not Considered by the Admiralty.

Harbormaster Will Not Permit the Tartar to Clear With More Than 750 Soldiers on Board, and a Large Number of Kansas Volunteers Will be Left Behind.

New York, Sept. 14.—A despatch to the World (yellow) from London, says: The British local officers have declined to take any action upon United States Consul Wildman's protest against the detention of the American transport Tartar. This leaves the matter entirely in the hands of the Hong Kong harbormaster, who positively declines to allow the transport to sail with more thad 750 soldiers on board. If the Tartar sails under this restriction a large number of the Kansas volunteers will be left behind here. Many of these volunteers have been permitted to come ashore from the Tartar. Some of them met a man named Etsel, who it is said had taught the Filipinos how to use machine guns. There was a row, the Americans threatening Etsel, and he appealed to the police for protection. This was of course accorded him, and the soldiers returned to the ship.

CHAMBERLAIN RECEIVES A REPLY TO HIS NOTE

And Immediately Confers With General Lord Wolseley and General George White.

ITS TEXT UNKNOWN, BUT THE PROSPECT IS DARK

Two Well-known English Newspapers Say That the Reply is a Defiant One Offers No Prospect of Peace.

Orange Free State With Boers.

London, Sept. 14.—The Transvaal reply to the last note of the British Secretary of State of the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, has been received, but its nature is not yet known. At the Colonial Office a reporter of the Associated Press was informed that nothing will be given out for the present.

It was regarded as significant, however, that the nature of the Boer reply was communicated to the commander-in-chief, Field Marshall Lord Wolsely who immediately summoned Gen. Sir George Stewart White, V.C., former quarter-master general, the prospective commander of the British forces in Natal

TRUCULENT, BLASPHEMOUS.

London, Sept. 14.—6.20 p.m.—At this hour the South African advices continue most conflicting regarding the tenor of President Kruger's answer to Mr. Chamberlain.

The morning Post, in a second edition prints a special despatch from Pietermaritzburg, capital of Natal, saying the reply as "truculent, loquacious and blasphemous"

The Manchester Guardian's correspondent at Cape Town telegraphs saying the outlook is of the gloomiest character.

The Cape Town papers themselves take a more hopeful view of the situation basing their belief on the probable acceptance by President Kruger of the franchise measures suggested in Mr. Chamberlain's latest despatch. But even they admit it is impossible to learn or foreshadow President Kruger's attitude towards the suzerainty of Great Britain, which after all is still the main issue.

More Diplomacy.

The tension now existing here and at the Cape may be temporarily settled at any moment by the publication of President Kruger's reply. On the other hand, it may be several days before the general public learns what answer the Transvaal has made. If President Kruger has answered defiantly, it does not necessarily mean the immediate breaking off of negotiations. The British would probably reply with an unmistakable ultimatum, but it is scarcely to their advantage to bring about hostilities until the reinforcements are nearer the scene of action than they are at present. Whatever the nature of President Kruger's reply, it is probable that several more stages of diplomatic processes will be gone through with before there is definite war or peace, unless, of course, President Kruger takes the initiative and raids Natal. It is the possibility of this move that makes definite news of his reply so eagerly and anxiously awaited.

AN EXTRAORDINARY SESSION

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, Sept 14.—The members of the Raad of the Orange Free State have been notified to be ready to be summoned for an extraordinary session at a moment's notice. The Burghers of the Orange Free State, at a meeting just held, passed a meeting to stand shoulder to shoulder with the Transvaal in case of hostilities.

MICROBES IN ICE CREAM.

Typhoid Fever Traced to the Product Sold Out of Doors.

London, Sept. 14.—Ice cream vendors had better set their cans in oredr Liverpool and Glasgow are leading the way in dealing with them, and Dr. Manby explained recently to the Sanitary Congress what had been done in the former place.

A series of typhoid fever cases had been traced to ice cream sold at a local fair; the ice cream suspected was found teeming with bacteria, and it had been manufactured in a house where there had been two cases of infection. The Liverpool Council wished to obtain powers in a private bill to license sellers of ice cream and to register premises. The Local Government Board did not view these proposals with favor, and provisions enforcing good conditions of manufacture were inserted in their place.

Cases under the new powers had been found of manufacturing cream in a covered-in stable yard, and of cooling the cream on top of a kitchen window. A Liverpool magistrate in the latter case told the vendor that he ought to be condemned to live for a time on his own ice cream.

Until a general act can be passed, said Dr. Manby, powers by private bill should be obtained, or ice cream should be rigorously dealt with as a form of milk selling. It was stated that other local bodies were moving to prevent foul and disease-creating ice cream from being sold in the streets.

Victim of Interpreter.

New York, Sept. 14.—A special to The Herald from Washington says: As a result of the investigation of the charges made against Mr. Edward Bedloe, United States Consul at Canton, it is stated that he will be either ordered back to Canton, or be given another position in the Consular service equally as good as that occupied in China. The inquiry into the charges submitted to the department against Dr. Bedloe has extended over a year. The responsibility for Dr. Bedloe's trouble is placed entirely upon his interpreter, a Chinaman named Chung, who, fearing punishment upon the discovery of his crimes, fled to Macao so as to escape the vengeance of Dr. Bedloe and the Chinese Government.

With respect to the charge that Dr. Bedloe issued fraudulent certificates to Chinese, it is said to-day by a State Department official that the consul was in this case, as well as others, the victim of his interpreter.

STRIKERS COERCIVE

And Mob Violence is Greatly Feared at Owen Sound.

THE MAYOR WON'T ACT

The Company Will Guard Its Property Regardless of Consequences.

The Strikers Compelled Those Who Were at Work to Quit, and Seemingly Another Disturbance Was Only Averted by the Company Shutting Up the Sheds.

Owen Sound, Sept. 14.—Only a few of the men imported by the C. P. R. to take the place of the striking truckers are at work, and there is intense excitement in the town owing to the coercive measures adopted by the strikers. Yesterday afternoon they compelled those who were at work to quit at two o'clock, and seemingly a further disturbance was only averted by the railway company shutting up the sheds.

Mayor Won't Act.

Agent Cottam and Mr. Bell requested Mayor Middleboro to protect the company's property from injury and its employees from intimidation, but the Mayor reminded them that if they expected violence they had only to appeal to a magistrate, who would appoint as many special constables to protect them as they thought necessary. The officials, however, are indignant at the stand taken by the Mayor, believing that it was his duty to give them protection, even without it being asked. They decline to make an appeal to a magistrate, and it is quite plain that they will try to hold the town responsible for any damage which may be done.

Thousands of Tons Delayed.

The steamship Athabasca has left for Fort William with a small cargo of freight, but the other vessels in port are waiting to be unloaded. The situation is very serious, as the passage of thousands of tons of freight is being delayed.

It is expected that the company will send more men up to-day, and the strikers are prepared to meet them and win them over to their side.

In the meantime Solicitor MacMurchy has served a notice on the Mayor of the town to the effect that the employes of the company have been three times interfered with and prevented from working by persons acting in a riotous manner, delay being thus caused in loading and unloading vessels, and by reason of this serious claims for damages may be made against the company by the owners or consignees of this freight. M. MacMurchy points out that the company has petitioned the authorities for protection in vain, and that the company will look to the town for indemnity for all loss occasioned by the refusal of protection. He says that the company will defend its men and property by every means in its power, and points out that the unloading of vessels at other ports will cause loss to Owen Sound.

MISSIONARIES FLED.

Lamas of Thibet Join in a Demonstration Against Them.

[illegible] Washington. The report San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 14.—A special from Tacoma, Wash., says: Telegrams have been received at Shanghai that several missionaries have been driven out of the city of Pa[illegible], situated 100 miles across the border in Audoee Province, Thibet. Over 3,000 Lamas reside there, the majority of whom joined the anti-foreign demonstration and drove the missionaries out The latter included Mr. and Mrs. Shield and Mrs. MacBeth. For several weeks previous to the final riot the missionaries were compelled to stay indoors. Details are not known further than that the mission was destroyed, and the missionaries barely escaped by journing secretly at night. Near Ichang and Chun King an anti-Catholic uprising was caused by the kidnapping of children. Children have been stolen almost wholesale by wandering gypsies, but the natives believe that they were eaten by the foreigners. A number of native Catholics have been killed. At Pushan, two natives were executed for circulating reports against the foreigners.

Missing German Steamer

London, Sept. 14.—Anxious inquiries have been addressed to Yarmouth with regard to the German steamer Titus, which it is feared, has been lost with her crew of sixteen hands. The Titus last discharged a cargo of wood from Archangel at Yarmouth, and having taken a coal cargo at Grimsby, left that port more than a fortnight ago for Trelleborg, in Denmark. [illegible] ten days overdue. No tidings can be gleaned of her, and none of the steamers crossing the North Sea report sighting her during the passage.

THE "FIFTH ACT" NOW

Emile Zola's Bitter Cry of Indignation and Horror.

THE AVENGING NEMESIS

He Fears Proof of Dreyfus' Innocence May Assume This Form.

"The Rennes Trial Was Only the Fourth Act, and, Great God, What Will the Fifth Act Be? To What Supreme Expiation Will it Force Our People?"

Paris, Sept. 14.—Emile Zola's bitter cry of indignation and horror at the infamous action of the French nation in endorsing the result of the Rennes court martial, occupies the centre of the stage in the Dreyfus tragedy to-day. His letter, which he calls "The Fifth Act," has been printed in large type and posted up all over Paris.

"I am in mortal fear," begins the letter. "It is not anger, avenging indignation, the need to proclaim the crime and demand its punishment in the name of truth and justice that I feel now; it is terror, the sacred terror of the man who sees the impossible being realized, the rivers flowing back to their sources, the earth turning without the sun, and in my fear I cry the distress of our generous and noble France. My dread is of the abyss into which she is falling."

With the friends of justice the world over, Zola had fondly hoped that the Rennes court martial would see the happy ending of the terrible tragedy, that the play must end happily with the classic triumph of the innocent. "And we have been deceived."

"The Rennes trial was only the fourth act, and, great God, what will the fifth act be? To what supreme expiation will it force our people?

"When the complete report of the Rennes trial is published there will exist no more execrable monument of human infamy.

"And this abomination lasted for a whole month, in the face of the innocent—that piteous Dreyfus, the poor shreds of whose humanity would make the very stones weep. And his former comrades came and kicked him, and his former chums came and crushed him with their rank, so as to save themselves from the galleys. And there was never a cry of pity, never a throb of generosity in these shameful souls!

"And it is our sweet France that has given this spectacle to the world!

"This is irreparable. The last crime has been committed. Jesus was condemned but once.

"But let final ruin come, let France fall a prey to faction, let the country be aflame and perish on the embers, let the army itself lose honor rather than confess that some members of it made a mistake, and that certain generals were liars and forgers. The ideal shall be crucified, the sabre must remain king."

And now the writer awaits the final act. It will involve a terrible surgery, but it will end by restoring France to health and fresh youth. To Germany he looks for absolute proof of Dreyfus' innocence. It will come as a thunder clap, but come it will and that speedily. "Truth is on the march. Nothing will stop it. At Rennes it has just made a giant's stride. I no longer have any fear except that I may see it arrive in a thunderclap of the avenging Nemesis."

Decision on Monday.

Paris, Sept. 14.—The Government Commissioner attached to the Council of Revision may possibly finish the report on the Dreyfus case before Monday. In that event the Council of Revision will give a decision regarding the merits of the appeal that day and on the following day the Cabinet will decide whether measures of clemency are advisable.

Telegrams to the Queen.

London, Sept. 14.—Queen Victoria has received many telegrams from home and abroad begging her to plead with President Loubet for a pardon for Dreyfus.

Conditional Pardon.

Boston, Sept. 14.—The Boston Post says that Generals Roget and Mercier have offered on the part of the army to demand from President Loubet the pardon of Capt Dreyfus, if the Jewish Committee will drop the matter and on condition that Dreyfus shall live away from the large cities of France for three years.

France in America.

Clay City, Ill., Sept. 14.—It is likely that five hundred French families will settle near here within the next six months. Arrangements to that end have been practically closed, and a miniature France in America, with its silk, wine and parfumery industry, will soon be the curious spectacle which this thriving section will present. For the last two weeks A. B. Bostany, of Boston, has been here negotiating for 2,000 acres of land on which to locate the French company. He departed greatly satisfied with this end of the deal, and will close the plan with the French capitalists whom he represents when he arrives east. The investment will require one million dollars.

Two Crushed to Death

Berlin, Sept. 14.—Advices from Kalisch, in Russian Poland, say that two persons have been crushed to death during a panic in a synagogue, caused by the upsetting of a lamp. The victims were all women and children. Many others were injured.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 14, 1899

RETIREMENT OF ADMIRAL KANE.

The announcement from London of the retirement of Rear-Admiral Henry Coey Kane, of the English navy, recalls the catastrope in the harbor of Apia on March 15, 1889. Admiral Kane was then captain of the corvette Calliope, and succeeded by skillful manoeuvering in getting his craft out the harbor in the teeth of the gale. When the storm broke there were seven war-ships and fifteen merchant craft riding at anchor in the harbor. In spite of all that could be done by the American and German boats to relieve the strains on the cables, the anchors dragged and the boats were carried towards the shore. The first to strike was the German gunboat Eber, which went upon the reef and turned keel upward. One officer and four men were saved, but five officers and 66 men perished. The German flagship Adler was the second to strike and she went up on her side on the reef, while 20 of her 130 men and officers were drowned. By skillfull handling, the American cruiser Nipsic was taken clear of the reef and beached, with a loss of seven men. The German corvette Olga, after having struck nearly all the other war-ships, went ashore on a sand flat, from which place she was pulled into deep waters a few days later. The United States cruiser Vandalia was then thrown on the reef, losing 5 officers and 39 men, and the last war-ship the Trenton, was carried upon the beach near the American consulate with a loss of one man.

PAST AND PRESENT.

The Times has been favored with a copy of the report of the Bureau of Pensions, Washington. This report is made to June 30th last. Amongst the many singular facts contained in the report is the statement that there are on the rolls the names of the following widows of soldiers who fought in the American war of independence. When it is remembered that the war began in 1785 and ended three years later the statement will be exceedingly interesting. The names are as follows: the ages running from 83 to 85 years:

Ester S. Damon, Plymouth Union, Vt.; Nancy Jones, Jonesboro, Tenn.; Rebecca Mays, Newbern. Va.; Mary Snead, Parksley, Va.

The following are the names of the surviving daughters of revolutionary soldiers:

Hannah Newell Barrett, Boston, Mass.; Susannah Chadwick, Emporium Pa; Sarah C. Hurlbut, Little Marsh, Pa; Eliza Sanford, Bloomfield, N.J.; Ann M. Slaughter, Mitchell Station, Va; Rhoda Augusta Thompson, Woodbury, Conn; Augusta Fuller, Bridgeport, Conn.

Hiram Cronk, of northwestern New York is the only surviving pensioned soldier of the war of 1812. He is 99 years of age, and he served with the troops from New York.

The number of widows on the rolls based on service of their husbands in the war of 1812 is 1,[illegible].

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Good morning.

The judges of the Dreyfus court martial were but a few minutes less than two hours, and curiosity is becoming greater and greater as to what they could have been doing all that time.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algue with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wuz when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be sp'iled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never forgit ef I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a-hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves perticklar on, for they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That wuz enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wuz gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 300 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wuz Jim a-comin lickety split. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wuz comin after us wuz like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let em go for all they wuz wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wuz fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wuz comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wus.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forward as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there for a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wuz in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wuz that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wuz, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wuz dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wuz killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hundred pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let themselves out on a spurt that wuz chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wuz, and so wuz Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wuz up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wuz ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

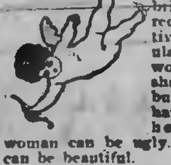
"Mandy wuz in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wuz only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all those golden sovereigns for so much paint?"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.



The little god of love turns away from a sickly sallow, nervous, head-achey, backachey, lifeless woman. Every woman should have the beauty, vivacity, and vigor of perfect health. The bright glow of health, bright eyes, clear skin, red lips are more attractive than any mere regularity of feature. A woman can't change the shape of her features but any woman may have the beauty of health. No healthy woman can be ugly. No sickly woman can be beautiful.

Regularity of the functions of the distinctly feminine organism is the first essential to womanly happiness, comfort and beauty.

Miss Laura Brooks, of Clinch, Hancock Co., Tenn., writes: "I thank God for such remedies as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' for myself and friends honestly believe that had it not been for these wonderful medicines I would today be in my grave. I am sure that I could not have lived many days in the condition I was in at the time I first consulted you. I was only praying to die and be free from pain. I was simply a shadow and we had tried almost everything, when, through a friend, I was advised to write to you, which I did, thinking all the while that it was only foolishness to think that such a case as mine could be cured. But I do not think so to-day. After the first week's treatment just as you prescribed, I felt like another woman and I hardly believed that such could be, when the first period was passed without pain. I continued the treatment until I had used about seven bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' and some of the 'Discovery,' and now I am a well woman. I would have given any amount, if I had it, just for the rest it has already given me—rest from pain. I never know when the periods are coming on now, as I am free from pain, and during the time I feel just as well as at any time, and am never confined to my room as I once was. I can eat anything I want and can work at any kind of work—something I could never do till this summer. Everybody who knows me thinks it wonderful that I am not sick any more. I thank God for this friend of woman, this blessed 'Favorite Prescription.' The very name sounds sweet to me. I am causing many of my friends to use it and all are improving. I can never tell you how I thank you, dear Doctor, for your kind advice and good, fatherly letters to me."

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

A GENERAL ELECTION

The Ontario Legislature is Likely to be Dissolved Immediately.

AN APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE.

The Ontario Premier Said to be Contemplating a Big Move.

Should the First Bye Election Go Again
the Go Against the Government, lution Will Follow Immediately
they Will Go the Country on Thei cord.

Special to the Times.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—There is every reason to believe that the Hon. Mr. Hardy contemplates an early dissolution of the House and an appeal to the people. The matter will be decided in a few days. Should the first of the bye-elections go against the Government, dissolution will follow at once, and the Government will go to the country on their record. It is thought, with the great boom in business that now exists, together with the popular policy of the Government on the saw log question, that the Government has a fair prospect of being sustained.

A prominent politician, who has the ear of the Premier, told the Times representative to-day that the Government had several good trump cards up its sleeve which would be played at the proper time with effect.

There is one thing certain, the Government will never face the House with a majority of four or five, as at present. There is now three vacancies in the House—West Huron, South Ontario and West Elgin, with North Waterloo on the horizon.

Hon. Mr. Ross, it is said, favors bringing on all four elections simultaneously, in order to weaken the hands of the Conservatives, as it were, as the Liberals have plenty of good speakers and the Opposition have not. Besides, the power and influence of the Ottawa Government will be used with effect. It will be a life and death struggle.

The situation, briefly, is as follows :—

Some of the Cabinet are in favor of an immediate appeal to the people.

Others favor trying results in one of the vacant constituencies. If the Government is sustained in the first bye-election, the others will probably go with the Government. If the first is lost dissolution will follow at once.

As far as the Times can gather from those who are in a position to know around the Legislature Chambers, the province will be in the throes of another general election before the snow flies.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future time. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. No wonder the Twentieth Kansas volunteers have invariably swept the Filipinos before them. Their battlecry is the Kansas university football yell of "Rock chalk! Jayhawk! K. S. U.!"—St. Louis Republic.

THE CYNIC.

All of us are very clever in finding excuses for not working more.

The most sensible woman will "put on" a little before a preacher.

A man is not really prominent until he has officiated at three prominent funerals.

Some women who never work for anything else will work like slaves for a church.

An old maid dearly loves to watch a quarrel between a husband and wife to see how it comes out.

If a man truly loves his wife, he is very apt to become confidential and tell her a lot of stories on the other fellows.

In talking it is well to know that people will not remember what you are saying unless they can use it against you.

A man always rises in his own estimation when he gets on familiar terms with a person of whom he once stood in awe.

There probably never was a woman too good to try to pass her children off as under age when traveling on the railroad.—Atchison Globe.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Peacocks are reliable weather prophets. Before a storm the gaudy birds become restless and clamorous.

The green woodpecker is said to laugh his "Ya-ha-ha" in different, more liquid tones when rain is coming, and especially gifted persons claim his cry really changes to "rain, rain, rain!"

In Dorsetshire, England, they foretell storms by the flight of the rooks. When they are pitch falling or playing at tumbling, diving and wheeling in the air, they say a storm is due.

Sea fowl are very clever in foretelling a storm. To a sailor bad weather means wind, and to a landsman it means rain, but the screaming of the water birds usually foretells a change of some sort for the worse in the prevailing weather.

SISTERLY CITIES.

Minneapolis has lost a dam, but then the town was never worth one.—St. Paul Dispatch.

What is being done for art in Chicago is not much. What is being done for art by Chicago is infinitely less.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

If the New York gas war keeps on at its present rate of progress, consumers will soon get the stuff for nothing, with a chromo and a pound of tea thrown in.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

New Yorkers are talking of having a self propelling fire engine. Come up this way, neighbors, and see what the metropolis of Connecticut can show you in that line. You're years behind us.—Hartford Courant.

FOUL TIPS.

For Sale—One baseball team. Answers to the name of "Giants." Any offer will be accepted.—New York Herald.

The ex-pride of Von der Ahe haven't as yet had their batting eyes forwarded from St. Louis.—Cleveland Leader.

As in previous years, the Washington team, as a matter o' strict courtesy, will be known as a [illegible] club.—Chicago Record.

ABANDON THEIR TRIP.

Seven Hundred Indignant Chicagoans Refuse to Visit Paris Exposition.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Indignation over the outcome of the Dreyfus trial has caused a party of over 700 Chicagoans who were going to the Fair in a body to abandon their trip. Louis Halle, who is the treasurer of the party and who since the scheme was inaugurated a year ago has been receiving weekly remittances from those who proposed going, to-day issued notices to the members to call at his office and get their money. Immediately after the verdict in the Dreyfus trial, Mr. Halle commenced receiving letters from members of the party saying that under no circumstances would they visit France. So many of these letters were received that a meeting of the Executive Committee was called, and it was deemed advisable to call the meeting off.

A Meeting of Protest.

Washington, D.C. Sept. 13.—About a thousand persons attended a mass meeting at the Masonic Temple last night to protest against the verdict of the Rennes court martial in the Dreyfus case. The speakers included all creeds, Hebrews, Protestant and Catholic. After a number of addresses the meeting adopted a set of resolutions affirming belief in the innocence of Dreyfus, condemning the proceedings of the court martial and pledging those present to use every lawful means to prevent the co-operation of the United States in the Paris Exposition.

Storm In a Teacup.

Berlin, Sept. 13.—The German Government organs have been quick to issue a warning against the proposal to boycott the Paris Exhibition. "Germany has no occasion to take the lead in this matter," says The Cologne Gazette. "She is going to leave this to other States which, perhaps, would not considerable that Germany, of all powers, should adopt a hostile attitude towards France in this matter."

Geheimrath Lewald, a member of the German Exhibition commission, says: "What has the Exhibition to do with politics? Its sole object is commercial. I am convinced the whole movement is only a storm in a teacup."

The Prevalence of Appendicitis.

Surgeons admit that 75 per cent of all cases of appendicitis will recover without operation, but claim that 98 per cent could be saved by operating promptly on every case as soon as discovered. This discloses a debate of great significance, for physicians are disinclined to turn all cases to the surgeon. Morris has estimated that there are 200,000 new cases of appendicitis discovered each year in the United States. If this is true and the surgeons are right, 46,000 of them would be ruthlessly sacrificed under medical treatment. But physicians assert (and I wish I knew whether truly or not) that autopsies upon subjects that have died from other diseases than appendicitis show old inflammatory processes about the appendix in one-third of the cases, just as old tuberculous cicatrices are found in the lungs where tuberculosis has never been suspected. In other words, one-third of all coming to the autopsy table and by inference a large proportion of the population have got well spontaneously from an unsuspected trouble which would have subjected them to a life endangering operation had they fallen into the hands of a surgeon of sufficient skill to make the diagnosis.

When surgeons extol the skill necessary to make diagnosis in doubtful cases, physicians retort that these are the cases in which diagnosis would better not be made. Obviously the subject has not crystallized and is in process of evolution, but even the laity clamor for an operation when there is recognized tumor and poisoning from pus absorption.

SUBLIME IMPRUDENCE!

A Yankee Lawyer Calls Upon McKinley to Interfere in South Africa.

TWISTING THE LION'S TAIL.

A Little Abuse of Great Britain Thrown in as a Relish to Tailwister.

W. Bourke Cockran, the Democratic Politician, Writes an Open Letter to President McKinley About the Transvaal—A Danger Now Threatening the Peace of the World.

New York, Sept. 13.—Ex-Congressman W. Bourke Cockran has written the following open letter to President McKinley about the Transvaal:

You will, I am sure, excuse this invasion of your holiday, when I explain that its object is to evoke the exercise of a power which Providence seems to have placed in your hands with special reference to a danger now threatening the peace of the world. It can hardly be questioned that a proffer of friendly mediation by you would suffice to delay, if not to prevent, the threatened invasion of the Transvaal.

If this Government be justified in exerting military force to restore order at the other side of the globe, surely it should exert every moral force to preserve order at half the distance.

A recourse to arms, which might result in kindling a fearfully destructive conflagaration throughout Christendom, on such questions as those at issue between Great Britain and the Boer Republic, would be an injury to civilized society, which all the the force of civilization should combine to resist.

An Impudent Attitude

The assertion at the point of the bayonet by one power of a right to control or prescribe the conditions governing the electoral franchise in another country admitted to be indepeneent, would be an act of "criminal aggression," the enormity of which has been described in clear, vigorous and scathing terms by the present English Colonia Secretary.

You cannot be indifferent to the fact that when Mr. Chamberlain denounced as indefensible any suggestion of interference by the British Government in the purely domestic affairs of the Transvaal, the relations between this country and England were strained over the Venezuelan boundary, while now that these relations have become cordial, the same statemen feels emboldened to trample upon his professions, if not to violate his principles.

Twisting the Lion's Tail.

An Anglo-American alliance can hardly be a force for the maintenance of justice and the spread of civilization, and its advocates contend, if England's foreign policy be marked by respect for justice while the two countries are estranged, and by wanton acts of aggression while their relations are cordial. It is not extravagant or unreasonable to insist that any country seeking allince, formal or tacit, with the United States must show some semblance of regard for the moral law, at least during the period of courtship.

If there be other and sounder reasons than than those assigned by the press for the attitude of the British Goverment in South Africa, its position will be strengthened by a disclosure of them.

Friendly but Urgent

tender of your good offices would undoubtedly evoke a full and complete statement of the grounds on which the peace and integrity of the Transvaal are threatened. Such a statement would be a powerful obstacle to the hostilities, for it would enable the civilized world to form a judgment on the merits of controversy, and in all probability that judgment would impose itself on both disputants. Public opinion is a force which in these days no nation can disregard.

Allow me to add these suggestions are offered solely from a regard for the welfare of humanity and the true glory of our Fag, which, I hope, will remain forever inseparable.

Max O'Rell's Appeal.

London, Sept. 18.—While the papers are full of letters from individuals and several firms announcing their withdrawal from the Paris Exhibition, and urging the Government to do likewise there is no intention upon the part of the British Government of taking any such step. It seems also unlikely that the present agitation will result in any great withdrawal of British exhibits.

M. Max O'Rell, Paul Blouet, has written a letter to The Daily Chronicle saying that a public expression of sympathy will go against Dreyfus, adding "For God's sake use your influence to stop it. But for the universal sympathy shown for Dreyfus whom I, personally, believe to be innocent, in England and Germany, he would have been acquitted. It is a terrible thing to say, but I say it and am not afraid of contradiction."

Objects to Imperialism.

Bremen, Sept. 13.—The Weser Zeitung says that Mr. Louis Lange, jr., jr., United States Consul in Bremen, has resigned his post because of his disapproval of what he characterizes as the "Imperialistic policy of the McKinley Administration," which he has attacked in his Chicago newspaper, Die Abendpost, a Lutheran weekly.

Applications for Space Still Pouring in and no One Wants to Withdraw

Ottawa, Sept 13.—There is no truth in the report that the Commissioners to the Paris Exposition, who are meeting here to-day to arrange about space and other matters, have been notified that certain applicants for space have refused to exhibit on account of the Dreyfus affair.

Mr. Jardine, the Commissioner for Ontario, and Mr. W. D. Scott, the Commissioner for the country west of Ontario, were seen to-day, and gave the story a most unqualified denial. They stated that the time for application for space had expired on June 30, yet applications were still coming in at the rate of about 27 a day, and it was to consider these among other things, that they were meeting to-day.

All applications for space pass through the hands of the secretary of the Commission and he states that no one had declined to exhibit for the reason mentioned or for any other reason. The applications, he said, were pouring in daily.

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

It Dulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same manner, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or val-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or friend bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 3,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phœnicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

THE ROYAL BOX.

The present czar is the only Romanoff without talent for music. His father was an excellent soloist on the cornet.

The queen of England and the czar of Russia own beautiful typewriters of white enamel and gold with keys of ivory. The queen regent of Spain is said to use one for her correspondence.

When the Princess of Wales was in Rome a few weeks ago, she passed incognito as "Mrs. Smith." Under this excellent disguise of names she and her daughters dined at a restaurant, taking their turn at being served and having a good time generally.

Kaiser Wilhelm has purchased the castle of Lichtenburg, near Leutzelstein, in Alsace, as a companion property to his chateau of Urville in Lorraine. He will spend a part of each year in these places, thus keeping on the work of Germanizing the conquered provinces.

Verdict as Rendered.

"Gentlemen of the jury," asked the clerk of the court, "have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman. "The verdict of the jury is that the lawyers have mixed this case up so that we don't know anything at all about it."—Philadelphia North American.

WILLING TO PAY FOR IT.

What Uncle Bill Wanted the Newspaper Publisher to Do.

A number of newspaper men were exchanging reminiscences a few days ago in a Court street inn. One of them, by the way, was an ex-publisher—that is to say, he once owned and edited a paper in the upper section of the state. One of his subscribers was William Makepeace Thackeray Willington, whose neighbors called him "Uncle Bill" to save time and labor.

"One day Uncle Bill walked into my office," said the former publisher. "He placed his whip in a corner and removed his hat. He asked if I was the editor. I pleaded guilty. 'Shake,' said he. 'I am glad to know ye. When I was a young feller, I used to do some writin myself.'

"Uncle Bill lapsed into silence and did some solid thinking for several minutes. Then he resumed the conversation. He said he liked the appearance of The Banner of Freedom mighty well and hoped it was not only bringing me fame, but money also. Naturally my bosom swelled with pride. The old man said he had only a few minutes to spare, and, before leaving, he wished to ask a favor. I supposed that he was about to spring a little poem which he had dashed off all by himself, but that wasn't the case. Uncle Bill said:

"'My son, I want to ask you a special favor. My eyes are not as strong as they were, and I would like to have you print my copy of the paper in a type two or three sizes larger than you use in the regular edition. Now, mind, I don't want you to do this for nothin. I'm willin to pay for it. Here's the money, and if that isn't enough let me know when my subscription is due again and I'll pay what's owin.'

"The old man dove his right hand into his pocket, fished out a silver half dollar and planked it on my table, saying: 'There's the money. If that isn't enough to cover the extree expense, let me know when I call in next spring, and I'll make it good. I'm willin to pay for any little favors.' Before I could explain the impossibility of his scheme he jumped into his buggy and started off for Deep Hollow."

RAILROAD TIES.

It is proposed to construct a railway in French Guinea.

Khartum will be reached by the railroad by November next, barring accidents. The railroad is now 50 miles south of the Atbara river.

The original capital of the Pennsylvania railroad was $250,000. The system on its fifty-third birthday represented an investment of $900,000,000. Last year it carried 71,000,000 passengers.

An "improvement" introduced by the Great Eastern railway, England, consists in widening the cars to the limit of safety in order to allow six passengers to wedge themselves into one seat.

When a person is down in the world, an ounce of help is better than a pound of preaching.—Bulwer.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frasier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

England has eight "Little Minister" companies.

"The Belle of New York" has registered its four hundredth performance at the Shaftesbury in London.

John Kernell will star next season in a new comedy, "The Crooked Mr. Straight," a satire of the family physician.

Emperor William is to have a play produced. It remains to be seen whether his pen is mightier than his sword.

Three dramatists are on the list of the 40 French immortals, Anatole France, Francois Coppee and Henri Lavedan.

Miss Janette Steer, an English actress, appeared with success lately at a Birmingham theater in the role of Hamlet.

General Lew Wallace says the dramatization of his book, "Ben-Hur," will be produced only in Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago.

A Pittsburg minister lately invited by public advertisement the management, company and patrons of a city theater to visit his church during Sunday services.

English players are less hesitant than Americans to appeal to the public when impoverished. The latest example is Jolly Nash, the one time leading music hall singer.

In a play projected for production in New York the author tries to hold the mirror up to truth by making the villains in the piece lawyers, policemen and court officers.

Mme. Patti now earns about $80,000 a year, but has made as much as $350,000. Melba's income when fully engaged is $150,000, and Sarah Bernhardt has for years averaged $70,000.

Miss Nethersole's next season will begin early in October and will be specially interesting for the reason that she will for a time abandon her repertory and appear in one play, Clyde Fitch's "Sapho," which he is now preparing for her from Alphonse Daudet's novel.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface. Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable—but an entity of our prosaic nineteenth century. It is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and with perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Mesmaine Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim adjoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16 80 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Sept., through our agent there, Tom Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorised me to place a small amount of this stock at 3½cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 600 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.60 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3½ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

An Runaway.

Mr. Pat Hogan's horse, which was attached to a democrat, took fright yesterday in Ashburnham, and ran away, demolishing the wagon against a post on Elizabeth street. Fortunately there was no one in the rig at the time.

The Burglary Case.

The case of the Queen against Bert Kindred, who was charge with burglarizing the office of the McAllister Milling Company, came before P. M. Edmison. A number of witnesses were examined, and the case was adjourned until Saturday next. The friends of the young man predict an honorable acquittal.

Six Months in the Mercer.

At the police court yesterday a woman named Mary Irwin was charged with vagrancy. She pleaded not guilty but evidence was taken and she was convicted and sentenced to six months in the Mercer. Mr. R. S. Davidson, J.P., occupied the Magistrate's chair. The woman has served a six months term in gaol here, having been sent up last February. She was arrested yesterday afternoon at a hotel and locked up despite a vigorous resistance.

The Provincial Oil and Varnish Company, which was to have established its headquarters in Peterborough, but could not make satisfactory arrangements with the Town Council for a site, has purchased the Blackwell Oil and Varnish Company of Toronto, and will carry on business in the Queen City. The new company is largely composed of local men. Mr. T. H. Hamilton, who is one of the stockholders, is covering this territory, and began his duties on Monday morning last.

Orange Demonstration.

At a meeting of Col. Sanderson L. O. L. No. 321, Downer's Corners, Otonabee, held a few days ago, it was decided to have the usual annual entertainment on Tuesday, Nov. 7th (the 5th falling on Saturday.) Further particulars will be announced latter.

A STORY FOR BOYS.

How Four Boys, Including the Editor of This G. F. J. Rose in the World.

Fifty years ago a Norwegian widow named Nelson and her little son, aged 6 years, got off the cars at Chicago, but she was in debt, having been forced to borrow $35 from friends at home for the expenses of the long journey to America. This week her son, Hon. Knute Nelson, ex-governor of Minnesota, Senator of the United States—will be off for a visit to his native town, which he hasn't seen since he left it, with his small hand in that of his mother's, way back in the spring of 1849. —Dixon (Ill.) Telegraph.

•• •• ••

He was a young chap of some 16 summers and he walked into the only store in Manson, Iowa, and spent his last 15 cents for cheese and crackers. His trouser barely reached his ankles, while the entirety of his earthly possessions were tied up in a handkerchief. He seated himself on the top of a sugar barrel and munched at his food, which must be his breakfasts, dinners and suppers till work could be found. "Any work around here?" he asked. "What can you do?" enquired a roughly dressed farmer. "Anything to keep busy," answered the lad. He secured a job. This was on March 12, 1872. That boy's name was Leslie M. Shaw, and to day he is Governor of Iowa and one of the richest men of the State.—Rochelle (Ill) Herald.

•• •• ••

"Twenty-five years ago," says the Kansas City Journal, "a Russian lad of 16 years arrived in Hays City, Kas., direct from his native land. He was dressed in a sheepskin coat, and his first act on stepping from the train was to light his pipe with a flint and steel. Last week Hays City inaugurated a fine electric light system of which this Russian lad is the sole proprietor.

•• •• ••

Several years ago a lad arrived in Peterborough, bringing with him, in his upper vest pocket, a roll of chewing gum and under his arm a pair of stilts. With these he began to rise in the world and soon became a high stepper. Later on when Ed. Brown started the roller rink, he got on a skate and cut quite a figure in society, so much so that when boating became the fashionable and popular pastime of the Peterborough people he purchased a yacht and made quite a swell. During the period in which the Scott Act was in force the subject of this hair-raising, blood-curdling and soul-stirring sketch took to drink, and might have been seen almost any hot, sultry afternoon in McCallum's back parlor lined up in front of the buttermilk tank endeavoring to cool off. He became so fond of the beverage that Tom Stothard agreed to supply him with fresh buttermilk direct from the cow. This had the effect of developing great brain power, and was the indirect means of landing him where he is to-day, the editor in chief of this G. F. J. This is a true story, if you doubt it you can ask Billy Bunton.

Visiting the Cookeries.

About fifty of our citizens accepted the invitation given them by the Rathbun Co. to visit their cookeries on Rice Lake on Tuesday, and everyone enjoyed the round trip of about sixty miles by steamer. They left here by morning train for Hastings, where the boat was in waiting soon after their arrival. The first "cookery" they visited was on the Otonabee river, some distance from Jubilee Point, and here the company landed and satisfied their craving appetites with a bountiful repast furnished by the good cooks on the "floating cabin." After the company had gone aboard the steamer plied across the lake to Gore's Landing and then made the return trip to Hastings. The excursionists arrived home at an early hour a night, all feeling better from the pleasant day's outing.

Don't Believe in Debt.

The people of our sister town of Lindsay are determined to keep out of debt as far as possible, and voted down the by-law to provide $20,000 for street improvements and $7,000 for a new fire hall. We believe there is such a thing as going too fast in the way of spending money a so-called "permanent" improvements. We have an example of this in Peterborough, when comparatively new plank sidewalks have been torn up to make way for the new granolithic fad. Between sewers on streets which were not come into general use in a lifetime, and the new side pavements, Peterborough will be a heavily taxed community for the next quarter of a century. High taxation is about the worst sort of a wet blanket that any town can struggle with.

High Wages.

Mr. T. Cavanagh, agent for W. and A. McArthur, lumbermen, whose limits are located at Beaverton, Georgian Bay, was in Ottawa yesterday hiring men. He secured eighty and leaves to-night with the gang. Mr. Cavanagh stated to an Ottawa Journal reporter that the lumber trade will be brisk this season. The men working on the limits will get high pay. Most of them will receive $35 per month, where as last year $18 was considered a good price. High wages have to be given as men are rather scarce. A large number of men who went shantying last year have this year gone to the Northwest for harvesting.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Baseball.

All lovers of baseball should make it a point to be present at the ball grounds, Ashburnham, to-morrow, when the last baseball match of the season will be played. The object of the match is to give a benefit to Dan McCabe, who has done so much for this class of sport in Peterborough. Two teams of first class players will be put on the field. Admission only 15c, ladies 10c.

Rugby.

The management of the local team has completed arrangements for a game with the Port Hope town team on Saturday, Sept. 23rd.

The Kennel.

A large number of entries are being received for the dog show on the 27th, from outside points. Already entries have been made from Belleville, Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto.

Messrs. Ormond and Walsh, druggists, have donated a silver medal to the show.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

To-day is the opening of the season for shooting partridge, snipe, woodcock, plover, and black and grey squirrels; and it is also the beginning of the close season for brook trout

Every business man is of the opinion that trade will be brighter this fall than it was last fall, and that payments will be more promptly made.

Don't forget the benefit game of baseball to Dan McCabe on tomorrow afternoon.

A meeting of the Clerks' Association will be held in the National Hotel this evening at eight o'clock. The clerks in the clothing, boots and shoes, and hat and cap stores are particularly requested to attend.

A second meeting of the the ladies auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. will be held on Sept. 28th, to complete arrangements for the season's work.

A freight train at the northern division of the Grand Trunk separated, and the two sections became separated. The front section being stopped, the second ran into the first, killing a brakesman named Tait, who was a resident of Lindsay.

The fifth annual convention of the Epworth League of Peterborough district, will be held in the Methodist church, Millbrook, on Tuesday Sept. 26th. There will be both afternoon and evening sessions. The executive committee will meet at 10.30 a.m. A splendid programme has been prepared.

WHAT THE PEOPLE ARE SAYING

That the Battalion should take a look at itself in a mirror.

That there will be a hot contest in January for seats in the Council.

That the town cannot afford to keep the present engineering staff.

That "what we have we hold," is the motto of the council, which applies to those who ask for refunds of Police Court fines.

That there will be a big boom in trade this fall.

That Dan McCabe will have a "bumper" benefit to morrow.

THE STOCK YARDS AGAIN

A Petition Presented to the Town Trust Commissioners on the Matter.

A petition was laid before the commissioners of the Town Trust, signed by a number of the residents of the South ward, praying that Mr. H. P. Kennedy be given three months notice to remove his cattle yards from the site now occupied by them.

Mr. Kennedy also laid his side of the question before the board by letter: in which he invited inspection of the yards, and defied any unprejudiced person to say that his premises were offensive. The nuisance, if any, emanated from the cattle yards belonging to the railways. Mr. Kennedy pointed out further that if he was required to vacate the site at present utilized by him for the cattle, the result would be simply turned into the C.P.R. and Grand Trunk yards, which would not abate any nuisance which might have been caused.

The Commissioners laid both the petition and the letter on the table for further consideration.

Under the conditions of the lease if this lot is required for a manufacturing site, Mr. Kennedy can be moved from the premises on 24 hours notice, but the Commissioners state they do not think they would be justified in asking Mr. Kennedy to move his yards, when he is paying a fair rental and it has not been proven to their satisfaction that any nuisance is being caused.

A SHOCKING ACCIDENT.

Further Details of the Horrible Accident in Emily Township.

Correspondence to the Times.

A most heartrending and fatal accident occurred on Wednesday, 6th inst, at a threshing on the farm of Mrs. Costello, one mile east of Downeyville in which Michael Powers, aged 19, son of widow Powers, of Lindsay, lost his life. Having threshed out one mow the threshers were preparing to thrash out the other, when Mr. Powers, taking a short cut across walked on the feed board, slipped, and before any of his horrified spectators could get to his assistance, the machine had drawn one leg in inch by inch till it reached the knee when the heel of the boot stopped the cylinder and saved the young man from going through the machine. Only for the presence of mind of Mr. Michael Morgan, owner of the machine, in turning off the steam, it would undoubtedly have been instant death. Willing hands carried the unfortunate man into the house, where every thing that human power could do was done for him. Mr. Edward Costello had Rev Father Scanlon on the scene 15 minutes after the accident, just in time to administer the last rites of the church. Dr's. McAlpine and Jeffers of Lindsay, were immediately brought but a short time after they arrived death relieved the young man's sufferings. The funeral took place at 4 p.m. Thursday, to the Roman Catholic church, thence to St. Luke's cemetery, where the remains were interred. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family. This sad event has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood.

ATTEND THE CENTRAL FAIR.

With Apologies to the Ottawa Citizen, by the Times' Agricultural Editor.

We are going to Peterborough, we're going to see the show;
We only have it once a year, and so we'll have to go.
For we want to see the town, and we want to see the fair,
And the folks from all the neighborhood are going to be there.

We are going in by wagons and we're going in by rail.
While some of us will take a boat, and up the river sail;
and the cows and pigs and sheep,
the cows and pigs and sheep,
And we're thinking of them day and night till we can hardly sleep.

And we want to see the fellows that are just in from the farm,
With peacock feathers in their hats
and girls on either arm:
And we want to see the fellow that goes up in the ballon;
Oh, we're glad the time is coming, for it can't get here too soon.

We'll hear the bands all playing and we'll hear the fakirs yell;
And buy up all the peanuts that they've got in town to sell:
We'll ride out on the street cars (?)
though it costs us half a dime,
For we never mind expenses when we're out upon a time.

The city folks may sile at us, but mighty well they know,
If it was not for the farmer folks they wouldn't stand much show.
So we'll walk right through them proudly, with our heads high in the air,
For we're going in to Peterborough to attend the Central Fair.

Floods Destroy Human Life.

Berlin, Sept. 14.—The floods are causing widespread damage in Southern Germany and Austria. The northerly part of Zwickau is inundated. Owing to the undermining of the railway bridge over the Isen between Muehdorf and Rorbach a train fell into the river and five persons were killed. All the tributaries of the Danube in Austria are flooded. A bridge over the Schwarza, at Payerbach, colapsed and ten persons were carried away.

Wealth Buys a Title.

Hats for Fall

The shapes of hats this fall are a little more graceful, and the colors a little more beatuiful than they have ever been.

Particular men will find our Special Stiff Hat the acme of style, and our "Fedora" shape very graceful and becoming. An air of advanced season distinguishes them.

THE DEADLY COAL GAS

Mrs. and Miss Armstrong Found Dead in Bed on Saturday.

SLEPT WITH THE GAS ON.

The Husband Horrified to Find His Wife and Sister Lifeless.

Mr. Armstrong Who Has Been So Terribly Afflicted Was a Former Resident of Lindsay Where He Was Engaged in Insurance Business—No Inquest Necessary.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—A very sad double tragedy took place this morning at the residence of Harry J. Fidler, 175 Logan avenue, when two ladies, Mrs. J. C. Armstrong and Miss Lottie Armstrong lost their lives by asphyxiation. About 9.30 o'clock last night Mr. Armstrong accompanied by his wife and sister, arrived unexpectedly at Mr. Fidler's from Sault Ste. Marie, having come down by steamer and rail. Miss Armstrong had lost considerable sleep on the two previous nights, and after partaking of a slight repast she asked to be allowed to retire at once. Mrs. Fidler asked her to leave the gas burning low, as Mrs. Armstrong, it was arranged, would share the bed with her later on. An hour after Miss Armstrong went to bed her sister-in-law followed her.

"Be sure not to blow out the gas," said Mrs. Fidler, jocularly, to Mrs. Armstrong, who is Mr. Fidler's sister. The back room in which they were to sleep was not large, and Mr. Armstrong suggested that the window be left open a little, but this was not done. Finally all retired, Mrs. and Miss Armstrong in the back room, Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Fidler's eldest son in the middle room.

A Gruesome Find.

Early this morning Mrs. Fidler arose and began the task of preparing breakfast. [illegible] arose and [illegible] back room, where a [illegible] dead. [illegible] and informed Mrs. Fidler, who was temporarily stunned by the news. Mr. Armstrong had been so stricken at the sight of his dead wife that he had not looked at his sister, but the horror was increased a minute later when he found that she, too, was dead. The gas tap was seen to be partly open and the room was full of gas.

The household was soon aroused, and Drs. Frazer, Rowan, Brown and Macdonald were summoned, but their presence availed nothing.

It was Miss Armstrong's intention to take this morning's Canadian Pacific train to Peterborough, and to go thence by stage to Warsaw, where her mother and other friends now are.

Mr. Armstrong, who has been so terribly afflicted, has lived in Lindsay, but has been much in Sault Ste. Marie, engaged as a builder.

There will be no inquest.

Mrs. Armstrong, the victim of the sad accident chronicled in the above despatch, was a Lindsay lady, being the daughter of Mr. Fidler, of that town. Her husband, Mr. J. C. Armstrong was a former resident of Lindsay, where he was engaged in the insurance business. Mrs. and Miss Armstrong were known in this district, and the news of their lamentable death will be received with sincere sorrow here.

MUST BE TRAINED TO SHOOT

London Globe Speaks of a Great Necessity for the Canadian Militia.

Mondon. Sept. 16.—Referring to a Halifax despatch regarding the strengthening of the Esquimault garrison The Globe says it is gratifying that it is beginning to receive appreciation as a strategical position, which it entitles "one of those Imperial coigns of vantage which have suffered from systematic neglect." The paper also says that a couple of years ago a British engineering officer was sent to Esquimault to investigate the place, and adding that it was evident he saw the futility of strengthening the fortifications unless manned by thoroughly efficient troops.

"The Canadian militia," says The Globe, "is as useful as such a force is for local purposes, but only unless they receive sufficient training in gunnery to be trusted with the custody of such a valuable strategical Position."

British Minister Here.

Hon. Jesse Collings, the British under-secretary-of-state, passed through Peterborough on Friday last to Toronto. He alighted for a few moments at the station, while the train stopped. In reply to the question from the Times as to whether he thought war was probable over the Transvaal difficulty, he said that England was fully prepared for evantualities, and would enforce her demands. He was delighted with what he had seen of Canada, and his visit to Montreal and Ottawa was very enjoyable. He would stay a day or two in Toronto, and then go to the Falls before returning to England.

NO LACK OF RECRUITS FOR THE BRITISH ARMY.

Young Englishmen Want to Fight and Crowds of Them Surround the Recruiting Offices Eager for the Queen's Shilling.

SITUATION REGARDED AS ALMOST HOPELESS.

Pretoria Advices Say the Reply Is Uncompromising and That Preparations for a Staunch Resistence is Proceeding Continuously.

London, Sept. 16.—Information from all sources points to the extreme gravity of the Transvaal situation. Pretoria advices, emanating from a Boer source, says that the reply is uncompromising and that preparation for a staunch resistance is proceeding continuously. Another Pretoria special dated September 15, says the situation is now regarde as all but hopeless unless Great Britain retreats from her position.

The despatch adds:

The Governments of the two republics consider that the Transvaal should refuse to concede anything further, and it is believed the Boers will have the support of all the Afrikanders throughout South Africa."

It is now definitely stated that the Orange Free State has agreed to unite with the Transvaal in resisting the British claims.

Little Hope Held Out.

Out of all the numerous channels through which South African news reaches London, not one gives the faintest hope that the Boer reply will be favorable, the majority taking the view that war is extremely probable. The Boer representatives here and on the continent reiterate that the British Government is allowing itself to be influenced by those wanting British dominion over the whole of South Africa and that conviction of the truth of this is so firmly rooted in the minds of the Burghers that it is impossible to hope that they will accept the constantly proffered advice regarding settling the matter on Great Britain's present terms.

A RUSH OF RECRUITS.

London, Sept. 16.—Speculation regarding the events that would immediately precede and follow hostilities with the Transvaal continues to occupy public attention. It appears that no declaration of war is necessary. The process, according to good authority, would be a proclamation by the British High Commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner, stating that the convention of London was annulled and that Queen Victoria had resumed the government of the country known as the South African Republic. The general commanding the British expeditionary force would then be instructed to occupy the Transvaal and hold it until a fresh Government should be established. When the country should be pacific a Commission, doubtless including all classes of the inhabitants of the Transvaal, would be appointed to draft a new constitution.

Strength of the Boers.

That all this is easier said than done is quite palpable, even to the most enthusiastic Englishman. Estimates of the strength of the Boers widely diverge. Mr. John Morley referred to them as able to put an army of 50,000 is all they could muster. As a matter of fact, their strength entirely depends upon the assistance they receive from the Orange Free State and the natives, which it is impossible to guage. The present atmosphere of war has enormously stimulated army recruiting. Crowds of young men surround the offices and daily large batches take the Queen's shilling.

THE FORECAST CONFIRMED.

Cape Town, Sept. 16.—Further telegrams from Pretoria to-day confirm the forecast of the reply of the Transvaal to Great Britain, which does not accept the demand of the British Government as a whole. Great excitement prevails at Pretoria over the consequences which may ensue. The young Boers are asking to be led into the field immediately. It is impossible to predict what will be the situation after the delivery of the reply in London. The feeling here is that it will be impossible for the Imperial Government, and undignified upon its part, to again enter upon any interchange of argument. The Royal Munster regiment has arrived here.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS START.

London, Sept. 16.—The correspondents of leading London papers started for South Africa to-day, including Messrs. Melton Prior, G. W. Stevens, and other well-known newspapermen. Gen Sir George Stewart White, V.C., former quarter-master general, whose appointment to the Natal command was gazetted last night, also sails to-day with his staff.

At the Manchester peace meeting last night the Right Hon. Leonard Henry Courtney, Liberal, formerly Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, read a letter received from Mr. Herbert Spencer, protesting against the idea that the national honor would be enchanced by attacking a weak nation, lamenting that age and ill-health prevents him from aiding the peace movement, declaring it is undeniable that the Jameson raid was an attempt to usurp the Transvaal, and asserting that what the Uitlanders bullets failed to do they now hoped to do by votes. Continuing the letter read: "It is sad to see our Government backing those whose avowed policy is expansion, which, less politely expressed, means aggression, and for which there is a still less polite word, which is readily guessed."

BUYING MULES.

New York, Sept. 16.—A special to the Journal and Advertiser from Washington says:

The War Department has been approached by representatives of the British Government, who want to buy at once one thousand mules for shipment to South Africa for army use. The Englishmen will buy the mules in open market in the South and ship them to South Africa as fast as they can be obtained.

Great Britain has also recently let in this country several large contracts for army wagons for South Africa.

The War Department has found England buying army equipment of almost every kind in this country of late and in several instances has had to wait for the work being done for England to be finished before work for this Government could be undertaken.

OFF TO THE WAR.

London, Sept. 16.—The first battalion of the Northumberland Fusiliers 980 strong, and detachments of the army service corps and ordnance corps sailed in the steamer Gaul at 2 p.m. today from Southampton, en route to Natal, amid great enthusiasm.

The men appeared to-day to be in splendid condition, and openly anxious for fighting. The Fusiliers went direct from Aldershot, but many of the officers of the regiment and numbers of special service officers started from London, receiving at Waterloo station an enthusiastic send-off from the large crowd present. The porter cried: "All aboard for Pretoria!" which was taken up by the crowd uproariously.

General Sir George Stewart White, V.C., former Quartermaster-General, who is going to command troops in Natal sails with his staff on the Dunottar Castle, from Plymouth. He left London subsequent to the main body of the officers.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

Resident of Waterloo County Charged with Embezzling $400.

Galt, Sept. 16.—The most sensational event in Galt this year was the sudden arrest yesterday afternoon of Mr. A. W. Falconer, principal of of the Victoria school on the charge of stealing or unlawfully converting to his own use the sum of $400 belonging to Mrs. Agnes Wray.

The plaintiff states that in 1898 Mr. Falconer got the money from her to invest in Dominion Building and Loan Stock. On Thursday her solicitor visited Toronto and discovered that no such entry had been made in the company's books. As soon as she learned this Mrs. Wray had a warrant issued. Falconer was arrested while teaching his class. The prisoner has been in financial difficulties for some time and a week ago made an assignment. His liabilities are said to be about $7,000, with practically no assets. He carried on a real estate and insurance business. Falconer was arraigned last night before the magistrate and bail was fixed at $4,000. It is reported that more charges of the same nature will be brought against the prisoner within a day or two.

Falconer is one of the best known educationalists in Waterloo county, and, being an earnest church worker, ardent supporter of the Y. M. C. A., and a temperance advocate, he enjoyed the confidence of the community in a very large measure.

CROWN MAY PROSECUTE.

Chancellor Boyd, At Osgoode Hall, Grants a Change of Venue.

From present appearances it would seem that the Crown intends to prosecute Wm. Holden and George E. Pare in connection with the robbery of the Napanee branch of the Dominion Bank of $33,000. To-day at Osgoode Hall Chancellor Boyd granted an application of the Crown through McCarthy & Co. for a change of venue for the trial of Pare and Holden from Napanee to Cobourg. Both prisoners consented to the motion.

The Chancellor made another order for the removal of Holden, Pare and Jack Roach from Napanee to Cobourg, as Crown witnesses in the Ponton case, which will begin next week. The change will be made on Sunday night.

KILLED BY A CAT.

Horrible Death of an Infant on Queen Street West.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—A month old baby, the child of Mr. White, who keeps a restaurant at 457 Queen street west, met with a horrible death last night. It had been put to sleep and left alone in the room without any thought of danger. During the mother's absence, however, a stray cat, which had been prowling about the neighborhood, got into the room in some way, and when Mrs. White returned she found that it had attacked the baby and literally eaten a portion of its face. A piece of the nose and cheek was entirely gone. Dr. Stewart was called in, but nothing could be done for the infant, which died in a short time.

STRIKERS WERE DEFEATED.

Statement That the Employees Returned to Work Without an Increase.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—The following despatch came over the C P R telegraph wire from Montreal this morning and may be taken as an authorative statement from the company:

The statement that the strikers in the Canadian Pacific freight sheds at Owen Sound had been taken back to work on the understanding that after working fifteen days they would receive the increased wages asked for, is absolutely incorrect. Some of those whose places had not been filled were allowed to resume work, but only at the same rate of pay and on the same conditions as before the strike. The strike is ended and all the men required are working at the same rate of pay and on the same conditions as before.

"Doctor" Did Not Appear.

St. Thomas, Sept. 16.—Dr. James, who was summoned to appear at the Police Court on a charge of practicing medicine without a license, didn't put in an appearance. It is said he left the city and Magistrate Davidson issued a warrant for his arrest. The case was adjourned in the meantime to ascertain if James can be located. Crown Attorney Donahue was present, but no one appeared for the defendant.

Another Attack on Molson's.

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—The head office of the Molsons Bank in this city has received advices from Victoriaville, Que., to the effect that burglars attempted to blow open the safe in the branch there last night and succeeded in smashing the safe door and the office window, but did not succeed in getting any money. The employes of the bank on guard were not hurt.

That statement of Dewey's that he considers the Filipinos more capable of self-government than the Cubans ought to set a lot of American electors thinking.

NEWS FROM ALL OVER

Auriferous Quartz Has Been Discovered in the Isle of Man.

GERMAN LINE TO THE EAST.

The Enormously Increasing Trade Has Made This Necessary.

Remarkable Occurrence on Board a Pleasure Boat—A Man Feels the Sensation of Awaking in His Coffin—Tonsorial Crisis in a Yorkshire Town Relieved at Last.

London, Sept. 16.—Discoveries of gold in small quantities in the Isle of Man have often been reported, and in some cases workings have been undertaken but they have not proved remunerative. It is now, however, stated definitely that gold-bearing quartz has been found in the island, and that crushing tests have yielded one ounce of the precious metal to the ton of quartz. Two gentlemen who have had experience in Australia have secured mining rights, and are taking steps to develop the discovery, which was made some little time ago, but has up to now been kept a profound secret.

GERMAN LINE TO THE EAST.

Berlin, Sept. 16.—On October 4, the North German Lloyds will inaugurate their new fortnightly line to the far East, which has become necessary owing to the enormously increasing trade of Germany with China and Japan. The new steamers which are to be employed on this service have been built exclusively in German yards. It should be noticed also that ports will now be touched by German steamers which have hitherto only been visited by British vessels—for example, Penang. Hitherto Shanghai was the last port visited by the German mail steamers, but the voyage will now be extended to Nagasaki, Kobe and Yokohama.

A WHALE IN A YACHT.

London, Sept. 16.—A party of visitors who were sailing a pleasure yacht near Ilfracombe met with an extraordinary adventure. Suddenly a large fish jumped on board, and with its tail smashed all the vessel's gear and broke the main boom. One gentleman received a blow on the face which blackened his eye. The fish then thrust its nose into the cabin and remained quiet, and the party made for the shore with all speed. The unwelcome intruder proved to be a whale, a thrasher 10 feet long and weighing half a ton. It is now being exhibited in Ilfracombe.

JUST IN TIME.

Buenos Ayres, Sept. 16.—Juan Gonzalez aged fifty, living at Tres Esquinas, Montevideo, and the father of a large family, was certified to be dead by the doctor who examined him, and preparations were made for his funeral in the Buceo cemetery.

On the following day, just as the undertaker's man was closing the coffin the corpse sat up, and in a surprised voice asked, "What is this? What are you going to do with me?"

The people present were so frightened that some ran out of the house, while many ladies fainted, but the man who was to screw the coffin down had the worst fright of all, and dropped the lid on the floor in astonishment. Gonzalez was at once put to bed and another medical man was sent for, who pronounced his case to be a curious instance of catalepsy.

RETURNED TO PENNY SHAVES.

Leeds, Eng. 16.—The barber trade in the working-class districts of Leeds resolved some time ago to abandon penny shaves, on the ground that the pay was not sufficent to keep body and soul alive. Members of the trade, it was said worked seventy-two and a half and even eighty hours a week. The change to 1 1-2d. has not answered. At a conference of the barbers a majority of twenty-five to eight have declared to return to the penny shave, though not without a strong protest. One barber produced a roll signed by sixty-three customers who would pay 1 1-2d. Still it was declared that some Leeds men would let their beards grow til spring rather than pay 1 1-2d. for shaving.

He Didn't See.

"I never can tell a story and have it come out all right," said a lady to the Times the other day. "I thought I had such a good one the other day. I was walking along George street and heard one street boy say to another, 'Oh, you go buy 10 cents' worth of potash.' 'What for?' says No. 2. 'For 10 cents,' yelled the other, and ran off giggling.

"I thought it was pretty good, and I'd try in on Charlie at supper. But when I told him to go buy 10 cents' worth of potash he never said a word, and I knew another joke had fallen flat and kept still. But the worst was later. He put on his hat and vanished after supper, coming back in a minute with a little parcel, that he handed to me.

"'What's that?' asked I.

"'Why, the potash you said you wanted,' answered he, and I nearly had hysterics on the spot. Did you ever hear anything so perfectly awful? I won't ever try to get off anything funny again."

And the little woman sighed as she walked away having paid for a year's subscription to this great family journal, that everybody reads.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 18, 1899

OUR OPINION OF THE DREYFUS CASE.

A Correspondent writes The Times to know what we think of the Dreyfus case. We are happy to say to our friend that this great family journal considers that the French Republic has lost the confidence of the civilised world by its re-conviction of Captain Dreyfus. This is not a matter of opinion; it is the crystalized and irrevocable judgment of intelligent and considerate people throughout the world. Justice has been banished from her own temple by a professed government of the people, and debauchery and demoralization run riot in the inner sanctuary of French Government. Such a nation proclaiming its contempt for justice in the face of the advanced civilization of the age, must alienate the sympathy of good people in every country. There now, how will that do?

THE BATTALION TROUBLE.

The 57th Battalion is having its own troubles. For over a year the organization has not been in a fit condition to appear in public on account of the lack of men. On Tuesday night the officers made a grand rally for a march out, drumming up every available man. The result was most disappointing, only about forty appearing. The two bands, in fact, were, to use a Hibernicism, the "biggest half" of the battalion. It is said the trouble lies with the commanding officer, who of course does not think so. It is certainly not the fault of the general or company officers, who are popular and efficent. It is to be deplored that so fine regiment, which has so long been a credit to Peterborough, should be allowed to go to pieces thus. There is something radically wrong somewhere, and it is the duty of the commanding officer to get at the bottom of it without delay.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Good morning.

•• •• ••

No sooner has the Dreyfus case been concluded than the announcement is made that the Fenton trial will shortly begin. The next great event that will stir the world will probably be that Garvin is going to make a speech.

•• •• ••

If they feel the European continent tip up a bit one of these days, they will know that our esteemed fellow-townsman, Mr. Frank Matthews, has landed in Liverpool.

•• •• ••

Should the Dreyfus case get France by the ears it might do something that would enable it to hear both sides.

•• •• ••

It's wonderful to compare the speed with which a vacation passes to the pace that marks a boy's going back to school.

•• •• ••

The Boers threaten to get even with the British troops in case of war by poisoning the water supply in the wells. That is sufficiently fiendish, but the British could retaliate. They might use some extra copies of the Review or Examiner as gun wadding.

•• •• ••

It is now reported that the youngest Gould boy is an admirer of a dancer in the Casino ballet. If this turns out as the other Gould affairs did, it will be possible to give a first-rate family vaudeville performance.

THE SPICE OF LIFE.

An Ohio girl laughed four hours without stopping. The name of the youth who wore the golf suit is not given.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Twentieth Kansas regiment is a vindication of the scholar in war. It contains more students than any other regiment under the flag.—Kansas City Star.

If the peace conference does any good in disarming Europe, it might be a good idea to try disarming the man who carries a gun in the United States.—Pittsburg Times.

Seats on the New York Stock Exchange sell at $40,000 nowadays. Few are more costly, but Uncle Sam's expenses at the seat of war to date have not been small.—Boston Globe.

It is stated that the English language is growing faster than any other, past or present. This is because those who use it have a great deal to say in this world.—Philadelphia Times.

An eastern prophet is quite positive that we are booked for a "long, hot, dry summer." Perhaps this seer is a first cousin to the fellow who predicted an early spring.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Chelsea woman who planted some peanuts this spring and mourned because the expected plants did not result has just learned that peanut growers usually select nuts for planting that have not been roasted.—Washington Post.

One way of distinguishing diamonds from glass and paste is to touch them with the tongue. The diamond feels much the colder. None of the editors of our acquaintance are complaining of chilblains on their tongues.—Minneapolis Times.

"With secret initiatory exercises," says a Chicago dispatch, "the well known suffrage leaders, Susan B. Anthony and the Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, have been made members of the American Woman's Relief corps, No. 81." Was there a sidesaddle on the goat?—Buffalo Express.

Giovanni Cattetta came to this country on the Bretagne with a hump on his back. Some superstitious custom house officials touched it, obeying the old adage that to touch a hump brings good luck. They were rewarded, for the hump was artificial and filled with $1,000 worth of jewelry.—Boston Traveler.

PERT PERSONALS.

May Irwin is billed to play Juliet. Probably she will do it by the pound.—St. Louis Republic.

It is Russell Sage's desire to die rich—and be buried as cheaply as possible.—Washington Post.

Joe Choate is a happy man. The British are "seeing" his jokes.—Philadelphia North American.

If money talks, John D. Rockefeller can hold the floor the balance of his natural life.—Nashville American.

There will be no Hobson business when General Funston comes home. There is a Mrs. Funston.—Kansas City Star.

The kaiser has been called a "poodle prince" and can't do anything but treat the aspersion with dogged indifference.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Capitalist Hetty Green and Capitalist Russell Sage are standing closely together against all newfangled Scottish doctrines.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Congressman Elect Roberts only hears an occasional Mauser bullet from the firing line now, but wait until he gets into range at Washington.—San Francisco Chronicle.

William Winter sarcastically says that "Maude Adams as Juliet bleats her part." This has aroused such a protest that probably William feels sheepish himself.—Boston Advertiser.

We understand that Dr. Mary Walker is opposed to woman's rights. She believes only she and other sensible men can understand the blessed privileges of the ballot.—Louisville Post.

General Merritt says he hugs himself because he is an American citizen. A man who would rob his wife of that marital right is scarcely worthy to be called an American citizen.—Denver Post.

THE ROYAL BOX.

Queen Victoria is preparing for publication another volume of her journal.

The oldest queen of Europe now is the queen of Hanover, who was 81 years old in April. Queen Victoria comes next, being 80, while the ex-Empress Eugenie is 73.

Duke Karl Theodor of Bavaria, the oculist and brother of the late empress of Austria and of the ex-queen of Naples, has just celebrated his silver wedding at the castle of Tegernsee.

The Duke of Connaught is less than six years younger than the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, to whom he now becomes heir presumptive. The latter was born on Aug. 6, 1844, and the Duke of Connaught on May 1, 1850.

The Prince of Wales is said to have determined to give up yachting. His ventures in the sport have never resulted well, and he has already withdrawn from two yacht clubs with which he has been long identified.

POLITICAL QUIPS.

What a congressman learns during his first term he doesn't always tell when seeking a second.—Chicago News.

Every candidate for speaker this side of the Hudson river appears to be running as a western man.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The dinner has come to be a big factor in politics—not that men must eat, but that men must talk.—Cascade (Ia.) Courier.

When he insists that only honest men should hold office, Governor Roosevelt forgets how many offices there are.—Detroit News.

A majority of our politicians have small knowledge of the science which they assume to represent and in which they presume to teach their fellow citizens.—Atlanta Journal.

RAILWAY RUMBLES.

The Siberian railway has already 80 refrigerator cars for taking butter to the Russian cities.

On Chinese railways the highest paid employees are the telegraph operators, who get $17.50 per month.

At the railway stations in Russia books are kept in which passengers may enter any complaint they may wish to make.

Railway whistles inflict torture on so many people that the efforts abroad to check the plague will be followed with interest. Austria has introduced a system of dumb signaling to start and stop the trains. Belgium is trying compressed air whistles instead of steam, and Germany experiments with horns.

Poor, helpless, hopeless, sick, suffering, miserable woman. Sick because she doesn't know any better. Sick because she doesn't really know why. Sick because the organs that make her a woman are not properly performing their functions and so are sending nerve messages with aches and pains and distress all over her quivering body.

Nine-tenths of women's sickness comes from disorder of these special organs. The symptoms are various—the cause the same. Headache, backache, nervousness, wakefulness, neuralgia and fifty other troubles of women may nearly always be traced directly to feminine weakness or disease. When the most important organism of a woman's body is disordered her whole physical and mental system is upset. The only way to find comfort is to cure the real cause of the misery. Local doctors in general practice are frequently so hurried and rushed that they treat the symptom and not the disease. They give a woman medicine for headache when the headache is due to the reflex action of the uterine nerves. They may give her good medicine but for the wrong disease. Thousands of women, after years of discouragement, have written to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and now thank him for their renewed health and happiness. For over thirty years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute. It was over thirty years ago that he began to use his "Favorite Prescription" in his practice.

It is a medicine devised to cure one certain kind of diseases—female diseases. It brings ease and comfort and sleep. It restores perfect health. It fills out cheek-hollows, brightens the eyes, puts vim and snap into the whole body. It is sold by most dealers in medicine. Don't take anything else. Nothing else is "the same"—nothing else is "as good." Get what you ask for. Patronize honest dealers.

Following are extracts from the report of Capt. T. H. Trethewey, M.E., upon the Company's properties which are now being vigorously developed, and upon which will be installed the 6 drill compressor plant, which was purchased from the Canadian Rand Drill Co. on the 5th inst. for immediate delivery.

MR. TRETHEWEY SAYS:

"The vein on these properties is well defined, and, where exposed by the workings near the line between the Western Hill and Virginia, averages fully 18 ft. in width. The gangue consists of a somewhat crushed and iron-stained quartz, sparingly mine alized with Galena, Copper and Iron Pyrites, with here and there small amount of Blend and Graphite disseminated throug out

"On the Western Hill, a shaft has been sunk to a depth of 27 ft. on the foot wall, and the ledge has been exposed cross-cut to its full width; it here appears to be divided into hanging and foot wall portions by a seam of somewhat decomp clay material which appears to dip toward the hanging wall, cutting out the leaner and allowing the richer portions of the v to increase with depth."

"Samples taken in this shaft, across an 8 ft. face lying next to the foot wall, gave an average return of $7.00 in Gold $1.35 in Silver, making a total of $8.35 per ton, while the balance of the vein gave a return of $2.00 in Gold and 70 cents in Silver, making a total of $2.70 per ton for a width of ten feet, so that $5.25 may be considered a fair average for the full width of the vein."

"The conclusion I have drawn after a thorough examination and study of the facts as here presented is, that judicious devel opment should locate extensive bodies of pay ore, as even if only the 8 ft. next to the foot wall be extracted, the values con tinuing in depth as there is no reason why they should not, while leaner portions may be encountered they could be left in th mine to support the walls, and you would still have a proposition of unlimited tonnage well worthy of judicious expenditur in exposing its resources."

"The general conditions, elevation, etc., are so favorable that mining operations can be carried on for many years by sim tunnelling into the mountain and following the trend of the vein, and hundreds of thousands of tons of ore can readily be ma available without the use of hoisting or pumping machinery."

"Situated as these claims are about 2000 ft. above the bank of the Okanagan River, with a natural outlet for Ærial or oth tramway, and only about three miles from the "Black Hawk" Claim, which is within easy reach of the river, the question of transportation of ore from the mine to the mill could be easily arranged."

"With an electric plant established at Dog Falls, which is possibly ten miles distant, ample power could be generated at a nominal cost for all purposes, and by adopting the most modern methods of mining, milling and concentrating, together with an unlimited supply of ore, the cost of production should be reduced to a minimum."

"If the present promising assurances are borne out, the opening up of the three levels could develope at least a three years' supply of ore for a plant of large capacity, and I would strongly recommend the erection and installation of a mill of not less than from 250 to 300 tons daily capacity."

"With cheap power an unlimited supply of ore and a plant capable of handling the quantity I have suggested, the cost o mining and milling ought not to exceed from $1.50 to $2.00 per ton, and under capable management it should be kept within th lower limits."

"Thus even if the lowest values, $3.05 be taken as a basis of calculation and allowing that 85 p. c. of this can be saved, it would yield a profit of $1.09 for each ton of ore treated, but I am of opinion that much higher values may be confidently expected, and if there is a profit winner in the camp, all conditions considered, this one can be conscientiously recommended to the investing public."

At the next Annual Meeting of the Company, which will be held on the 6th day of November next, several of Montreal's most prominent business men will accept Directorship.

MICK DAVITT'S IDEAS

He Says English Sympathy is Due to the Wealth and Race of Dreyfus.

QUOTES MAYBRICK CASE

And Points Out the Inconsistencies of the United States.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes Protests Against "the First English Gentleman" as Chairman of British Committee Associating With Liars, Forgers and Assassins.

London, Sept. 15.—The papers are still flooded with Dreyfus letters, the most remarkable to-day being from Mr. Michael Davitt, the Irish Nationalist member of Parliament, and the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, editor of the Methodist Times.

Mr. Davitt says English sympathy for the prisoner is entirely due to the fact that Dreyfus is a rich Jew instead of a poor one, and to the desire to injure a rival nation. "No absolutely innocent man," continues Mr. Davitt, "ever was convicted twice in any civilized country by a jury of his peers. No civilized country could produce a conspiracy of men educated, cultured and responsible like the French military chiefs, to stoop to the baseness and infamy of plotting to ruin an insignificant petty officer. The supposition is too monstrous to be entertained by any mind unwarped by anti-French feeling. What have you to say about Florence Maybrick? Your Lord Chief Justice is said to believe her innocent. So do many eminent Englishmen and tens of thousands of Americans. Why has she not had a second trial? If innocent she has suffered ten times more than Dreyfus could suffer. She is an American citizen, abandoned more or less by the press and public opinion of her country, which can repeat the London [illegible] insults to France for the alleged miscarriage of justice, but which do not have a word of protest or of reproach against England, which refuses to listen even to the petitions of [illegible] addressed to their unfortunate countrywoman's British gaolers."

The Rev. Mr. Hugh Price Hughes, in the Methodist Times, protests against "the first of English gentlemen, the Prince of Wales, being allowed to chairman of the British committee, to associate with liars, forgers and assassins."

COLLINS PRAISES CANADA.

British Under Secretary of State Astonished

Toronto, Sept. 15.—The Hon. Jesse Collings, the Under Secretary of State for the British Home Office, who registered at the Queen's Hotel last night, en route for Winnipeg, was found by the News this morning immersed in a big pile of correspondence which he was heroically trying to overtake. Mr. Collings, who became very prominent during the recent period of agricultural depression by his famous "three acres and a cow" project, is a very affable and kindly old gentleman, whose merry, sparkling eyes betoken a keen and at the same time a humorous temperament.

Though he has been in Canada but a few days and has yet to see the great West, Mr. Collings said that he was simply astonished at the condition of things in this country. The country far exceeded his expectations, and was a revelation to him of the great possibilities that were ahead of it. The magnitude and resources of the Dominion were not half appreciated in England although of late Canadian affairs had been steadily gaining in prominence in the Mother Country.

He declined to discuss the Transvaal question, as he was now out of touch with the Government's policy in that regard, and people in Canada probably knew as much as he did about it.

In regard to the Dreyfus case he deplored, in common with every other Englishman, the shameful miscarriage of justice, but he thought that it would not lead to any international complications. It was merely a matter for individual opinion, and the Government would take no action in the matter.

Mr. Collings [illegible] decided as to his plans, but will probably go to Niagara Falls to-morrow, and then on to Winnipeg, returning to New York in time for the international yacht races.

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

Reciprocal.

"Yes, sir," remarked the amiable man, [illegible] here and drop his h's once in awhile."

"Yes," answered the man who has been to Epsom downs, "and he likes see us go over there and drop our [illegible]."

French Provincial Journals Think Dreyfus Should Be Freed.

Major Carriere Represented as Promising Freedom to Captain Dreyfus—The French Press Virulent Over Proposed Boycott of the Coming Exposition.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 15.—Paul E. Ayers, of Anderson, S. C., has cabled a challenge to Comte Ferdinand Walsin Esterhazy to fight a duel in behalf of Capt. Dreyfus. Ayer is a son of the late Gen. Ayer, of the Confederate army, and was a sergeant in the First South Carolina Volunteers during the Spanish war.

Insist Upon a Pardon.

Paris, Sept. 15.—The Matin this morning asserts that the Cabinet has agreed to pardon Dreyfus and that the decree will be signed September 19. Many of the provincial papers publish articles insisting on the granting of a pardon. The Figaro says that many officers of the army are asking that Dreyfus be pardoned.

The Boycott.

Paris, Sept. 15.—The French press takes up in a virulent manner the proposal of foreigners to boycott the Exhibition on account of the Dreyfus verdict, considering it insolent, meddlesome and uncalled for.

It does not appear likely that the boycott will assume serious proportions.

United States' Commissioners Offered Aguinaldo Cash and Privileges

BUT HE REFUSED THEM.

Absolute Independence Demanded for People of the Philippines.

Aguinaldo Offered a Bonus of More Than $5,000 a Year, Which He Declined—He Insisted Upon Immediate Self-Government—Negotiations Broken Off.

New York, Sept. 15.—A special to the world from Ithaca, N. Y., says:

Your correspondent is able to say on authority that the Schurman Peace Commission offered every possible inducement short of absolute self-government to Aguinaldo and his followers. Aguinaldo was promised, as the price for the restoration of peace in the Tagolas tribe a bonus of more than $5,000 a year while the Tagolas remained peaceful. He was told that he could choose men from his tribe for the minor municipal offices. The commission went so far as to promise Aguinaldo the moral support of the United States Government—it such were needed, to make his leadership of the Tagolas thoroughly secure.

With all these inducements, tempting as they must have been, Aguinaldo, as the recognised head of the insurgent movement, declined to yield. He insisted upon immediate self-government, and as his insistence was so firm as to make an agreement impossible, the American commissioners ceased negotiations.

Mr. Schurman favors giving the tribes the largest possible measure of home rule at the earliest moment. He thought the several tribes could administer their local affairs, elect their municipal officers, establish courts and penal institutions, etc., but he did not believe it possible to allow the natives to participate in the general government.

"How could they govern the islands, in view of the heterogenity and multiplicity of the tribes?" he asked.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sung it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Junior Yukon Judge.

Collingwood, Sept. 15.—It is stated authoritatively here that John Birnie, barrister, is to be appointed junior judge in the Yukon. His brother-in-law, W. H. P. Clement, recently appointed public administrator in the Yukon, has just returned from visiting him, and it is understood Mr. Clement will recommend his appointment. Mr. Birnie has for years been the most prominent worker in this district for the Liberal party, and in election campaigns his services have been in constant demand. He was returning officer for North Simcoe for the plebiscite. He is a successful lawyer and is at present the Town Solicitor.

The Prevalence of Appendicitis.

Surgeons admit that 75 per cent of all cases of appendicitis will recover without operation, but claim that 98 per cent could be saved by operating promptly on every case as soon as discovered. This discloses a debate of great significance, for physicians are disinclined to turn all cases to the surgeon. Morris has estimated that there are 200,000 new cases of appendicitis discovered each year in the United States. If this is true and the surgeons are right, 46,000 of them would be ruthlessly sacrificed under medical treatment. But physicians assert (and I wish I knew whether truly or not) that autopsies upon subjects that have died from other diseases than appendicitis show old inflammatory processes about the appendix in one third of the cases, just as old tuberculous cicatrices are found in the lungs where tuberculosis has never been suspected. In other words, one-third of all coming to the autopsy table and by inference a large proportion of the population have got well spontaneously from an unsuspected trouble which would have subjected them to a life endangering operation had they fallen into the hands of a surgeon of sufficient skill to make the diagnosis

When surgeons extol the skill necessary to make diagnosis in doubtful cases, physicians retort that these are the cases in which diagnosis would better not be made. Obviously the subject has not crystallized and is in process of evolution, but even the laity clamor for an operation when there is recognized tumor and poisoning from pus absorption.

Fall of an Aerolite.

Tiffin, O., Sept. 15.—A large aerolite fell near Sycamore, south of here, yesterday. It weighed over 5800 pounds and burst into many pieces. The light of the meteor was blinding and the roar in passing through the air was deafening. It made the earth tremble when it struck.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algue with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist es good natured and happy now as she wuz when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer er somethin will be spilled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never fergit ef I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven er eight head uv fine hosses, and one winter we had a pair uv four-year-olds that we prided ourselves perticler on, for they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalise us, and I tell you they wusn't a funeral persession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week er ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen er more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wus gittin anxious, though she wusn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 300 yards from the upper turn, and there wus no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wus Jim a-comin lickety spit. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wus comin after us wus like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let 'em go for all they wuz wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we was fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wus comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wus.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wusn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there for a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wus in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wus, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wus dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wus killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hundred pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wus, and so wus Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wus up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wus ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it was only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uff a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous He looked at a picture and asked what was the price The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all these golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying! I thought it was pictures. [illegible] a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

A FAKIR IS NABBED

Rev. Dr. Evans, "The Nazarene," to be Tried at St. Thomas.

RELIGIOUS PRESCRIPTION

"Ask the Lord to Bless This Medicine as You Take It."

Arrested by Detective MacPherson at the Instigation of the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons, Charged With Illegally Practising Medicine.

Toronto, Sept. 15,—Detective Macpherson, who has been employed by the College of Physicians and Surgeons since the death of Mr. Thomas Wasson, has been working on a case which was brought to the attention of registrar some time ago. It was claimed that Rev. J. G. Evans, M.D., whose card bears the following, "The Nazarene," Medical Mission, Jerico, Syria, was illegally practising medicine. Mr. Macpherson served papers on the doctor in St. Thomas this morning and the case will be tried before Mr. J. B Davidson, police magistrate.

The Prescription.

In filling prescriptions it is alleged that the doctor issued the following scriptural injunctions, which were printed on the top of the prescription paper:

And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God and to heal the sick.—St. Soke ix., 2.

And heal the sick that are therein, and say onto them, The Kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.—St. Luke x., 9.

Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received freely give.—St. Matthew x., 8.

Following the written statement is the following printed in bold type: "Ask the Lord to bless this as you take it."

The Parachute Didn't Open.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Sept. 15.—Prof. Dennis, an aeronaut, attempted a parachute drop at the Fair here yesterday, but met with an accident that is likely to cost him his life. Dennis ascended successfully until about 200 feet from the ground when the balloon burst. The parachute failed to open until within a few feet of the earth, against which the aeronaut was dashed with scarcely diminished velocity. It is feared that his injuries will prove fatal.

Will be Pardoned?

Paris, Sept. 15.—Major Carrier, who was the Government prosecuter at the Rennes court martial, is represented as declaring that Dreyfus will certainly not be again degraded, and that it is certain he will be pardoned very shortly. The League of the Rights of Man is sending circulars to its adherents urging them to continue their fight in behalf of Dreyfus until victory is obtained.

Hats for Fall

The shapes of hats this fall are a little more graceful, and the colors a little more beatuiful than they have ever been.

Particular men will find our Special Stiff Hat the acme of style, and our "Fedora" shape very graceful and becoming. An air of advanced season distinguishes them.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

It Dulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same manner, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or val-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or friend bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 3,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phoenicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

Waking and Sleeping.

"When a person says he is going to retire," said the statesman's small son, "he means he is going to sleep."

"No," was the answer. "Your father is going to retire from congress, my boy, and if he doesn't desire to lose his grip he will have to keep wider awake th. n ever."—Washington Star.

A man is not really prominent until he has officiated at three prominent funerals.

Some women who never work for anything else will work like slaves for a church.

An old maid dearly loves to watch a quarrel between a husband and wife to see how it comes out.

If a man truly loves his wife, he is very apt to become confidential and tell her a lot of stories on the other fellows.

In talking it is well to know that people will not remember what you are saying unless they can use it against you.

A man always rises in his own estimation when he gets on familiar terms with a person of whom he once stood in awe.

There probably never was a woman too good to try to pass her children off as under age when traveling on the railroad.—Atchison Globe.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Peacocks are reliable weather prophets. Before a storm the gaudy birds become restless and clamorous.

The green woodpecker is said to laugh his "Ya-ha-ha" in different, more liquid tones when rain is coming, and especially gifted persons claim his cry really changes to "rain, rain, rain!"

In Dorsetshire, England, they foretell storms by the flight of the rooks. When they are pitch falling or playing at tumbling, diving and wheeling in the air, they say a storm is due.

Sea fowl are very clever in foretelling a storm. To a sailor bad weather means wind, and to a landsman it means rain, but the screaming of the water birds usually foretells a change of some sort for the worse in the prevailing weather.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Memaine Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim ajoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16.80 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Tom. Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 3 cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.60 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3 cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

Burned With Oil.

On Thursday afternoon Mr. John McCann, of Lock street, who is employed at the hoist on the Trent canal just near the Little Lake, met with a painful accident. He was bending over the engine that runs the machine when the lubricator burst and a large quantity of oil heated to the temperature of steam flew out and struck him in the face, inflicting a very nasty burn. He was in agony for a time and the skin peeled off his face, even to his eyelids. For some time it was feared that his eyesight might be injured or even destroyed but last night there seemed no danger of that and the patient is considerably better, though still suffering much pain from the burns. Dr. Eastwood is in attendance.

A Heavy Loss.

Bobcaygeon Independent — Mr. Pratt, of Buffalo, who is fishing at Buckhorn, the guest of the Buckhorn House, had the misfortunate of losing his watch, chain and charm, valued at [illegible]. How it happened was simple, he was trolling at the time and his hook catching in a rock, the board on which the line wound, caught his chain and flipped it out together with the watch into the water. As the watch was given to him by his mother, every effort to Dear Bay, fifty feet from shore. Raking had been tried, but without avail. Mr. Pratt then came here on Tuesday for Mr. Junkin, the diver, and the yacht Pearl immediately took them all down to the place, taking in tow a crib from Buckhorn. The diver was down one hour and a half, but there was two feet of mud with rocks and grass, and having been raked the day before, all trace was lost. There are six in Mr. Pratt's party, who weight altogether 1,560 lbs. Mr. Pratt being the smallest, weighing 224 lbs.

May Pass Through Peterborough.

A troop train with British infantry to garrison the Esquimalt fortifications left Halifax Saturday afternoon. Hitherto the fortifications on the Pacific coast have been garrisoned by marines from the fleet. If the despatch is correct this will be the first time that British troops have passed through Ontario since the withdrawal of the Imperial forces nearly thirty years ago. If the train comes through Peterborough, some of the rising generation will see a detachment of British soldiers for the first time.

THE LUMBER POSITION.

Mr. Allan Gilmour's Remarks on the Lumber Outlook.

Mr. Allan Gilmour, one of the largest lumber operators in the province, recently told a press representative that the lumber trade, in common with all other trades, had improved, but that an especial boom in his business had been caused by the scarcity of lumber in the United States.

"The regulations prohibiting the exportation of logs has had a splendid effect on the lumbermen of the United States, who now realize more fully than ever what they have lost in having the forests of Canada closed to them. In addition to greatly increased demand for labor and in keeping the proceeds of the logs in this country, the regulation has had the effect of considerably increasing the prices. For instance, the worst class of lumber exported, box lumber, mill culls and dead culls, which last year could scarcely be given away, and which were quoted at $2 per thousand, can scarcely be obtained at $5 per thousand. In the higher grades the advance has not been so marked, but the price has gone up from $1.50 to $2 per thousand. There is very little lumber in the country left unsold, and the mills are all working." Mr Gilmour will remain in the town for some days.

A LAND OF FIBBERS.

Capt. John Martin Has a Poor Opinion of The Klondykers.

The Times recently received a letter from Capt. John Martin, formerly of Peterborough, who is now in the northern gold fields. Mr. Martin says that for cheerful, innocent, stupendous, monumental colossal liars the people of that country can't be beaten. It seems to be all a part of their country that you soon become an enormous, mastodonic liar. But the people are good, whole-souled, kind fellows withal, with hearts as big as their lies, who will put on a new bonnet and choker and come down to the boat and bid you good-bye, even if you haven't known them more than a couple of days.

"The scenery of that country it is impossible to tell about, even with the aid of the imaginations grown there. Even the liars have to stop when trying to tell about it, for they can't think big enough.

"Such marvelous scenery as passed us on our way defies the world to equal," he continued. "The Dardenelles do not touch it. Nothing on earth is any comparison. It surpasses anything I ever dreamed of. The whole trip was a panorama of beauty, except the voyage down, when I had to sleep with an African. Even hard lockers have nothing to say for the country but good."

Burleigh Falls Power—Transmission Assured.

Mr. Culverwell, the promoter and one of the owners of the Burleigh Falls power, went up to Lindsay on Friday and produced documentary evidence to the corpoartion that the financial arrangements have been made with a New York banking house for the completion of the Burleigh Falls-Lindsay-Peterborough-Lakefield transmission. The Canadians who will act upon the Board of Directors are Hon. Richard Harcourt, Provincial Treasurer, Toronto; James Kendry, M. P, President Auburn Power Company, Peterborough; R. J. McLaughlin, barrister, Lindsay, and F. F. Barrett, manufacturer, Dr. Edward Adams and J. Alex Culverwell, electrical and hydraulic broker and expert, Toronto. The plans of the power house and dam to be located in Perry's Gorge at the Falls, which were lately made by an hydraulic engineer of continental reputation, and which were shown to some of the Lindsay people, prove what Mr Culverwell has always maintained, viz., that the Burleigh power development will cost less proportionately than any power development on the continent. While in Lindsay he closed a power contract of $800 per year with a manufacturer, and received an increase of power contract from another manufacturer who has lately added to his plant.

On Thursday and Saturday the Knitting Works will sell a heavy all Wool 2 and 1 rib stocking in 6, 6½, 9, 9½ and 10, for 10c. per pair. The quality of this stocking is far above the usual bargain stocking as it is possible to imagine. We make them on our own electric power machines.

A Sample of Engineering.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—As a sample of the way our town engineering is managed—or I should say, mismanaged—I will point to the bridges which are being built on Dalhousie and Sherbrooke streets. The contractors for the foundation did their work satisfactorily, and of course left the filling in of the approaches and planking to the town.

Now what did our worthy engineering "department" (which has been established at heavy expense by the present council) do? Did they finish up one bridge and then tackle the other? Not a bit of it. They planked our bridge and finished the approach to the other! The result was that both streets remained blocked. Could anything be more absurd? I leave it to the taxpayers to think it out. We want fewer high-paid bosses in connection with our roads, and more practical, working men.

We get the harvest moon this month and it will be a month in which the evenings should be especially enjoyable. The new moon came on the 4th, and on the 19th it will be full. At that time it will be the "harvest moon," and will rise well to the north three evenings at about the same hour and make its trip over the heavens high up from the horizon, giving us light all night long. If the weather is fair at this time those amateur photographers who wish to try moonlight pictures will find no better time of year in which to experiment. Though winter evenings are more brilliant because of the radiation from the snow, they are not so well supplied with moonlight. During the periods of the harvest and the hunter's moon's, the light received from our beautiful satellite is greater than any other time of the year.

We notice that our esteemed contemporary, the Lindsay Post, occasionally makes a mistake of crediting articles to the Examiner that are taken from the Times In its Friday issue it gives our local contemporary credit for an article commenting on the defeat of the two money by-laws in Lindsay. The Times is in receipt of a circular letter from the Baker Heirs Association stating that a number of the heirs were supposed to be residing in Peterborough, and further stating that the association was formed for the purpose of gaining possession of lands in the United States valued at about $300,000,000, including the site on which the Centennial Exposition was held in Fairmont Park, Philadelphia, in 1876; 92,000 acres in North and South Carolina, coal mines in Pennsylvania and other valuable property which it is alleged belonged to Jacob Baker and which it is said to have leased for ninety-nine years. The teams were:

Sporting Editor of the Times.

Sir,—With reference to the Rugby match with the Irishmen I would like to give Manager McWilliams a few pointers about the men who are trainging for this great event.

A small man by the name of Bunt fus Bell (Norman) should be the first considered for the team. His running powers are something wonderful, and one who has seen him run could not help but exclaim, "My, what a little midget. His well padded legs seem to go like the paddle wheel of a steamer. But you will have to wake up and see a bear, Bunt, if you want to run up against the Irishmen.

Next we have his little brother Garnet. He is a plump little boy, too, but he needs to let his whiskers grow a little more as they serve as a kind of jaw protection. We believe that Garney has imported a new B. B. B. You will have to put that away, Garney, as it will make you sick and short winded.

Then there is (wee boy) sailing under the colors of Alexander Socrates Collins, now gentleman. Here is a fellow who ought to play with the Irishmen instead of against them. If he plays the latter way he will put the whole game on the rough, as the hardy sons of Erin will at once mistake him for one of their own when they hear his beautiful brogue. However, pull up you socks and "show how fields were won," and you will have a little chance for the team.

There are many other promising youths who should be given a chance to show their powers. Now, for instance, Sir Israel himself is a noble creature and with a little more wind and less coal dust (Rathbun dust), he ought to give a good account of himself. What is the matter with Sam Reid? If he can follow the horse-hide so well let him try the pig skin. He has just as good wind as his assist-ant "Mac" and would be a corker when he gets going. There are many more whom I would like to put a good word in for, but fearing to impose too much on your generosity My dear Mr. Editor, I will bring my little advice to a close.

Thanking you in anticipation of a space in your valuable paper.

Yours truly,
A TWICE-AS-OLD SPORT.

Bert. Kindred Acquitted.

Bert Kindred, who was arrested on Wednesday evening charged with robbery, was acquitted by Police Magistrate Edmison on Saturday. No evidence was produced connecting the lad with the crime. Mr. Stone, who is the regular solicitor of the McAllister Milling Co., defended the accused. The young man retains his position with the company, which is ample proof of his innocence. The Times is more than pleased to be able to chronicle his honorable acquittal.

KRUGER REMAINS FIRM AND WON'T CLIMB DOWN.

The Full Text of His Reply to Chamberlain Issued, and His Language is Taken to Indicate a Firm, Unyielding Position.

DIPLOMATIC GAME CARRIED TO VERGE OF WAR.

Report That the Boers Have Made Arrangements for a Dutch Rising Throughout South Africa. British Cabinet Meets This Week to Discuss the Reply.

London, Sept. 18. — The Transvaal situation remains practically unchanged. The general apprehension in regard to the outcome was reflected by the decline in consols on the Stock Exchange, where although all stocks continued depressed, there was not the slightest approach of excitement.

The text of President Kruger's reply was issued by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, this afternoon, but it adds nothing of importance to the summary cabled to the Associated Press yesterday evening. The language in many places is taken to indicate a firm, unyielding position.

Boers Are Optimistic.

The reply, however, concludes: If her Majesty's Government is willing and feels able to make this decision, a joint commission as at first proposed by Mr. Chamberlain it would put an end to the present state of tension. Race hatred would decrease and die out and the prosperity and welfare of the South African republic and the whole of South Africa will be developed and furthered and fraternization between the different nationalities will cease.

An Early Coup.

The second edition of The Times contains a despatch from the Johannesburg which says:

"There is, I am informed, some early coup in contemplation. The quantities of compressed forage forwarded in the direction of the Natal border indicate some move on the part of the troops in that quarter. The Government is buying horses freely to-day."

The evening papers all indicate the seriousness of the crisis, but The St. James Gazette says:

Nothing in a Hurry.

"It need not be imagined that anything will be done on our side in a hurry. The Cabinet has first to reconsider and secondly to formulate fresh proposals. Therefore, those commentators on the crisis who assume that fighting will immediately commence are obviously a little previous. Of course, it is quite possible the Boers may begin hostilitiee, in which case our troops will have to defend British territory. But unless the Boers take the offensive the negotiations will be prolonged until the reinforcements now on their way to South Africa reach their destination."

What War Means.

Olive Schreiner (Mrs. Cronwright) contributes an eloquent cable letter on the situation to the Manchester Guardian. She says: "Let England clearly understand what war in South Africa means. The largest Empire the world has ever seen will hurl its full force against a small State, and about thirty thousand men, including lads of sixteen and old men of sixty, without a standing army or commissariat. The entire little people will have to resolve itself into an army, and their wives and daughters will prepare the bread and meat the farmers will put in their saddle bags when they go to meet the enemy. To-day the women of the Transvaal are demanding guns that they may take their part in the last stand We may crush the little people with the aid of Australians and Canadians, since the British Isles seem unable to crush them alone. We may take their land and lower the little flag of independence so dear to the Boer, but we shall have placed a stain upon our own that centuries will not wash out. Only the international speculator who, through persistent misrepresentations and by means of the press has wrought this evil, will gain and fill his already overloaded pockets with South African gold."

TEXT OF THE REPLY.

"The Government deeply regrets the withdrawal, as the Government understands it, of the invitation contained in the British despatch of August 23, and the substitution in place thereof of an entirely new proposal.

"The proposals, now fallen through, contained in the Transvaal despatches of August 19 and August 21, were elicited from this Government by suggestions made by the British diplomatic agent at Pretoria, Mr. Conyngham Greene to the Transvaal State Secretary, Mr. F. W. Reitz, suggestions which this Government acted upon in good faith, and after specially ascertaining whether they would be likely to prove acceptable to the British Government.

"This Government had by no means an intention to raise again needlessly the question of its political status, but acted with the sole object of endeavoring by the aid of the local British agent to put an end to the strained condition of affairs.

"This was done in the shape of a proposal which this Government thought, both as regards its spirit and form, to be so worded as, relying upon intimations to this Government, would satisfy her Majesty's Government. This Government saw a difficulty as to the acceptance of those proposals by the people and Legislature of the Transvaal, and also contemplated possible dangers connected therewith, but risked making them on account on sincere desire to secure peace, and because assured by Mr. Chamberlain that such proposals would not be deemed a refusal of his proposals, but would be settled on their merits.

"As regards the joint commission, the Transvaal adheres to the acceptance of the invitation thereupto given by her Majesty's Government, and cannot understand why such commission, which before was deemed necessary to explain the complicated details of the seven years' law, should now be deemed unnecessary, and why it should now, without such enquiry, be thought possible to declare it inadequate.

"Further there, must be misapprehension, if it is assumed that this Government was prepared to lay proposals for a five years' franchise and a quarter representation of the new population before the Volksraad for unconditional acceptance. As to the language, this Government never made any offer, such as is referred to, considering, as it did, such a measure both unnecessary and undesirable."

Every Republican Feels That the Sword Alone Can Unravel the Gordan Knot.

M. Paul de Cassagnac Argues That Another Napoleon is Needed to Overthrow the Republic and Redress the Numerous Abuses in France—The Article Causing the Greatest Excitement in Paris.

Paris, Sept. 18.—In his own paper, L'Autorite, and under his own signature, M. Paul de Cassagnac, the Bonapartist leader in the Chamber of Deputies, presents the following view of the situation in France:—

"A distinctive trait of the Republican party in this troublesome time is the fear of the sword. The sword is its nightmare. For every Republican feels that the sword alone can unravel the Gordan knot.

"In other words, in some manner or other, the army must interfere in the affairs of this unhappy country It is the liberator impatiently awaited In a word, the sword is Caesar. Public opinion is disgusted with the republic. It searches in every direction, and in every man who stands higher above the horizon than his fellows it expects to find a Caesar.

Caesar's Welcome.

"For this reason General Gallieni received a great ovation.

"For the same reason Major Marchand was welcomed in a triumphal manner.

"What could be more disproportioned that the idiotic, extravagnat reception prepared for Marchand, who only accomplished a most brilliant second-rate exploit?

"He could not have been more highly honored had he brought back the two lost provinces, Alsace and Lorraine, in his forage cap.

Cult of the Sword.

"But, believe me, the cult of the sword dominated everything, and in seeing Gallieni return and Marchand disembark, people asked themselves, insensibly, with out reflection, 'Is this the liberator?'

"One might say that the people hold the imperial mantle between febrile hands and scrutinize the passerby to see whether it would not be right to place it on his shoulders.

"And for an opposite reason just as the people rush out for the sword, just so much does the Republican party rush to fly from it.

Superbly Awkward.

"And it does it with a superb awkwardness which shows how lively are its apprehensions.

On the one hand Gallieni was forbidden to stay in Paris, although his presence was required on a commission of classification.

"On the other hand Major Marchand was ordered off to the solitary shores of Brittany. Elsewhere Captain Baratier was packed off to the provinces.

"That is to say, that they are treated as dangerous criminals, and our heroes are to be under police surveillance, just as if they were graduates from the penitentiary.

"The Republican party fears and hates the army because it sees that the soldiery is a menace to the disgraceful regime which prevails.

"The army, for its part, is beginning after two years of unheard of outrages to understand this condition.

"When it is thoroughly convinced of it the sword will leap from the scabbard of its own accord."

LABORI VISITS LONDON.

London, Sept. 18.—It is reported that Maitre Labori and Madame Dreyfus visited Folkstone, five miles from Dover, Saturday and engaged apartments where Madame Dreyfus and her children will dwell in the event of her husband's pardon. M. Labori is reported to have been much affected by the kindly expressions towards himself and Captain Dreyfus while at Folkestone.

STOLE A MAN'S WIFE.

A Provincial Land Surveyor in Trouble Up North.

Owen Sound, Sept. 18.—P. C. Herron left on Saturday night for Gorrie to bring back John D. McNab, a provincial land surveyor, who is charged with the abduction of a married woman, the wife of Geo. Perkins, a carpenter of this town. McNab and the woman left here about four months ago, and it is supposed, they spent the intervening time on the Manitoulin Island, though no trace of them could be found until quite recently, when they were located at Gorrie, and McNab was arrested on a warrant sworn out by the husband of the missing woman.

McNab had only completed a five year sentence in Kingston penitentiary for defrauding a young woman out of considerable property here. The Perkins woman left a family of four children. McNab will get a preliminary hearing on Tuesday morning.

It is said that the people of Toronto have cabled Dreyfus:—

"We hope for your pardon. If granted we extend cordial invitation to make your home in Toronto." Dreyfus is reputed to reply that he'd sooner go back to Devil's Island.

IS HAY TO BLAME?

For the Bad Grading of Our New Granolithic Sidewalks.

A HIT AT E. B. EDWARDS.

Ald. McWilliams Would Change the Method of Paying Our Town Solicitor.

Has the Town Been Robbed in the Sherbrooke and Dalhousie St. Bridges?—A Resolution Passed Providing for the Appointment of a New Engineer Should Circumstances Justify This Action.

The Council met in adjourned regular session last night.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

There were present Mayor Davis in the chair, and Ald. McWilliams, Sawers, Neil, E H D Hall, Langford, Denne, Corkery and Best.

Communications.

From J E Yelland, asking for remission of dog tax.—Received.

From ratepayers complaining that the superstructure of new bridge on Dalhousie street is not of sufficient size to carry away ice and spring freshets and notifying Council that should any of the complainants suffer damage by reason of the stoppage of water the town will be held responsible.—Received.

From Town Engineer reporting that the cost of constructing Sherbrooke and Dalhousie street bridges had been increased by having to go much deeper than anticipated by reason of unsuitable bottom for foundation. With regard to the use of Ensign cement complained of at last session of Council, he explained that he found this cement quite up to requirements, while it does not affect the rate per foot between the contractor and corporation.—Received.

From F Bartlett, inspector on pavement, asking that his salary be increased from $2 50 to $3 00 per day.—Board of Works.

From T McFadden, inspector of pavement, asking for same increase as Mr Bartlett.—Board of Works.

From John Carnegie tendering his resignation as Commissioner of the Town Trust.—Received.

From Mr. Ford asking for remission of taxes.—Court of Revision.

From Nicholas Williams asking for remission of taxes.—Court of Revision.

From Thos Williams asking for refund of fine imposed upon him by Police Magistrate for a violation of the Health Act.—Legal Committee.

From E B Edwards, Town Solicitor, re date when reduction in water rates should begin. The solicitor informed Council that on and after the date when the town should give a system of sewerage costing at least $50,000 consumers of water (other than for lawns) are entitled to a reduction of ten per cent on the schedule rates set out in by-law, said reduction to be made only in the payment within fifteen days after rates are due. The correspondence concluded with the statement that on the 11th of June, 1898 a system of sewerage costing at least $50,000 had been furnished, and from that date the Water Co were obliged to make a reduction to consumers of the aforesaid percentage.—Received.

In reference to the above communication Ald McWilliams thought the ratepayers were entitled to a ten per cent reduction on all bills rendered in full by the Water Co since July 1st, 1898. He thought it the duty of the Water Co to have refunded said percentage to water consumers on completion of sewer, as stipulated in their contract with the town.

Considerable discussion took place on the matter, in which it transpired that the clerk had notified the Water Co of the maturity of percentage agreement between them and the town in 1898, but as yet no discount had been allowed water consumers.

Ald. Neil here moved that the public be notified through the press of the ten per cent reduction now due water consumers.—Carried.

Arbitrator Appointed.

A by-law to appoint an arbitrator to ascertain the amount to be paid by the town to County of Peterborough for administration of justice and other purposes passed its several readings. On motion of Ald. McWilliams, seconded by Ald. E H D Hall, Mr. James Carnegie was voted arbitrator.

A by-law to authorize the execution of a contract with Richard Sheehy for the construction of a granolithic sidewalk on Hunter and other streets passed its several readings, by-law stipulating that Mr. Sheehy be expected to have the work completed not later than the 20th October.

A by-law to authorize the execution of agreement with C P R respecting Wolfe street passed its several readings.

A by-law to authorize the construction of granolithic sidewalks on Hunter and other streets passed its several readings.

Before passing above by-law the question of contract work vs. day work on sidewalks here caused considerable discussion as to which is the cheapest and most satisfactory, many of the aldermen urging that a comparative statement of cost should be laid before the board.

Mr. Hall took exception to a granolithic sidewalk being constructed on Belmont avenue and south side of London street. He thought leading thoroughfares had been neglected for side streets. He would therefore not vote for by-law.

Ald. Best thought a good deal of work had been done on streets without instructions from the Council.

Mayor Davis here explained that the Engineer had instructions from him to repair Park street to Belmont avenue and Downie street, and if the Councillors would go out of town and neglect meetings called by him, some person had to look after business before the board, which he had done himself.

Ald. Sawyers remarked that Messrs. Davis and Neil had got all they wanted in the matter of street improvements, and further they, in company with Ald. Langford, got credit for running the whole show.

Ald. Langford took exception to these remarks and said he could never get the Board of Works to meet any way, and John Sawyers would go up to Stony Lake and stay there to the neglect of his municipal duties.

Ald. Sawers replied that the reason he could not get a meeting was because the Council had no confidence in him as chairman of the Board of Works.

Ald McWilliams wanted the by-law passed as considerable work specified in it was already done and had to be paid for.

Ald Hall here said he had no confidence in the Board of Works. Downie street had not been properly graded, and we find two or three other streets raised because of sidewalks being constructed too low to accommodate certain individuals. He would not block passage of the by law if the south side of London street and Belmont avenue were omitted.

Ald Sawers here explained that he was appointed to the Board of Works on August 7th, and had not the privilege of sitting on said Board till then.

Ald McWilliams took exception to the walk on London street being thrown out of the by-law on the objection of a ratepayer who had really no title to property concerned.

Finally the by law was allowed to stand in consideration of the work on Belmont avenue and south of London street not being constructed this year.

Coal Supply.

Ald Sawers moved, seconded by Ald Langford,—That the chairman of the Property Committee be authorized to purchase the coal required for town buildings from town dealers, and that the treasurer pay for same as delivered.—Carried.

Sewer Extension.

Ald McWilliams moved, seconded by Ald Sawers,—That the Council give notice of extension of Sewer from Brock to Murray street.—Carried.

A Rap at Edwards.

Ald McWilliams moved, seconded by Ald Sawers,—That the office of Town Solicitor be abolished and that the Legal Committee, or in emergency the Mayor be authorized to secure legal advice when necessary, and that this change come in force on Oct 1st.

Councillor Langford objected to the motion and championed the Town Solicitor.

Ald McWilliams explained that this resolution would give a three months test before the next Council took its seat, and the change would simply be another manner of paying Mr Edwards, who could be engaged on all legal matters; but he objected to the present method of paying the Town Solicitor, who, should he win a case secured extra fees, and in event of his losing a suit the town pays all costs, which simply means "heads I win, tails you lose" as far as Mr Edwards is concerned.

Ald Neil objected to turning down Mr Edwards before he was proven incapable of filling his position.

The matter was finally left for the Committee of the Whole Council to deal with to-night.

Is Hay Responsible?

Ald. McWilliams moved, seconded by Ald. Sawers:—

That the engineer be instructed to report in writing if the grades of new sidewalks have been made his own responsibility, and if not, upon whose. Carried.

The mover explained that Mr. Hay claimed that the grades had been made by the Board of Works. He must say that as a member of that board, he had not been consulted. He thought that if the engineer had struck the grades on his own responsibility, he has not shown ability for the position he fills. The disgraceful grading of the new sidewalks was common town talk, and provoked newspaper comment. He had no personal ill-will towards the engineer, but took it to be his duty to bring the matter up for investigation. Applause.

Ald. McWilliams, moved, seconded by Ald. Sawers, that the contract for construction of abutments for bridges on Dalhousie and Sherbrook streets, and No. 2 contract for construction of granolithic sidewalks be referred to the Commissioner of Public Works to investigate, with power to engage an engineer, if necessary. Carried.

Ald McWilliams here remarked that Mr Hay had, contrary to the wishes of the Council, persisted in using Ensign cement, and he felt confident that were the matter looked into it would be found that not anything like the quantity of cement had been used as provided for in contract, and that the town were several hundred dollars out. He thought the way in which things have been run this year had disappointed our citizens in the expectation of having secured a good business Council, and the sooner a change was made the better. (Applause).

The Council then adjourned till to-night when they will meet in committee on Town Solicitor and street grading questions in particular.

Card-players are of two classes, those who can't shuffle too well, and those who can shuffle too well, and the latter are reputed to have a percentage of advantage when playing against the former. A recent invention is designed to put these two classes upon an equality. It is a mechanical arrangement for shuffling the cards, and the device does its work so completely that the position of every card, with relation to its fellows, is changed. The deck of card is placed in the circular box by the dealer, and given two or three turns, which distributes them over the floor of the box by the passage of a detent which moves over the cards; a reversal of this operation returns the cards to a pile ready for dealing. This is the patent of Frederick C. Rollins, of Boston.

The Transvaal may be able to put sixty thousand men in the field, but what Oom Paul is thinking about just now is how many he will be able to take out.

FACTS AND THEORIES.

There is such a wide difference between the theory that all free government rests in the consent of the governed with the practice now prevailing, that explanations are certainly in order. The simple truth is that the Americans like some other people have frequently found themselves confronted, not by theories, but by conditions. In all such cases, theories have been forgotten and the course adopted that best served the necessities of the moment. It is not necessary to go as far as the Philippines for an illustration. The manner in which Uncle Sam has abandoned his professed love for arbitration in his dealings with Canada, because his principles promise to interfere with his unreasonable ambition, will afford sufficient demonstration.

ADVANTAGES OF A PARCELS POST.

This country has a prodigious number of articles which would go abroad in trade if it were easier to reach customers by parcels post. Nor is a mere parcels post enough. The international parcels posts developed in the leading European countries provides for insurance for prepayment of duties and charges, for a special delivery by special messenger and for prepaying any charge to those who live off the regular postal routes. In Switzerland you can pay a small sum into any post office, get a postal card with the sum stamped on it, address and mail it and the carrier delivers the sum and the card together. In Holland the post office collects bills. In Germany it delivers a farmer's fruit and vegetables to his city customers. The German post handles 161,000,000 parcels.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Good morning.

•• •• ••

Should the evil of a use of money ever be healed in politics it won't happen through the ordinary healer.

•• •• ••

Regarding an ultimatum should Britain not use one on the Boers, how will it affect the old notion about a woman having the last word?

•• •• ••

If it takes 40,000 men seven months and $100,000,000 to take possession of 500 square miles of the island of Luzon how many men, how many months and how much money will it require to take and hold the whole island, consisting of 51,000 square miles, for all time? After that calculation has been made there is a chance to figure up the whole area of the Philippine islands, of about 115,000 square miles. The figures of such a problem may well make the American taxpayer gasp.

•• •• ••

A contemporary says Great Britain and the Transvaal are sparring for wind. We don't know about that, but they seem to have a lot of wind to spar.

•• •• ••

The Hamilton Herald thinks that people who are hopelessly ill should be helped out of the world to relieve their sufferings. It is not a subject that can be discussed with a view to legislative enactment, because that would be impossible and open the way to untold horrows and legalized crime. But the present code of medical ethics favors the last hours, and days and weeks of dying people being rendered as painless as possible.

MEN OF MARK.

President McKinley finds little leisure for light reading, but is a careful student of the newspapers.

Joseph Leiter has by no means decided to drop the stock market. He is a constant visitor to Wall street.

J. Pierpont Morgan is an expert pool player and an evening rarely passes when he does not enjoy an after dinner game.

Joel Chandler Harris, Georgia's famous author, breeder and poet, is to have an exhibit of Jersey cattle at the Paris exposition.

Senator Clark has just bought in Paris, for his Washington house, an old stained glass window, once the property of the Countess de Jauze, for $30,000.

Sims Reeves says he lost $400,000 during his career as a public singer because he was too conscientious to appear on the stage unless sure he could do his best.

Ex-Representative Ben T. Cable is to furnish much of the money for the building of a chapter house for the Zeta Psi fraternity at the University of Michigan.

John Stuart, superintendent of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, was formerly a telegraph operator at Hokendauqua, Pa. He is now receiving $15,000 a year.

The Russian Prince Cantacuzene, whose betrothal to Miss Julia Grant has just been announced, has retired to his Russian estates to make preparations for the reception of his bride.

Before Rear Admiral Kautz left for Samoa a young woman asked him whether he had ever "felt afraid in battle." "Once," he answered. "A stray ball knocked my cigar out of my mouth and there wasn't another aboard."

The late ex-Governor Flower was once asked by a less successful financier how to succeed in Wall street. "By working harder than at any other trade or profession on earth," was the answer. "But won't that wear you out?" "Not before your time."

Mayor Moir of Scranton was years ago a journeyman tailor in Philadelphia. John Ross of the former city needed a workman, and Mr. Moir, being recommended, was offered inducements to go to Scranton. In February last Mr Moir was elected chief executive of the city.

Henry G. Kittredge, editor of the Textile World, Boston, has been appointed assistant director of textiles for the commissioner general of the United States to the Paris exposition of 1900. Mr Kittredge has long been identified with the textile industries of the United States.

Russell Sage is no friend of the camera, and very rarely is it that a photographer is quick enough to get a snap shot of the millionaire. As for sitting for a picture, that has probably occurred less frequently during the millionaire's long life than that of any other equally prominent man in the country.

TOWN TOPICS.

The curfew bell was rung last night at 8:30 o'clock. Nothing sensational resulted. It just rung; that was all.—Freeport Bulletin.

Buffalo is to have a new union station to cost $6,000,000, with a waiting room 80 by 235 feet, that will be the largest in the world. How about this, Boston?—Gardiner Reporter-Journal.

Buffalo is in a flutter over an extremely wicked Midway that it expects to have at the Pan-American exposition, and can't think of a suitable name for it. Why not call it Hamburg Paradise?—Rochester Democrat.

All because of a blessed war to the knife squabble between rival companies New York is now enjoying 65 cent gas. Father Knickerbocker will be a weak old gentleman if he lets them restore the higher rate.

MOTIVES AND METHODS.

A Missouri girl killed herself because her sweetheart had gone to the war.

Robert F. Hayes, a Boston clerk, hanged himself with his necktie as the noose.

Because his mother would not let him go in swimming an Arkansas boy cut his throat.

Forked branches of an apple tree were used as a noose by a Stroudsburg (Pa.) suicide.

Champagne with arsenic in it was used by a San Francisco man as a means of self destruction.

Her husband wanted to move, and she did not. That led a Connecticut woman to drink poison.

Fearing that his wife would scold him for getting home late a newly made London bridegroom committed suicide.

"Ah, to see the moon at a distance of one meter," was the note left by a Paris suicide explaining his motive for death.

THE CYNIC.

After a man has told you his troubles you know more about his kin.

You will find a loafer leech attached to every industrious man or woman.

An honest man is one who admits that his baldness is due to old age and not to sickness.

Every bridegroom finds an excuse to return from his wedding journey sooner than originally planned.

When a builder wants to put up a permanent structure, he looks well to the foundation. He digs deep and lays the stones with exactness and precision. He "trues" and "plumbs" and "levels." A defect or weakness in the foundation will affect everything above it. A solid foundation is an absolute necessity for a solid house. In the physical structure the stomach is the foundation. Upon it depends the support of every other organ in the body. It is the weak and disordered stomach that causes indigestion, impure blood, general debility, nervousness, sleeplessness, and all the woes of dyspepsia. It is the disordered stomach that makes thin, impoverished blood, where microbes of consumption flourish and multiply. It is the weak and disordered stomach which brings about conditions that cause a hacking cough, sore throat, bronchitis, weak and bleeding lungs.

To make the foundation of your physical structure solid; so that the rest of the organs may successfully resist the attacks of disease, nothing equals Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine is a tonic, an appetizer, a blood purifier, a nerve builder, a flesh maker, a foe to weakness and a blessing to worn-out and run-down humanity. It is a non-alcoholic specific for every disease that comes in advance of consumption. It is a distinct remedy and stands alone. Nothing is like it, and there is no substitute for it. It has a record of thirty years of cures.

Mrs. Lula Hedgecoke, of Dozier, Collingsworth Co., Texas, writes: "I was troubled for seven or eight years with indigestion and liver complaint, and received more benefit from the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets' than any medicine I have ever tried."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are for constipation, biliousness, and torpid liver. These troubles they cure permanently without causing distress. They are pleasant in fact as well as name—no griping. At all dealers.

Following are extracts from the report of Capt. T. H. Trethewey, M.E., upon the Company's properties which are now being vigorously developed, and upon which will be installed the 6 drill compressor plant, which was purchased from the Canadian Rand Drill Co. on the 5th inst. for immediate delivery.

MR. TRETHEWEY SAYS;

"The vein on these properties is well defined, and, where exposed by the workings near the line between the Western Hill and Virginia, averages fully 18 ft. in width. The gangue consists of a somewhat crushed and iron-stained quartz, sparingly mineralized with Galena, Copper and Iron Pyrites, with here and there small amount of Blend and Graphite disseminated throughout."

"On the Western Hill, a a shaft has been sunk to a depth of 27 ft. on the foot wall, and the ledge has been exposed by a cross cut to its full width; it here appears to be divided into hanging and foot wall portions by a seam of somewhat decomposed clay material which appears to dip toward the hanging wall, cutting out the leaner and allowing the richer portions of the vein to increase with depth."

"Samples taken in this shaft, across an 8 ft. face lying next to the foot well, gave an average return of $7.00 in Gold and $1.35 in Silver, making a total of $8.35 per ton, while the balance of the vein gave a return of $2.00 in Gold and 70 cents in Silver, making a total of $2.70 per ton for a width of ten feet, so that $5.25 may be considered a fair average for the full width of the vein."

"The conclusion I have drawn after a thorough examination and study of the facts as here presented is, that judicious develpoment should locate extensive bodies of pay ore, as even if only the 8 ft. next to the foot wall be extracted, the values continuing in depth as there is no reason why they should not, while leaner portions may be encountered they could be left in the mine to support the walls, and you would still have a proposition of unlimited tonnage well worthy of judicious expenditure in exposing its resources."

"The general conditions, elevation, etc., are so favorable that mining operations can be carried on for many years by simply tunnelling into the mountain and following the trend of the vein, and hundreds of thousands of tons of ore can readily be made available without the use of hoisting or pumping machinery."

"Situated as these claims are about 2000 ft. above the bank of the Okanagan River, with a natural outlet for Ærial or other tramway, and only about three miles from the "Black Hawk" Claim, which is within easy reach of the river, the question of transportation of ore from the mine to the mill could be easily arranged."

"With an electric plant established at Dog Falls, which is possibly ten miles distant, ample power could be generated at nominal cost for all purposes, and by adopting the most modern methods of mining, milling and concentrating, together with a unlimited supply of ore, the cost of production should be reduced to a minimum."

"If the present promising assurances are borne out, the opening up of the three levels could develope at least a three years' supply of ore for a plant of large capacity, and I would stongly recomend the erection and installation of a mill of not less than from 250 to 300 tons daily capacity."

"With cheap power an unlimited supply of ore and a plant capable of handling the quantity I have suggested, the cost of mining and milling ought not to exceed from $1.50 to $2.00 per ton, and under capable management it should be kept within the lower limits."

"Thus even if the lowest values, $3.05 be taken as a basis of calculation and allowing that 85 p. c. of this can be saved, it would yield a profit of $1.09 for each ton of ore treated, but I am of opinion that much higher values may be confidently expected, and if there is a profit winner in the camp, all conditions considered, this one can be conscientiously recommended to the investing public."

At the next Annual Meeting of the Company, which will be held on the 6th day of November next, several of Montreal's most prominent business men will accept Directorship.

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

THE DEADLY COAL GAS

Mrs. and Miss Armstrong Found Dead in Bed on Saturday.

SLEPT WITH THE GAS ON.

The Husband Horrified to Find His Wife and Sister Lifeless.

Mr. Armstrong Who Has Been So Terribly Afflicted Was a Former Resident of Lindsay Where He Was Engaged in Insurance Business—No Inquest Necessary.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—A very sad double tragedy took place this morning at the residence of Harry J. Fidler, 176 Logan avenue, when two ladies, Mrs. J. C. Armstrong and Miss Lottie Armstrong lost their lives by asphyxiation. About 9.0 o'clock last night Mr. Armstrong accompanied by his wife and sister, arrived unexpectedly at Mr. Fidler's from Sault Ste. Marie, having come down by steamer and rail. Miss Armstrong had lost considerable sleep on the two previous nights, and after partaking of a slight repast she asked to be allowed to retire at once. Mrs. Fidler asked her to leave the gas burning low, as Mrs. Armstrong, it was arranged, would share the bed with her later on. An hour after Miss Armstrong went to bed her sister-in-law followed her.

"Be sure not to blow out the gas," said Mrs. Fidler, jocularly, to Mrs. Armstrong, who is Mr. Fidler's sister. The back room in which they were to sleep was not large, and Mr. Armstrong suggested that the window be left open a little, but this was not done. Finally all retired, Mrs. and Miss Armstrong in the back room, Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Fidler's eldest son in the middle room.

A Gruesome Find.

Early this morning Mrs. Fidler arose and began the task of preparing breakfast. [illegible] arose and went in to the back room where a glance told him his wife was dead.

He [illegible] and informed Mrs. Fidler, who was temporarily stunned by the news. Mr. Armstrong had been so stricken at the sight of his dead wife that he had not looked at his sister, but the horror was increased a minute later when he found that she, too, was dead. The gas tap was found to be partly open and the room was full of gas.

The household was soon aroused, and Drs. Frazer, Rowan, Brown and Macdonald were summoned, but their presence availed nothing.

It was Miss Armstrong's intention to take this morning's Canadian Pacific train to Peterborough, and to go thence by stage to Warsaw, where her mother and other friends now are.

Mr. Armstrong, who has been so terribly afflicted, has lived in Lindsay, but has been much in Sault Ste. Marie, engaged as a builder.

There will be no inquest.

Mrs. Armstrong, the victim of the sad accident chronicled in the above despatch, was a Lindsay lady, being the daughter of Mr. Fidler, of that town. Her husband, Mr. J. C. Armstrong was a former resident of Lindsay, where he was engaged in the insurance business. Mrs. and Miss Armstrong were known in this district, and the news of their lamentable death will be received with sincere sorrow here.

He Didn't Bite.

"I never can tell a story and have it come out all right," said a lady to the Times the other day. "I thought I had such a good one the other day. I was walking along George street and heard one street boy say to another, 'Oh, you go buy 10 cents' worth of potash.' 'What for?' says No. 2. 'For 10 cents,' yelled the other, and ran off giggling.

"I thought it was pretty good, and I'd try it on Charlie at supper. But when I told him to go buy 10 cents' worth of potash he never said a word, and I knew another joke had fallen flat and kept still. But the worst was later. He put on his hat and vanished after supper, coming back in a minute with a little parcel, that he handed to me.

"'What's that?' asked I.

"'Why, the potash you said you wanted,' answered he, and I nearly had hysterics on the spot. Did you ever hear anything so perfectly awful? I [illegible] try to get off anything funny again."

And the little woman sighed as she walked away having paid for a year's subscription to this great family journal, that everybody reads.

THE TURF REVIEW.

Strcok, 2:14¼, is to be tried this year at the pace, by George Saunders, according to report.

Narion, 8, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is said to be showing a good gait and good speed this year.

It is said that Rose Croix, 2:13¼ at three years, has shown a mile in 2:15 at the pace for McHenry, at Pleasanton, Cal.

Nelly R, ch m., 2:28, by Red Cloud, although 18 years old, has never had a foal until this year. It is by Dan T, 2:06¾.

A horse with the peculiar name of Emw, by Seeraw, dam by Independence, is to be raced this year by D. H. McGill.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is thought that Willis O. [illegible] will be able to be in the [illegible] this season.

There is a great deal of talk about Directly, 2:03¾, beating all the pacers out this year and taking a record faster than 2:00 besides.

Since the sale of Advertiser, Palo Alto farm has only three sons of Electioneer remaining in the stud, Altiro, Azmoor and Mendocino.

A race for a purse of $1,000 is projected for July 4, at Youngstown, O., with Lord Vincent, 2:16½; La Honda, 2:13¼ pacing, and Oddity, 2:10¼ pacing, among the starters.

The 3-year-old bay filly Marion, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is eligible to start in the New England $10,000 Futurity, and is likely to do so if the reports of the speed she is showing are correct.

The first new 2:30 trotter of the year is a dun gelding named Dot, breeding unknown, who took the first heat of the 2:40 race at Norfolk, Va., May 16, in 2:27¼.—Turf, Field and Farm.

A CLEVER RUSE.

The Auctioneer Was Quick Witted and Finally Made a Sale.

An auctioneer on East Washington street—one of those redoubtable individuals commonly termed "slick"—was the cause of a farcical scene recently that would have done credit to a burlesque show. He had been talking industriously for a long time to a crowd of interested but enthusiastic listeners.

The affable auctioneer conscientiously went through his repertory from beginning to end, but somehow the crowd did not "warm up" to him—to quote his own language. Finally, with a dark look that bordered on despair, he grabbed up a well known pasteboard hatbox containing about 50 spools of silk thread of different colors. With the grace of a conjurer he extracted five of the spools, and, arraying them in a tempting semicircle on the counter, announced that they were "to go at any price."

But the audience, while admitting with nods of approval that they were good spools of thread, displayed no marked inclination to become excited over them. Not a bid was offered.

"I'll sell 'em for 10 cents," suggested the auctioneer timidly. It was plain from the tone of his voice that he was losing faith in himself and in all the world. There were no takers. The man of the red flag added three more spools to the semicircle. "All for 10 cents," he declared. But thread stock was far below par. The auctioneer caught up all the spools from the counter and flung them into the box with an impressive gesture. The light of inspiration flashed from his eyes.

"The whole blamed box for 10 cents!" he cried.

"I'll take it," was the prompt response, and a little man in a washed out overcoat and wearer of red chin whiskers stepped out from the crowd with a dirty 10 cent piece in his upraised hand. The auctioneer clutched the money feverishly, and, turning the box upside down so that all the spools dropped into a basket on the counter, he handed the worthless piece of ancient pasteboard to the anxious customer. A roar of hilarious laughter rose from the crowd that was heard throughout that neighborhood.

"I don't want your blamed old box!" wailed the unfortunate purchaser.

"You said you'd take it," replied the auctioneer. "I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came in a strong chorus from the delighted audience.

"I bought the spools!"

"No, you didn't! You bought the box! I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came the answer again, stronger than ever. The red whiskered man stalked indignantly from the place with the box under his arm.

"What you going to do with it?" yelled the crowd.

"That's what!" cried the speculator as he held the pasteboard box in both hands, football fashion, and kicked it vigorously into the middle of Washington street.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing [illegible] true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

MUST BE TRAINED TO SHOOT

London Globe Speaks of a Great Necessity for the Canadian Militia.

Mondon, Sept. 16.—Referring to a Halifax despatch regarding the strengthening of the Esquimault garrison The Globe says it is gratifying that it is beginning to receive appreciation as a strategical position, which it entitles "one of those Imperial coigns of vantage which have suffered from systematic neglect." The paper also says that a couple of years ago a British engineering officer was sent to Esquimault to investigate the place, and adding that it was evident he saw the futility of strengthening the fortifications unless manned by thorougly efficient troops.

"The Canadian militia," says The Globe, "is as useful as such a force is for local purposes, but only unless they receive sufficient training in gunnery to be trusted with the custody of such a valuable strategical Position."

STRIKERS WERE DEFEATED.

Statement That the Employees Returned to Work Without an Increase.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—The following despatch came over the C P R telegraph wire from Montreal this morning and may be taken as an authorative statement from the company:

The statement that the strikers in the Canadian Pacific freight sheds at Owen Sound had been taken back to work on the understanding that after working fifteen days they would receive the increased wages asked for, is absolutely incorrect. Some of those whose places had not been filled were allowed to resume work, but only at the same rate of pay and on the same conditions as before the strike. The strike is ended and all the men required are working at the same rate of pay and on the same conditions as before.

"Doctor" Did Not Appear.

St. Thomas, Sept. 16.—Dr. James, who was summoned to appear at the Police Court on a charge of practicing medicine without a license, didn't put in an appearance. It is said he left the city and Magistrate Davidson issued a warrant for his arrest. The case was adjourned in the meantime to ascertain if James can be located. Crown Attorney Donahue was present, but no one appeared for the defendant.

NEWS FROM ALL OVER

Auriferous Quartz Has Been Discovered in the Isle of Man.

GERMAN LINE TO THE EAST.

The Enormously Increasing Trade Has Made This Necessary.

Remarkable Occurrence on Board a Pleasure Boat—A Man Feels the Sensation of Awaking in His Coffin—Tonsorial Crisis in a Yorkshire Town Relieved at Last.

London, Sept. 16.—Discoveries of gold in small quantities in the Isle of Man have often been reported, and in some cases workings have been undertaken but they have not proved remunerative. It is now, however, stated definitely that gold-bearing quartz has been found in the island, and that crushing tests have yielded one ounce of the precious metal to the ton of quartz. Two gentlemen who have had experience in Australia have secured mining rights, and are taking steps to develop the discovery, which was made some little time ago, but has up to now been kept a profound secret.

GERMAN LINE TO THE EAST.

Berlin, Sept. 16.—On October 4, the North German Lloyds will inaugurate their new fortnightly line to the far East, which has become necessary owing to the enormously increasing trade of Germany with China and Japan. The new steamers which are to be employed on this service have been built exclusively in German yards. It should be noticed also that ports will now be touched by German steamers which have hitherto only been visited by British vessels—for example, Penang. Hitherto Shanghai was the last port visited by the German mail steamers, but the voyage will now be extended to Nagasaki, Kobe and Yokohama.

A WHALE IN A YACHT.

London, Sept. 16.—A party of visitors who were sailing a pleasure yacht near Ilfracombe met with an extraordinary adventure. Suddenly a large fish jumped on board, and with its tail smashed all the vessel's gear and broke the main boom. One gentleman received a blow on the face which blackened his eye. The fish then thrust its nose into the cabin and remained quiet, and the party made for the shore with all speed. The unwelcome intruder proved to be a whale, a thrasher 15 feet long and weighing half a ton. It is now being exhibited in Ilfracombe.

JUST IN TIME.

Buenos Ayres, Sept. 16.—Juan Gonzalez aged fifty, living at Tres Esquinas, Montevideo, and the father of a large family, was certified to be dead by the doctor who examined him, and preparations were made for his funeral in the Buceo cemetery.

On the following day, just as the undertaker's man was closing the coffin the corpse sat up, and in a surprised voice asked, "What is this? What are you going to do with me?"

The people present were so frightened that some ran out of the house, while many ladies fainted, but the man who was to screw the coffin down had the worst fright of all, and dropped the lid on the floor in astonishment. Gonzalez was at once put to bed and another medical man was sent for, who pronounced his case to be a curious instance of catalepsy.

RETURNED TO PENNY SHAVES.

Leeds, Eng. 16.—The barber trade in the working-class districts of Leeds resolved some time ago to abandon penny shaves, on the ground that the pay was not sufficient to keep body and soul alive. Members of the trade, it was said, worked seventy-two and a half and even eighty hours a week. The change to 1 1-2d. has not answered. At a conference of the barbers a majority of twenty-five to eight have declared to return to the penny shave, though not without a strong protest. One barber produced a roll signed by sixty-three customers who would pay 1 1-2d. Still it was declared that some Leeds men would let their beards grow till spring rather than pay 1 1-2d. for shaving.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one. Just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Another Attack on Molson's.

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—The head office of the Molsons Bank in this city has received advices from Victoriaville, Que., to the effect that burglars attempted to blow open the safe in the branch there last night and succeeded in smashing the safe door and the office window, but did not succeed in getting any money. The employes of the bank on guard were not hurt.

A FAITHFUL DOG.

Its Owner Realised Its Worth, as Well He Might.

"Well, I wouldn't have believed it," exclaimed Jones in astonishment as he dropped in to see Smith the other evening and was met in the hall by a St. Bernard dog.

"Wouldn't have believed what?" asked Smith.

"Why, that you'd have a dog in your house," continued Jones. "It belongs to one of your neighbors, I suppose?"

"No, sir; that's my dog," replied Smith proudly.

"You don't really mean it, old man? Why, I've known you now for five years, and you've always had a marked aversion for dogs."

"Yes, I did have until lately, but I wouldn't be without one now. This brute is a noble, faithful fellow, and I wouldn't take $100 spot cash for"—

But at this juncture he was interrupted by his wife calling down over the banister:

"Henry Smith, who was it that scattered these cigar ashes all over my dresser?"

"It must have been the dog, my dear," was his reply.

"And who was it that dropped these apple peelings on the floor?" she demanded.

"The dog, my dear," answered Smith.

"And there's a bottle of mucilage spilled on the hall carpet up here too. Is that some of your work, Henry?"

"No, my dear; the dog's to blame for that."

"And, goodness gracious," she continued angrily, "if some one hasn't been whittling up here again! How many times have I told you not to do that in the house?"

"But I had nothing to do with it, my dear. The dog's been up there probably chewing a stick."

"Well, it's a burning shame the way this house is mussed up. Your collars and ties are scattered all over the rooms."

"Are they, my dear? That dog's been up there again then. Yes," continued Smith as he drew his friend into the parlor, "I wouldn't take a big pot of money for that dog. Why, the noble fellow saves me about 20 jawings a week."

"So I see," chuckled Jones, "and you bet I'll have one before noon tomorrow."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

Resident of Waterloo County Charged with Embezzling $400.

Galt, Sept. 16.—The most sensational event in Galt this year was the sudden arrest yesterday afternoon of Mr. A. W. Falconer, principal of of the Victoria school, on the charge of stealing or unlawfully converting to his own use the sum of $400 belonging to Mrs. Agnes Wray.

The plaintiff states that in 1898 Mr. Falconer got the money from her to invest in Dominion Building and Loan Stock. On Thursday her solicitor visited Toronto and discovered that no such entry had been made in the company's books. As soon as she learned this Mrs. Wray had a warrant issued. Falconer was arrested while teaching his class. The prisoner has been in financial difficulties for some time and a week ago made an assignment. His liabilities are said to be about $7,000, with practically no assets. He carried on a real estate and insurance business. Falconer was arraigned last night before the magistrate and bail was fixed at $4,000. It is reported that more charges of the same nature will be brought against the prisoner within a day or two.

Falconer is one of the best known educationalists in Waterloo county, and, being an earnest church worker, ardent supporter of the Y. M. C. A., and a temperance advocate, he enjoyed the confidence of the community in a very large measure.

KILLED BY A CAT.

Horrible Death of an Infant on Queen Street West.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—A month old baby, the child of Mr. White, who keeps a restaurant at 487 Queen street west, met with a horrible death last night. It had been put to sleep and left alone in the room without any thought of danger. During the mother's absence, however, a stray cat, which had been prowling about the neighborhood, got into the room in some way, and when Mrs. White returned she found that it had attacked the baby and literally eaten a portion of its face. A piece of the nose and cheek was entirely gone. Dr. Stewart was called in, but nothing could be done for the infant, which died in a short time.

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and get to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproars of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

That statement of Dewey's that he considers the Filipinos more capable of self-government than the Cubans ought to set a lot of American electors thinking.

EUGENE FIELD AND TABOR.

How the Humorist Made Life a Burden For the Millionaire.

"Up to middle age the late Senator Tabor's life was one of great hardship," said a former resident of the Silver State, "and when he suddenly became fabulously rich he plunged into luxuries like a starving man wading into a banquet. One of his early freaks was the purchase of several magnificent lace nightrobes which cost $100 apiece and which he kept locked up in a safe during the day. Eugene Field was editor of the Denver Tribune at the time, and those lace nightrobes made him simply hysterical. He wrote column upon column about them, describing the garments in detail, with numerous diagrams depicting sections fore and aft. The diagrams were hideous affairs, which Field carved out himself with a penknife on the back of old wood type. He used to describe how Tabor would forget the combination of the safe and sit up, shivering and naked, half the night trying to remember the right figures.

"Altogether he kept Denver in a roar for weeks and made Tabor so wild that one day he rushed into his office, snatched the unfortunate nightrobes out of their compartment and tore them to threads. 'There, now!' he exclaimed, wiping his forehead and kicking the tattered fragments into a corner, 'I hope that fool will be satisfied. I'll be hanged if I ain't going to get a gunny sack,' he continued, 'cut some holes in the end for my head and arms, and then sleep in it for the rest of my life!'

"When Tabor was appointed to the senate to fill an unexpired term of exactly 29 days, Field broke loose again and had all kinds of fun with the old man. He declared that Tabor opposed the tariff bill on the ground that it encouraged lawlessness in the west. 'I don't know this tariff bill,' he reported the senator as saying in a speech, 'but we have entirely too many of 'em out where I live. There's Wild Bill and Pecos Bill and Billy the Kid—all no good. If you let Tariff Bill have everything to do with the custom house he is liable to steal the Atlantic ocean.' Many of the honest frontier folk took these flights of fancy seriously, and drove Tabor nearly distracted by long letters of remonstrance, urging him to read up and get posted, so as not to disgrace the state.

"At the expiration of the senator's brief term he circulated an autograph album among his fellow members, and the incident tickled Field immensely. He gave what purported to be a copy of the 'sentiments' inscribed in the volume by the different statesmen—such things as 'When this you see, remember me, Roscoe Conkling,' and 'Sure as the moss grows 'round a stump you are my darling sugar lamp—I mean chump—George F. Hoar,' and similar nonsense, all of which maddened his victim.

"I think 'Gene Field was the only man Tabor never forgave, for in spite of his gaunt, forbidding exterior, the miner magnate was as tender hearted as a girl. He was really full of sterling qualities, and in his proper sphere he would have been anything but grotesque. One thing is sure—if every fellow he helped in secret would have joined his funeral procession he would have gone to his grave like an emperor of old."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

Mr. Hornbill—Do you know, darling, I could pick you out of a crowd of women just by your style!

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two years!

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and easy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get mixed up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. We all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my dernedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

Dog Lost.

A black spaniel, which answers to the name of "Darkey." The dog has long ears, and about five years old. The finder will be rewarded by leaving it at Mrs Chambo's, 95 Rubidge street.

On Thursday and Saturday the Knitting Works will sell a heavy all Wool 2 and 1 rib stocking in 8, 8½, 9, 9½ and 10, for 25c. per pair. The quality of this stocking is far above the usual bargain stocking as it is possible to imagine. We make them on our own electric power machines.

St. John's Harvest Home.

The members of St. John's Choir are putting in their final practices for the Harvest Home to be held on Thursday evening next. The anthem chosen for the occasion is Stainer's beautiful composition "Ye Shall Dwell in the Land," and the Service, Plummer in E flat. A full rehearsal is called for this evening at eight o'clock.

A Fox Hunt.

The people in the vicinity of Waterford street enjoyed a fox hunt on Sunday. It appears that a tame fox belonging to Albert Duncan took a notion to go and see what was going on. He wandered over to the Dickson raceway when the boys got after him, and had to give up the chase after a good run through the lumber piles. During the chase the poor animal entered a house through an open window, ran up stairs and escaped through the rear. He is still at large.

Postponed.

The moonlight excursion advertised to take place to-night on the steamer City of Peterborough, has been postponed, on account of the steamer having a contract to tow logs for the Rathbun Co.

Mr. Hazlitt's Illness.

We are sure the citizens one and all will sympathise with Mrs. T. G. Hazlitt, a th e serious illness of Mr. Hazlitt, who was very low and weak yesterday. The family physician, we believe, has little hope of Mr. Hazlitt's recovery, although his wonderful vitality, which did so much for him on a previous similar occasion, may pull him through.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Local butchers have to make long trips into the country to procure cattle and lambs for home consumption.

The steamer North King will make her last trip from Cobourg to Charlotte on Saturday, October 14. All who desire to cross the lake this fall had better get a wiggle on.

Lindsay Post: Mr. J. A. Culverwell, of Burleigh Falls power fame, was in town to-day interviewing our city fathers. He was in jubilant mood and says all arrangements are now completed.

Detective Greer has subpoenaed twenty-five crown witnesses for the trial of W H Poston to take place on the 19th inst.

Rev E V Stevenson will be the starter in the relay foot race from Chemong on Wednesday evening under the Y M C A point.

There was no Police Court yesterday.

Otonabee Lodge, I. O. O. F., held its regular business meeting last night.

The Lindsay Post says that contractor Hayes is rushing work on the new granolithic pavements.

To-day is the opening day of the Lakefield fair. The Peterborough Central opens a week from to-day.

Bert Coote's laugh in "The New Boy" is beyond analysis. It is a hard, dry, mirthless cackle that makes his audience weep with laughter. He will be seen at Bradburn's opera house Saturday night, unaided by his strong company. Don't miss this treat. Seats now on sale.

This is the last day for the receiving of entries for the dog show to be held by the Peterborough Kennel Club in connection with the exhibition. The show promises to be a most successful one. The number of dogs entered, both local and outside, is large. The Mountaineer kennels, Messrs. McAllister and Hungerford, proprietors, have alone entered dogs to the value of $1,800.

PERSONAL.

Miss Mabel Clarke, of Napanee, is the guest of the Misses Foote, McDonnel street.

Mr W S Dodds, station master at Havelock, was in town yesterday.

Mr Gregg, proprietor of the Gregg House, Havelock, was in town yesterday.

Mr R B Hall went down to Belleville yesterday.

Mr C B McAllister is in Ottawa for a few days.

Miss Fitzgerald, of Parry Sound, is visiting Miss Pearl Lundy.

Mr Highland, of Fairweather & Co., spent Sunday in Toronto.

Mrs Harry Welch, of Chicago, is visiting Mr Welch's parents, Elm street.

Mrs Muncaster, of Charlestown, S C, is visiting her mother, Mrs John Delaney.

Miss M L McGee, of Toronto, is visiting at the residence of Mr J B McWilliams.

Miss Bella Morgan, of Toronto, spent Sunday and Monday with her mother, Mrs B Morgan, Ashburnham.

Mrs John C Sullivan left yesterday to join her daughter, Miss Frankie, who is attending the Ottawa exhibition.

Miss Mary Sullivan, of Shawano, Wis., and Miss Minnie Flaherty, of Lockport, N Y, are visiting Miss Lizzie Flanerty, Water street.

Miss Emma H Stephens, organist of the Charlotte street church, left yesterday for New Haven, Conn., and New York, where she will remain for two or three weeks. Miss Campbell will supply at the organ during her absence.

The Port Hope Guide says that Mr W Quinn, formerly of Peterborough, now local manager of the Bell Telephone Co., Port Hope, has been promoted to Sarnia.

Messrs Robert Chambers and Frank Crandell, of Lindsay, were in town yesterday.

Miss Bella Fair, of Montreal, is the guest of her brother, Mr Robert Fair, Dickson street.

Mr Frank Schalber, of Rochester, N Y, who has been visiting relatives in town for the past two weeks, left on Friday for Hastings.

A Coming Event.

St. Paul's Church Choir intend giving a grand concert early in December, when Miss Edith Miller and Mr. Holmes Cowper will assist. Mr. Crane, the popular and energetic choirmaster, will endeavor to make this entertainment better than any previous one given by the choir, and that is saying a great deal. Full particulars will be given later on.

Lock Gates Repaired.

The lock gates at the locks have been leaking badly for some time and a force of men were put on yesterday to repair them. There will be no interference with navigation.

After Tramps.

Provincial Detective Rogers and a quartette of assistants passed east on the Grand Trunk the other day on a tramp hunting outing. They commenced work at the east end of the province and work westward. The officers are due in this neighborhood in a few days. In the meantime the tramps who desire their freedom should immediately proceed to work.

A Runaway.

Yesterday afternoon, while Mr. George Giroux was driving down George street to the locks, and when near Simcoe street the horse became frightened, and breaking away from the buggy ran away throwing Mr. Giroux out.

Mr Giroux received some slight injuries through the mishap and the buggy is pretty badly smashed.

POLITICAL QUIPS.

The presidential bees have gathered very little honey thus far in the campaign.—Los Angeles Express.

It is coming to pass in this country that it is almost libelous for a newspaper to call a man a politician. It is the imputation that he is guilty of things criminal.—Binghamton Herald.

If Princeton wants a professor of politics to be professor of politics, she will not experiment with Grover Cleveland, but go straight to Dick Croker or Matt Quay.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

OBJECTS TO CRITICISM.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am a reader of your valuable paper, and admire the outspoken policy of the Times on public matters. But, I think there is a limit to such, and feel that you have no right to discuss the action of the Council in regard to the new walks in such a brutal manner as you have been doing. I consider that you have no right to impute improper motives to those who are doing their duty at the Council board. It is folly to think that men are going to work for the love of it night after night, as the members of the Council do. When you add to this abuse and insinuations, it is not to be wondered at that good men are slow to appear in the municipal arena.

I am led to make these reflections from the tone and language of your widely-read newspaper in respect to the engineering department of the Council, which I consider unfair.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, &c.,

FAIR PLAY.

[Note — The Times (or any other newspaper) has a full right to criticise the conduct and policy of the Council or any public servant whenever it chooses to do so, and it is a right which will never be taken from us so long as this is a free country. It is well enough to argue that men serve at the Council board without reward but this fact can never relieve them of the responsibility and trust when they assume the duties of office. When a public newspaper cannot honestly approve the course of the Council or any member thereof, or of any public servant; when it is convinced that that course is inconsistent with the interests of the ratepayers, it is not only its privilege but its duty to oppose it and speak the truth against it. Moreover, we are not aware of having attacked any member of the Council or public servant in any but a fair and manly way. This paper is opposed to the present extravagant system in connection with our streets and bridges. It believes that an engineer at $1,200 is a useless waste of money; that there is no use for an engineering "department," as it now exists; that a first class man, who knows how to make roads and lay the new walks should be in charge of our streets, and an engineer employed only when necessary. We believe that three-fourths of the ratepayers agree with us in this, and will elect a Council next January which will give effect to their wishes in this regard.]

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

A Greater Economy Needed in Connection with our Schools.

The Times is in receipt of a letter from a prominent citizen enquiring as to the expenditure in connection with our schools. For the benefit of our readers we give below the average cost per pupil in the Public Schools of a number of towns in Ontario. It will be seen that Peterborough is at the top. Ratepayers should think this over.

Sarnia	$7 34
Toronto Junction	7 46
Owen Sound	8 05
Galt	8 31
Collingwood	8 35
Woodstock	8 77
Lindsay	9 79
Brockville	9 88
Barrie	9 77
Berlin	12 35
Peterborough	12 50

It is quite evident from the above that the Board of School Trustees needs a little looking after. The Council is not everything in the expenditure of cash.

The Same Old Ways.

I drove into Peterborough, John, with a heavy load of pigs, and put my horses in Croft's shed with numerous other rigs. Bob Stewart met me on the street, while Shaughnessy hovered by, they never kicked about the price, which I considered high. I heard the luckless taxpayer growl, while men with brand new clothes, at salaries of a thousand, up, whacked them upon the "nose." I saw the new side walks being laid, on many streets in city and some are too high and some too low, and which is an awful pity. I heard friend Bob Fair once more get off the jokes we used to know when we were boys together John, some thirty years ago. The same old ways the Council's got; the same old kind of ring, the same old methods are being used to make the people "sing." I dropped into the Times to get a copy of that g. f. j. to read when I got home at night, as to what the people say. 'Tween you and I and the gatepost John, if 'twas'nt for this paper, the town right to the dogs would go, which is not quite the caper.

Cornelius Vanderbilt was but 56, and had a good deal to enjoy in life. But Death makes no discriminations.

THE CYNIC.

All of us are very clever in finding excuses for not working more.

The most sensible woman will "put on" a little before a preacher.

A man is not really prominent until he has officiated at three prominent funerals.

Some women who never work for anything else will work like slaves for a church.

An old maid dearly loves to watch a quarrel between a husband and wife to see how it comes out.

If a man truly loves his wife, he is very apt to become confidential and tell her a lot of stories on the other fellows.

In talking it is well to know that people will not remember what you are saying unless they can use it against you.

A man always rises in his own estimation when he gets on familiar terms with a person of whom he once stood in awe.

There probably never was a woman too good to try to pass her children off as under age when traveling on the railroad.—Atchison Globe.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Peacocks are reliable weather prophets. Before a storm the gaudy birds become restless and clamorous.

The green woodpecker is said to laugh his "Ya-ha-ha" in different, more liquid tones when rain is coming, and especially gifted persons claim his cry really changes to "rain, rain, rain!"

In Dorsetshire, England, they foretell storms by the flight of the rooks. When they are pitch falling or playing at tumbling, diving and wheeling in the air, they say a storm is due.

Sea fowl are very clever in foretelling a storm. To a sailor bad weather means wind, and to a landsman it means rain, but the screaming of the water birds usually foretells a change of some sort for the worse in the prevailing weather.

CROWNING ACT OF FALTERING STATESMANSHIP.

Dreyfus Has Relinquished His Appeal for a Reversal of the Judgment of the Court Martial. Public Exhibit But Little Interest in the Affair.

Paris, Sept. 19.—The Council of Ministers to-day decided to pardon Dreyfus in principle. The pardon will take effect in a few days.

Dreyfus has relinquished his appeal for a reversal of the judgment of the court-martial.

The announcement has already been discounted by predictions and there was absolutely no excitement displayed anywhere along the boulevard when the newsboys ran along. The newspapers sold quickly, but there was no rush for them. Those who bought the papers sat down in front of the cafes and read the announcement without comment. Everyone expected it, and the decision met with no opposition.

The Droits de l'Homme, Rights of Man, the Socialist organ, said: "Our task remains the same after as before the liberation of Dreyfus, to continue the campaign against all those who are responsible for the lamentable affair."

M. Scheurer-Kestner, the former Vice-President of the Senate and champion of Dreyfus is dead. He was born February 11, 1833, at Mulhouse, Alsace, from which place the Dreyfus family hailed. He was a president of the Chemical Society of Paris, and was a prominent member of a number of other societies. He was political director of the Republique Francaise from 1879 to 1884, and was a Republican in politics. He took a great interest in the improvement of the working classes, and in 1865 found a co-operative society for their benefit. His Republican ideas in 1867 caused him to be sentenced to four months' imprisonment and two thousand francs' fine. He was elected to the National Assembly in 1871, and in 1875 he was first elected to the Senate, of which he afterwards became one of the secretaries and eventually one of the vice-presidents. He was defeated for re-election as vice-president January 13, 1898. He has written extensively on chemistry.

It is said that Dreyfus will be sent abroad before the promulgation of his pardon, in order to avoid demonstrations.

It is expected that the work of the High Courts' Investigating Committee, appointed to enquire into the charges of conspiracy against M. Deroulede and others will take from four to six weeks. When the task is completed the High Court, Senate will reconvene.

English Comments on Coming Race.

London, Sept. 19.—The English papers daily, have been printing ridiculous despatches regarding the international yacht race. The Daily Mail, which a short time ago seriously announced that a number of Americans had gone mad because they could not discover the Shamrock's lines, to-day pictures the whole of New York in an almost similar condition, saying: "We are the most emotional people in the world," and in addition to the yacht race, Admiral Dewey's coming has made the people "frenzied with excitement."

The English people take all this literally, and many unpleasant comments over our lack or control are heard.

Most of the English papers to-day have specials speaking approvingly of the Shamrock's trial yesterday, but The Times' correspondent cables that it compared favorably with the Columbia's performance under similar weather conditions.

THIRSTING FOR GORE!

York Rangers Very Anxious to Fight Aaginst the Boers

VOLUNTEER FOR SERVICE.

And Colonel Lloyd Goes Colonel Sam Hughes, M.P., One Better.

The Gallant Colonel Points Out to the Minister of Militia That the Regiment Has Always Been One of the Most Efficient Rural Battalions in the Country.

Toronto, Sept. 19.—Hurrah for the 12th York Rangers and Col. T. H. Lloyd, for they may go to war in South Africa and whip Oom Paul. That is if they get a chance.

Col. Lloyd has written the Minister of Militia, Hon. Dr. Borden, asking that if Canada decides to send out a regiment to the Transvaal, the honor of being that regiment may fall upon the 12th York Rangers. In support of this request, Col. Lloyd pointed out that the battalion has always been recognized as the most efficient rural battalion in Canada.

In making this request the Colonel has gone Col. Sam Hughes one better. The latter offered to raise a regiment if the Government would sanction such action and send it out to the Transvaal. Col. Lloyd discounts his brother colonel's offer for he is willing to produce a regiment well drilled and full of military ardour.

That this step of Colonel Lloyd's will evoke much interest in every circle in Toronto goes without saying, for the personnel of the regiment embraces this city and every town, village and hamlet in York County. No other battalion spreads out over so much country, no other battalion has members in so many different places.

The Conspiracy Charges.

Paris, Sept. 19.—It is expected that the work of the High Court investigating committee, appointed to enquire into the charges of conspiring to change the form of government brought against M. Deroulede and others, will take from four to six week. When the task is completed the High Court (Senate) will reconvene. It is expected its sessions will take up a month.

A LIVELY MEETING

OVER THE TOWN'S NEW GRANOLITHIC SIDEWALKS.

The Council Take the Matter Up Last Night in Committee Behind Closed Doors, But The Times Gets There All the Same.

The Council met last night in committee to discuss the new granolithic walks which have been laid and had a lively time of it. Engineer Hay was on the carpet and was asked some rather ugly questions as to the alleged wrongdoing of the contractors.

The first matter discussed was the contract for the abutments of the new bridges. It is alleged that either the size of the abutments are not according to contract, or else there is not the quantity of cement used that the specifications called for. The engineer could not give a satisfactory statement in regard to it, and he was given further time to do so. A sub-committee was also appointed to investigate the matter and report at a future meeting.

The next matter discussed was the quality of cement used on the new walks. The specification calls for star cement and a cheaper grade was used which costs 35 cents per barrel less. The engineer was again questioned in regard to this and could give no satisfactory reason for allowing the poorer grade to be used. The committee, after considerable talk, decided to have the engineer make an estimate of the difference in the price with a view to docking the contractors.

It was said openly that some very crooked work has been going on in regard to the quantity of cement used. One of the inspectors, it is alleged, had a box made in which the cement was measured. The box was supposed to hold seven bags, but while the measurement was being made two bags were extracted, so that five bags was supposed to fill the box instead of seven, thus allowing the contractor two bags of cement on each box full. We do not say that this was done, but it is said to have been done.

It is said that the whole trouble was mainly due to the action of the Council in appointing a chairman who was not familiar with the work. It was claimed by some members of the Council that it would not be policy to place a man at the head of the Works Committee who was likely to interfere with the engineer in the discharge of his duty.

The committee, after transacting routine business, adjourned.

BIG MONEY FOR CHARITY.

The Late Cornelius Vanderbilt Gave $500,000 a Year in Benefactions.

New York, Sept. 19.—Cornelius Vanderbilt's vast estate must remain tied up until Alfred Vanderbilt, his second son, can arrive home from Japan, and in the meantime Wm. K. Vanderbilt will manage the property as he has done practically ever since his brother's first illness, three years ago.

Assuming that the estate will amount to $100,000,000, and that it will be devised to the direct heirs, it will pay an inheritance tax to the state of $1,000,000, of which one per cent. or $10,000 will go to Controller Coler, to compensate him for the cost of collection. Another tax upon the estate will be collected as a war tax for the Federal Treasury. The law provides for a tax of two and one-quarter per cent. on bequests of $1,000,000 or more to the children of the testator, four and one-half per cent. on legacies to nephews and neices, and fifteen per cent. on bequests to others than blood relations. If the estate is $100,000,000, therefore, the Government tax will be at least $2,500,000, so that to the state and the nation $3,500,000 will be paid before the property is divided.

The sum that will actually be paid may reach $4,000,000, as the estate collects five per cent. on collaterial bequests. This will probably be the largest tax ever levied on an estate in this country.

New facts in regard to Mr. Vanderbilt's private charities, concerning which he always observed the greatest secrecy, are becoming known. Senator Depew said last night that he probably dispensed $500,000 a year in these benefactions.

Ponton Up for Trial.

Cobourg, Sept. 19.—The Ponton affair is not the cause celebre it was at Napanee. The hotels are not crowded and the public are not partisan. There is a general opinion that nothing more than strict justice should be dispensed.

The court room is reserved solely for jurors and witnesses and the public will not have a chance to see the trial until it is in its final stages.

There are seventy-two jurors on the panel.

Most of the witnesses are already in town, including Mackie, Roach and the two Queen's evidencers, Pare and Holden.

Ponton is putting up at the Dunham Hotel, where he is directly under the wing of his counsel, M. E. Gus Porter. Of course he is under surveillance.

Wilkes and Doherty, the two Pinkerton men, are not expected to arrive until to-morrow.

It looks this morning as if the trial would start this afternoon, Chancellor Boyd having announced his readiness to take up a non-jury case for the short morning session.

It is understood that counsel on both sides would have preferred the case to begin on Wednesday.

Work of the Peace Conference.

The Hague, Sept. 19.—The States General were convened to-day by Queen Wilhelmina, who in a speech from the throne referred to the great work of the Peace Conference.

Her Majesty said she had reason to hope that all the conferring powers would sign the treaties drawn up at the conference.

KILLED BY A BULLET

MR. TOB. FITZGERALD'S DEATH WHILE DUCK SHOOTING.

Shot by a Companion—The Well Known Sportsman Was at Buffalo Lake, N. W. T., When the Sad Event Occurred.

The sad news reached town yesterday morning that Mr. Tobias Fitzgerald, one of Peterborough's best known and most esteemed citizens has been accidently killed while duck shooting in the north-west. The first telegram received by the manager of Mr. Fitzgerald's business was to the effect that Mr. Fitzgerald had been seriously injured, and an hour later a message was received by Mr. Snowden, of the Snowden House, asking him to break the news to Mrs. Fitzgerald that she was a widow, and requesting that two tickets be telegraphed to Moosejaw.

It appears from what can be gathered of the sad affair, that one of the party was shooting at some ducks which suddenly rose in front of them, when the canoe gave a lurch and Mr. Fitzgerald received a portion of the discharge in the side of his head.

The sad affair has cast a gloom over the entire community.

The deceased, who was able to walk from the canoe after the accident, was taken to the "shooting box" and every care and attention given him but he became unconscious and gradually sank, only recovering consciousness towards the last. No inquest was held.

On Tuesday last—one short week ago—a party consisting of Messrs. T. Fitzgerald, Dickson Jewitt, and Clare Gutter on left via the C. P. R. for Buffalo Lake, near Moosejaw, for the purpose of shooting duck and wild geese. This was the spot which Mr. Fitzgerald visited last year and secured such a quantity of game.

The remains are to be sent from Moosejaw this morning and are expected to arrive home Friday night or Saturday morning.

The late Tobias Fitzgerald was born in Smith township on May 29th, 1838. His father, the late Edward Fitzgerald, of Smith, was born in Ireland on February 19th, 1807 and came to Canada with the Robison emigration. He was married on February 8th, 1831 to Miss Jane Switzer, whose parents came to Canada at the same time. The surviving children are Gideon Fitzgerald of Nebraska; Thos. E. of Peterborough; Mrs. Matthew Sanderson of Chicago; John, of Smith township; William of Buffalo; Samuel of Brockville; Robert of town and James of South Carolina.

The deceased was united in marriage to Mrs. Edward Robison in 1876. His widow still survives. He has been a resident of Peterborough for about 40 years, having followed the trade of carriage building on first coming to Peterborough and afterwards going into the wood and then the coal business, finally dropping the carriage making and adding the livery business to that of dealing in coal and wood. His father died on July 17th 1882 and his mother on May 23rd, 1888.

KILLED HIS WIFE.

They Lived Amid Squalor and Poverty and She Died at the Hands of Her Husband.

Smith's Falls, Sept. 19.—Saturday night, in a brawl, Thomas Blake beat his wife with a stick of cordwood and she died of her wounds that night or Sunday, and he confessed on Monday.

The pair were 70 and 65 years of age both drank and quarrelled and lived in the most miserable house in town, in town, in squalor and poverty. Saturday night they were drinking with Henry McGaw, and Blake said he put McGaw out and beat his wife because of their conduct. He says he burned the stick he used to beat them with, and admits that Sunday morning he carried water up and washed off the floor and wiped off his wife's face. He also took her up a drink then, he says, and she spoke to him, and he claims that she spoke to him in the afternoon as well. The crime has revived memories of the death of Blake's first wife, which took place about 30 years ago, under very similiar circumstances. There had been a drunken bout, an outside man was connected with it, it was on Saturday night also, and on Monday the death of the woman was reported. No inquest was held then, and nothing was done about it.

Wild Turkeys in Scotland.

London, Sept. 19.—A naturalist at present rusticating in Lochfyneside writes that at no very distant date Argyllshire should be known as the turkey county. Some years ago Lord Lorne introduced to the woods about Inverary a breed of Canadian wild turkeys that have bred with remarkable rapidity, and spread over almost a fourth of the country already. A new game bird of great value has thus been naturalized in a few years, and the stranger who never heard of wild turkeys in the Highland woods is naturally astonished to hear the gobble of the cocks, and see great coveys of the big birds in places far removed from houses.

Prince and Princess Escape from Death.

Perth, Scotland, Sept. 19.—The Prince and Princess Hohenlohe-Langenburg narrowly escaped death while going to Balmoral to visit Queen Victoria. Their train collided with another train at the station. The royal saloon carriage was half telescoped. As the Prince and Princess occupied the rear end of the car they suffered only a severe shock, and proceeded to Balmoral. No one was seriously injured.

Ernest William Frederic Charles Maximilian, hereditary Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, married Princess Alexandra Louise Olga Victoria, third daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, April 20, 1896. His father is the Govern-General of Alsace-Lorraine.

SOUTH AFRICAN CRISIS

One Story From There Represents the Boers as Wavering.

A CONCILIATORY MESSAGE.

But Other Opinions Are That the Transvaal Wi'l Begin the Fighting Soon.

Troops Continue to Leave Cape Town for Kimberley—The Uitlander Press Sees Nothing But War Ahead—Nothing Definitely Known of When Cabinet Meets.

London, Sept. 19.—There is an unverified Cape Town rumor to-day that the Boers have delivered another message to the British High Commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner, more conciliatory than yesterday's reply. The rumor, however, fails to obtain much credence and is not taken as in anyway mitigating the seriousness of the crisis.

The Uitlander press sees nothing but war ahead and urges the Uitlanders to leave immediately.

The London press is now inclined to take the view that the recent action on the part of the Boers does not make war a certainty, though it does place the British Cabinet in a position where it must take steps so aggressive that war or utter, ignominious submission will be the only alternatives remaining to the Transvaal, and is by no means so persistent in urging the Government to move hastily, except in the matter of hurrying troops to the probable scene of action.

The Pall Mall Gazette prints a despatch from Cape Town which says: "The general impression is that the Boers will at once take the initiative, and an attack is expected at any hour."

Troops continue to leave Cape Town for Kimberley and the north, and the first-class cruiser Terrible, sailing from Portsmouth for China to-day is reported to have been ordered to go by way of Cape Town instead of Suez.

Nothing is yet known regarding the definite date of the expected Cabinet council.

London, Tuesday, Sept. 19.—Mr. Chamberlain came to London from Birmingham yesterday afternoon, and spent the evening at the Colonial Office. While there he received a despatch from Lord Salisbury, who is at Hatfield House, and sent a special messenger with despatches to the Premier. There has been a lively interchange of despatches between the Foreign, War, and Colonial Offices, but no summons has yet been issued for a Cabinet Council.

Long despatches were sent last evening to the Vicaroy of India, Lord Curzon; and to the British High Commissioner in South Africa, Sir Alfred Milner.

Field Marshal Lord Wolseley returned to London yesterday, and immediately repaired to the War Office where he remained busily employed the greater part of the day.

War risks on consignments to the Transvaal were quoted at a premium of 50 per cent. yesterday, and all the markets were very sensitive and excited.

The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says: "It is reported here that Mr. Conyngham Greene, British diplomatic agent at Pretoria, fears that an attempt will be made to dynamite the British agency."

Boers Mass Troops.

The special despatches from South Africa confirm the report telegraphed yesterday that the Boers are massing artillery in positions commanding Laing's Neck. Small Boer detachments occupy positions above Buffalo river.

The members of the Afrikander Band in Cape Town intend to convene the Bund in Congress to consider the situation. A Bloemfontein paper reports the dismissal of several Englishmen from the Bloemfontein Police Force because of their refusal to promise to serve on the Commando.

A Cape Town despatch says: Boer spies infest all the border towns. Two thousand troops will be despatched to Kimberley within a week; 1,500 started to-night and others will go forward to-morrow.

The Daily Telegraph publishes a communication from a military correspondent, who, discussing the effect of the Orange Free State throwing its lot in with the Transvaal, says: "In the event of war, this will greatly increase our difficulties, and will lengthen the duration of the campaign, but the work will be accomplished, and the Union Jack will float over consolidated South Africa between the Zambesi and the Cape. The principal danger which besets the British position is a [illegible] of hostilities, enabling the Boers to secure a few minor successes, which would bring down upon us every Dutchman in South Africa; and, probably, the statement that the Boers are sending compressed forage to the Natal border seems to signify that they will not wait for new grass, but are preparing for an immediate advance. For this we certainly, are not yet prepared. It is doubtful if a few troops and volunteers now in Natal could even maintain the defensive."

The Cape frontier, from Mafeking to Kimberley, including the diamond fields, is practically defenceless, and a combined attack by the Orange Free State and the Transvaal might result in disaster and the retreat of our forces toward Durban, leaving the border towns in the hands of the enemy. Small wonder is it that these towns are alarmed. The movement of British troops into Natal has not begun a moment too soon."

ENFORCEMENT OF THE LIQUOR LICENSE ACT.

The Montreal Witness recently criticised the importing of a policeman from Montreal to bring the Ottawa liquor sellers to justice. Our contemporary goes on to say:—

"This fact furnishes a curious commentary on the manner in which the police perform their duties in cities. Why, it will be asked, could not the Ottawa police look after their own liquor selling delinquents without bringing a man all the way from Montreal? Because, it will be answered, the local policemen are well known personally to all the hotel and saloon keepers, who would not admit or serve them. But there are other reasons. In all cities a policeman who informs on persons selling liquor on Sunday or during prohibited hours is a marked man, and as hotel and saloon keepers are among the most active, and, unfortunately, influential among ward politicians, they find a way of making things so unpleasant for the informer that his life is made a burden to him, if he is not compelled to resign.

In Ontario cities the police are under the control of a board of commissioners, composed of the police magistrate, judge and mayor, and are not supposed to be amenable to aldermanic interference, and in towns like Peterborough the Council control the actions of the police. At the same time we do not believe it is the business of the police to enforce the liquor license law unless infractions of that law come under their notice in the usual course of duty. The provincial government employs a license inspector in each district, and it is his duty personally to secure the enforcement of the act. He has power to go into any hotel or saloon and demand entrance to the bar room or search any part of the premises to see that liquor is not being sold during prohibited hours. It has been the custom of these inspectors in some districts to shoulder their duties off on the police or to engage informers to do the work, and the latter method invariably leads to trouble, because the informers have a personal interest in securing convictions, and not infrequently uses stratagems to induce hotel men to break the law in order to make a case. Where the license inspectors perform their duty, as they do in some cities and districts, this sort of thing is avoided, and the law is far more effectively enforced, because a license-holder who is discovered selling liquor during prohibited hours by the inspector never fights a case. It is not to his interest to do so, nor is it to the interest of the inspector to cause a license holder to be summoned unless he is certain that he has broken the law. We believe that the police officials should confine themselves to the maintenance of the peace and the protection of property, and leave the enforcement of the act to the government official whose special duty it is to see that the act is enforced, namely, the license inspector. That is part of the work for which he draws his salary and he should perform it. Of course, if a police officer in the ordinary discharge of his duty sees that, or any other law, transgressed, it is his duty to take action. But it is not the business of the members of the police force to employ their time in working up cases for the license inspector.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 30 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wus when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be sp'iled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never forgit of I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wus only a scant hundard and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves pertickleler on, for they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wus yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral procession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wus feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wus a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wus gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 200 yards from the upper turn, and there wus no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wus Jim a-comin lickety spit. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wus comin after us wus like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let 'em go for all they wus wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we was fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wus comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wus.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist raced back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrard as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there for a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wus in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wus, I'm afeard I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I was dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wus killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hundred pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wus, and so wus Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wus up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wus ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wus only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all those golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? [illegible] Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on [illegible]

BEARDED WOMEN.

Designing men, through alluring and cunningly worded advertisements, constantly endeavor to work upon the feelings of sick and ailing women by inviting them "to write to a woman (!) and secure a woman's sympathy." It is well to remember that the best sympathy is to be had at home and not from strangers, perhaps hundreds of miles distant. The object of the sick is to get well, and however precious sympathy may be, it never yet cured a seriously afflicted woman. While the sympathy of your milliner or dressmaker might be appreciated and be just as beneficial, if not more so, than sympathy from a stranger, yet it can not effect your cure if you are an ailing woman.

It is loudly proclaimed through the press that "a woman can best understand a woman's ailments," and on this ground sick women are invited to "write to a woman" and get the benefit of a woman's advice. The sort of "understanding of her ailments" wanted by a sick woman is a trained medical understanding. If a woman has this trained medical knowledge she understands woman's ailments not as a woman, but as a physician. If she is not a doctor she cannot understand the ailments at all, and cannot treat them successfully, because she lacks the necessary training.

As far as known, there is no regularly qualified woman physician connected with any proprietary medicine especially designed for women—no one, therefore qualified by learning and experience, to advise on questions of disease and its cure.

It is certain that there is no one, man or woman, connected with any "put-up" medicine for women, excepting only Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, who, like Dr. Pierce, is a regular graduated and qualified physician, and who has, like him, devoted more than thirty years to the special study and treatment of diseases of women.

For more than thirty years Dr. R. V. Pierce, a regularly graduated doctor, has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. On his staff are nearly a score of regularly graduated, experienced, skilled physicians, each of whom is a specialist in his chosen class of diseases. Every letter addressed to Dr. Pierce as above, has prompt, conscientious attention, is regarded as sacredly confidential and is answered in a plain envelope so your private affairs are kept safe from prying eyes

Following are extracts from the report of Capt. T. H. Trethewey, M.E., upon the Company's perties which are now being vigorously developed, and upon which will be installed the 6 compressor plant, which was purchased from the Canadicn Rand Drill Co. on the 5th inst. fo mediate delivery.

MR. TRETHEWEY SAYS;

"The vein on these properties is well defined, and, where exposed by the workings near the line between the West and Virginia, averages fully 18 ft. in width. The gauge consists of a somewhat crushed and iron-stained quartz, sparingly alized with Galena, Copper and Iron Pyrites, with here and there small amount of Blend and Graphite disseminated throug

"On the Western Hill, a shaft has been sunk to a depth of 27 ft. on the foot wall, and the ledge has been expose cross-cut to its full width, it here appears to be divided into hanging and foot wall portions by a seam of somewhat decom clay material which appears to dip toward the hanging wall, cutting out the leaner and allowing the richer portions of th to increase with depth."

"Samples taken in this shaft, across an 8 ft. face lying next to the foot well, gave an average return of $7.00 in Gold $1.35 in Silver, making a total of $8.35 per ton, while the balance of the vein gave a return of $2.00 in Gold and 70 cents in Sil making a total of $2.70 per ton for a width of ten feet, so that $5.25 may be considered a fair average for the full width of the ve

"The conclusion I have drawn after a thorough examination and study of the facts as here presented is, that judicious d opement should locate extensive bodies of pay ore, as even if only the 8 ft. next to the foot wall be extracted, the values tinuing in depth as there is no reason why they should not, while leaner portions may be encountered they could be left mine to support the walls, and you would still have a proposition of unlimited tonnage well worthy of judicious expend in exposing its resources."

"The general conditions, elevation, etc., are so favorable that mining operations can be carried on for many years by si tunnelling into the mountain and following the trend of the vein, and hundreds of thousands of tons of ore can readily be available without the use of hoisting or pumping machinery."

"Situated as these claims are about 2000 ft. above the bank of the Okanagan River, with a natural outlet for Ærial or o tramway, and only about three miles from the "Black Hawk" Claim, which is within easy reach of the river, the question transportation of ore from the mine to the mill could be easily arranged."

"With an electric plant established at Dog Falls, which is possibly ten miles distant, ample power could be generated nominal cost for all purposes, and by adopting the most modern methods of mining, milling and concentrating, together with an unlimited supply of ore, the cost of production should be reduced to a minimum."

"If the present promising assurances are borne out, the opening up of the three levels could develope at least a three years' supply of ore for a plant of large capacity, and I would stongly recomend the erection and installation of a mill of not less than from 250 to 300 tons daily capacity."

"With cheap power an unlimited supply of ore and a plant capable of handling the quantity I have suggested, the cost of mining and milling ought not to exceed from $1.50 to $2.00 per ton, and under capable management it should be kept within the lower limits."

"Thus even if the lowest values, $3.05 be taken as a basis of calculation and allowing that 85 p. c. of this can be saved, it would yield a profit of $1.09 for each ton of ore treated, but I am of opinion that much higher values may be confidently expected, and if there is a profit winner in the camp, all conditions considered, this one can be conscientiously recommended to the investing public."

At the next Annual Meeting of the Company, which will be held on the 6th day of November next, several of Montreal's most prominent business men will accept Directorship.

ENFORCEMENT OF THE LIQUOR LICENSE ACT.

The Montreal Witness recently criticized the importing of a policeman from Montreal to bring the Ottawa liquor selers to justice. Our contemporary goes on to say:—

"This fact furnishes a curious commentary on the manner in which the police perform their duties in cities. Why, it will be asked, could not the Ottawa police look after their own liquor selling delinquents without bringing a man all the way from Montreal? Because it will be answered, the local policemen are well known personally to all the hotel and saloon keepers, who would not admit or serve them. But there are other reasons. In all cities a policeman who informs on persons selling liquor on Sunday or during prohibited hours is a marked man and the hotel and saloon keepers are among the most active and unfortunately influential among ward politicians they find a way of making things so unpleasant for the informer that his life is made a burden to him, if he is not compelled to resign.

In Ontario cities the police are under the control of a board of commissioners, composed of the police magistrate, judge and mayor and are not supposed to be amendable to aldermanic interference, and in towns like Peterborough the Council control the actions of the police. At the same time we do not believe it is the business of the police to enforce the liquor license law unless infractions of that law come under their notice in the usual course of duty. The provincial government employs a license inspector in each district, and it is his duty personally to secure the enforcement of the act. He has power to go into any hotel or saloon and demand entrance to the bar room or search any part of the premises to see that liquor is not being sold during prohibited hours. It has been the custom of these inspectors in some districts to shoulder their duties off on the police or to engage informers to do the work and the latter method invariably leads to trouble, because the informers have a personal interest in securing convictions and not infrequently use stratagems to induce hotel men to break the law in order to make a case. Where the license inspectors perform their duty, as they do in some cities and districts, this sort of thing is avoided, and the law is far more effectively enforced, because a license-holder who is discovered selling liquor during prohibited hours by the inspector never fights a case. It is not to his interest to do so, nor is it to the interest of the inspector to cause a license holder to be summoned unless he is certain that he has broken the law. We believe that the police officials should confine themselves to the maintenance of the peace and the protection of property, and leave the enforcement of the act to the government official whose special duty it is to see that the act is enforced, namely, the license inspector. That is part of the work for which he draws his salary and he should perform it. Of course, if a police officer in the ordinary discharge of his duty sees that, or any other law, transgressed, it is his duty to take action. But it is not the business of the members of the police force to employ their time in working up cases for the license inspector.

THE REPUBLIC'S FEAR.

French Bonapartist Leader Says it is the Cult of the Sword.

IT WILL LIBERATE FRANCE.

Every Republican Feels That the Sword Alone Can Unravel the Gordan Knot.

M. Paul de Cassagnac Argues That Another Napoleon is Needed to Overthrow the Republic and Redress the Numerous Abuses in France—The Article Causing the Greatest Excitement in Paris.

Paris, Sept. 18.—In his own paper, L'Autorite, and under his own signature, M. Paul de Cassagnac, the Bonapartist leader in the Chamber of Deputies, presents the following view of the situation in France:—

"A distinctive trait of the Republican party in this troublesome time is the fear of the sword. The sword is its nightmare. For every Republican feels that the sword alone can unravel the Gordan knot.

"In other words, in some manner or other, the army must interfere in the affairs of this unhappy country. It is the liberator impatiently awaited. In a word, the sword is Caesar. Public opinion is disgusted with the republic. It searches in every direction, and in every man who stands higher above the horizon than his fellows it expects to find a Caesar.

Caesar's Welcome.

"For this reason General Gallieni received a great ovation.

"For the same reason Major Marchand was welcomed in a triumphal manner.

"What could be more disproportioned that the idiotic, extravagant reception prepared for Marchand, who only accomplished a most brilliant second-rate exploit!

"He could not have been more highly honored had he brought back the two lost provinces, Alsace and Lorraine, in his forage cap.

Cult of the Sword.

"But, believe me, the cult of the sword dominated everything, and in seeing Gallieni return and Marchand disembark, people asked themselves, insensibly, without reflection, 'Is this the liberator?'

"One might say that the people hold the imperial mantle between febrile hands and scrutinize the passerby to see whether it would not be right to place it on his shoulders.

"And for an opposite reason just as the people reach out for the sword, just so much does the Republican party rush to fly from it.

Superbly Awkward.

"And it does it with a superb awkwardness which shows how lively are its apprehensions.

On the one hand Gallieni was forbidden to stay in Paris, although his presence was required on a commission of classification.

"On the other hand Major Marchand was ordered off to the solitary shores of Brittany. Elsewhere Captain Barretier was packed off to the provinces.

"That is to say, that they are treated as dangerous criminals, and our heroes are to be under police surveillance, just as if they were graduates from the penitentiary.

"The Republican party fears and hates the army because it sees that the soldiery is a menace to the disgraceful regime which prevails.

"The army, for its part, is beginning after two years of unheard of outrages to understand this condition.

"When it is thoroughly convinced of it the sword will leap from the scabbard of its own accord."

LABORI VISITS LONDON.

London, Sept. 18.—It is reported that Maitre Labori and Madame Dreyfus visited Folkstone, five miles from Dover, Saturday and engaged apartments where Madame Dreyfus and her children will dwell in the event of her husband's pardon, M. Labori is reported to have been much affected by the kindly expressions towards himself and Captain Dreyfus while at Folkestone.

STOLE A MAN'S WIFE.

A Provincial Land Surveyor in Trouble Up North.

Owen Sound, Sept. 18.—P. C. Herron left on Saturday night for Gorrie to bring back John D. McNab, a provincial land surveyor, who is charged with the abduction of a married woman, the wife of Geo. Perkins, a carpenter of this town. McNab and the woman left here about four months ago, and it is supposed, they spent the intervening time on the Manitoulin Island, though no trace of them could be found until quite recently, when they were located at Gorrie, and McNab was arrested on a warrant sworn out by the husband of the missing woman.

McNab had only completed a five year sentence in Kingston penitentiary for defrauding a young woman out of considerable property here. The Perkins woman left a family of four children. McNab will get a preliminary hearing on Tuesday morning.

After Tramps.

Provincial Detective Rogers and a quartette of assistants passed east on the Grand Trunk the other day on a tramp hunting outing. They commenced work at the east end of the province and work westward. The officers are due in this neighborhood in a few days. In the meantime the tramps who desire their freedom should

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $19.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

The Telltale Eye.

"No matter how self possessed a man may appear on the surface," said a close observer, "there are certain involuntary movements by which he will always betray himself to minute scrutiny. To illustrate the point, here's a neat little parlor trick in mind reading:

Seat yourself directly in front of your subject and tell him to hook his finger tips together before his chest and pull as hard as he can, at the same time thinking intently of some letter of the alphabet. Then look fixedly at his right eye and repeat the letters aloud, beginning with A. When you come to the one he is thinking about, a swift, indescribable change will flash across the pupil. It is purely unconscious and involuntary, and no human being alive can prevent it. The purpose of the finger tip pulling is merely to distract his thoughts and keep him from baffling you by concentration of will. Try it some time."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Bringing Up the Average.

Old Rufus Gogblink, a slow, deliberate sort of man, dropped in one day in a casual sort of way to see his friend, Stephen Nobbler. It was the first time he had been in to see Stephen in 43 years.

"Um-m! You don't come in very often, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"No," said Mr. Gogblink.

But he went in to see his friend Mr. Nobbler again the very next day.

"Um-m! You're coming in pretty often now, Rufus," said Mr Nobbler.

"Ye-es," said Mr. Gogblink. "I'm sort o' bringing up the average."—New

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Therese," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondaines, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 56-year-old baldheaded Cæsar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

Where the Pot of Gold Is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annetta Halliday-Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—Youth's Companion.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface, then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

"Talk about the seven sleepers," muttered the angry tragedian; "I'll bet there are 7,000 of them between Albany and New York."

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the hentedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous; and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 25 cents each, but with $85 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he has finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

Smoking In the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

Fair Singer's Irrepressible Younger Sister (in a loud whisper)—Can't you sing something that will take him back to the home of his old age?—Harper's Bazar.

Vigorous Language.

"I told you," said Sammy Snaggs, "that man talked straight from the shoulder."

"Samuel," said Mr. Snaggs severely, "you should not use slang."

"But, father, this was a deaf and dumb man, and he used the sign language."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph

How They Used to Kill.

In repairing an old house in Dartford, England, not long ago the workmen found several [illegible] death warrants, bearing the signature of the Duke of Portland, minister of King George III. One of them, dated June, 17[illegible], gives an idea of what legal hanging and quartering were like in those days. It runs:

"Whereas, James O'Coigley, having been attainted of high treason and had sentence passed upon him to be drawn upon a hurdle to the place of execution and to be there hanged by the neck, but not until he is dead, but that, being alive, he shall be taken down and his bowels taken out and burned before his face, that his head shall be severed from his body and his body divided into four parts, and that his head and body shall be disposed of as we think fit, and whereas we think fit to remit that part of the sentence directing the burning of his bowels and dividing the body into four parts, our will and pleasure is that he shall be drawn and hanged and have his head severed from his body."

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore!" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT.

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on their alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was "out after elephants" and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums.

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fed the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

Verdict as Rendered.

"Gentlemen of the jury," asked the clerk of the court, "have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman. "The verdict of the jury is that the lawyers have mixed this case up so that we don't know anything at all about it."—Philadelphia North American.

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an asistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $379 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was then allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

Reciprocal.

"Yes, sir," remarked the [illegible] man, "I look to see an Englishman come over here and drop his h's once in awhile."

"Yes," answered the man who has been to Epsom downs, "and he likes for us to go over there and drop our —all r's."

How They Used to Kill.

In repairing an old house in Dartford, England, not long ago the workmen found several ancient death warrants, bearing the signature of the Duke of Portland, minister of King George III. One of them, dated June, 1798, gives an idea of what legal hanging and quartering were like in those days. It runs:

"Whereas, James O'Coigley, having been attainted of high treason and had sentence passed upon him to be drawn upon a hurdle to the place of execution and to be there hanged by the neck, but not until he is dead, but that, being alive, he shall be taken down and his bowels taken out and burned before his face, that his head shall be severed from his body and his body divided into four parts, and that his head and body shall be disposed of as we think fit, and whereas we think fit to remit that part of the sentence directing the burning of his bowels and dividing the body into four parts, our will and pleasure is that he shall be drawn and hanged and have his head severed from his body."

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore!" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT.

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on their alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was out after elephants and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums.

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fed the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A black spanial, which answers to the name of "Darkey." The dog has long ears, and about five years old. The finder will be rewarded by leaving it at Mrs Chambo's, 95 Rubidge street.

On Thursday and Saturday the Knitting Works will sell a heavy all Wool 2 and 1 rib stocking in 8, 8½, 9, 9½ and 10, for 19c. per pair. The quality of this stocking is far above the usual bargain stocking as it is possible to imagine. We make them on our own electric power machines.

Route Boys Wanted.

We want two route boys to deliver the Times in the mornings. One hour each morning. Wages 60c per week. Apply at Times Bookstore at once.

Board.

Good board and rooms for three or four gentlemen at 20 Queen street. Two minutes walk from Ontario Bank.

A Risky Joke

About seven o'clock on Monday evening an eccentric person caused considerable excitement to several persons who happened to witness his conduct. He was standing on the Otonabee bridge, and threw his hat into the water below, and immediately vaulted over the bridge after it. It was not a case of suicide because he could swim. He had all his clothes on, which greatly hampered him in his efforts to reach the shore. He landed on the Ashburnham side, apparently considerably exhausted. Our informant stated the man was a stranger, and looked like a commercial traveller, being well dressed, but had the appearance of having been drinking heavily. It was a risky joke.

Canadian Arizona Mines.

We call attention to the advertisement of Messrs. Eggert & Rowlatt, official brokers for Ontario, Toronto, of the Canadian-Arizona Mines (gold and copper) being the International Gold Co., and the Northeastern Copper Co. The head offices of both companies are in Montreal. A limited amount of treasury stock in these companies is offered for sale at [illegible] cents per share. People who have money to invest should subscribe at once, in order to get in on the ground floor.

KICKED BY A HORSE.

Serious Accident to Ex-Councillor James Wood.

Mr. James Wood of Concession No. 1, Otonabee, ex-councillor of the township, met with an accident which, it is feared, will have fatal results. Mr. Wood on Sunday afternoon was removing a horse from one field to another, and during the operation was violently kicked by both feet of the animal. The blows struck him in the front of the body, one blow striking over the region of the heart, and the other over that of the liver. Mr. Woods was rendered unconscious for a time. Medical aid was at once summoned, Dr. Shaw, of Keene, and later Dr. Coughlin, of Hastings, was called in consultation. Though the external injuries are of no account the internal injuries are resulting in dropsy of the pericardium, or sack enclosing heart, and other serious conditions are such that the attending physicians fear that fatal results will follow. These are more likely to ensue, seeing that the injured gentleman is advanced in years, being 73 years of age.

HARNESSING FENELON FALLS.

A Large Force of Men at Work on the Power House.

There is likely to be a lively rivalry between the Burleigh Falls scheme for transmitting power to Lindsay, and the scheme for obtaining energy at Fenelon Falls. Mr. Culverwell states that his company has been formed, and all details arranged. Mr. Thomas Robison, of Fenelon Falls, who was in town and who called on the Times yesterday, told us that a large force of men are at work on the new power house, which the Lindsay syndicate were constructing at the Falls. A heavy cement foundation is being placed in position, a portion of the old Howry mill being torn down to make room for it.

Mr. Robison says the people of the Falls are doing everything that can be done to prevent the power from being taken away, as they naturally feel that it will do the village no good. It is said that Reeve McArthur has started a petition to the Grand Trunk Railway, which is being largely signed, praying that the Company will refuse the transmission people pole rights along the line of the railway to Lindsay. It is, however, hardly probable that the railway company will pay attention to such a request, as they will simply view the matter from a business standpoint. The more manufacturers that Lindsay gets the better it will be for the railway.

PERSONAL.

Mr T Robison, of Fenelon Falls, was in town yesterday and favored the Times with a call.

Mrs Samuel Heap, of Buffalo, has returned home after spending three weeks with Mrs Harry Butcher, of Otonabee.

Mr Keefer, of the Norwood Register, was in town yesterday.

Mr Wm O'Brien, clerk of Douro, was in town yesterday.

Mr R Rhodes, a nephew of Hon Cecil Rhodes, the South African empire builder, was in town yesterday, a guest at the Oriental. Mr Rhodes gave the Times a call.

Miss Pearl Barnham, of Millbrook, is visiting friends in town.

Mrs Neil Sinclair, Sherbrooke street, has gone to Ottawa to visit friends.

Mr and Mrs Augustus Montgomery, of Perry Sound, are visiting with Mrs Jas Montgomery, 1,000 Water street.

Mrs Ivory, wife of Mr Wm Ivory, of the C P R, arrived home yesterday from a pleasant visit to friends in Assinaboi.

Sturgeon Falls "Colonization" says: Mr O'Brien, of Peterborough, is the guest of his brother, Rev Father O'Brien, at the Presbytery here.

Dr A Letellier left yesterday morning for Seneca Falls, N Y, where he will practice his profession.

GOOD COFFEE MAKER.

Experience With the Berry.

"I have gained twenty-five pounds since I left off coffee and began drinking Postum Food Coffee in its place.

"I had become very thin in flesh and suffered tortures with heartburn, was a nervous wreck with headache practically all the time until one dreadful day when the good doctor told me I must quit drinking coffee, as he had nothing left to try, to relieve me.

"I could not drink tea and had tried everything else, even Postum, but put it by at the first trial, because it was tasteless.

"Forced to it again, I determined to see if it could not be made palatable and found at once that when I followed directions and boiled it long enough, that I not only liked it but gave it to my husband for several days without his finding it out. I have the name of making splendid coffee, and we always used the best, but of late I have given Postum to guests many times in place of coffee and have never been detected yet.

"Our four children have not drank coffee for three years, and all have gained health and flesh since using Postum. One son, who was always sick, has been greatly benefitted by its use, and as above stated, I have gained twenty-five pounds since taking up Postum. I am healthier to-day than I have been for years and give Postum all the credit; please do not use my name in public."

POOR JADED FRANCE!

Dreyfusards to Continue the Agitation Against the Generals

THEY NOW SEEK REVENGE

And Will Not Allow Peace to be Bought With Pardon of Dreyfus.

"Pardon: What Then?"—Leading Organ of the Dreyfusard Party Publishes an Article by a Distinguished Journalist Who Was a Leader in the Revision Movement.

Paris, Sept. 20.—The Aurore, the leading organ of the Dreyfusard body, to-day publishes an article by Mr. Francis de Pressense, the distinguished journalist, who from the first was a leader in the revision movement. The article is headed, "Pardon—and what afterward?"

The writer says: "If the President, by pardoning Dreyfus, wishes to spare France the ineffaceable shame of a judicial crime, his exercise of his prerogative called mercy, so far from impairing the necessary work of justice, will only prepare and facilitate it, for we must speak straight out.

Will Not Stop Agitation.

"If it was imagined that immunity for criminals could be purchased by pardoning innocent men; if it was thought that the friends of law would barter amnesty to the scoundrels who perpetrated these crimes for the bruised body of the man from whom they have torn out the soul, then we throw from us this degrading and deceitful offer. Dreyfus would be the first to reject as an infamy such traffic with his honor.

"No. The pardoning of Dreyfus can only be the natural, legitimate, and spontaneous action by which the representatives of the civil power refuse to associate themselves with the obstinate iniquity committed by the military judges.

After The Generals.

"As for us, we shall pursue with increased ardor the task of public salvation to which we have devoted ourselves. There have been crimes and offences committed in obscurity, by a gang of Pretorian conspirators with Mercier at its head. We are going to pursue more energetically than ever the work of obtaining their chastisement."

M Pressense goes on to declare that when the Generals have been punished the Dreyfusards will continue the campaign "until courts-martial have been abolished, and iron fires have been carried into the sores of the diplomatic corps and society."

The foregoing article clearly outlines the militant attitude of the Dreyfusards and shows that France will not be allowed to rest quietly, even though Dreyfus be set at liberty.

An anti-Dreyfusard organ publishes a long story asserting that President Loubet signed the decree of pardon a week ago after an interview between M. Joseph Reinach and the Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the result of which was that the letter insisted upon the President signing the decree, which was done, the paper declares, at the Cabinet Council September 12.

This story is improbable, its object obviously being to bring discredit upon the President and the premier, by making it appear that they are completely "under the thumb of the Jews." It can be regarded as certain that the decree was only signed yesterday, because it could not be signed until the Court of Revision had given its decision on the Dreyfus appeal, or until Dreyfus had withdrawn the appeal.

MR. FITZGERALD'S DEATH

Further Particulars of the Event Which Everybody Deplores

There is little further to be added to what already has been published regarding the deplorable accident which cost Mr. Fitzgerald his life, and which so shocked the community. It would appear from a despatch received yesterday that the accident occurred on Saturday and Mr. Fitzgerald survived until Monday. It is not known yet who fired the fatal shot.

A letter was received yesterday from Mr. Dickson Jewitt, written on Sept. 9th. It stated that the party were just leaving for Buffalo Lake at 9 a m, so that it is now known that the accident occurred on the occasion of the first day's hunt, which the party were entering upon with a great deal of enthusiasm, as at Moosejaw they had most encouraging reports about the game, one party having secured 100 duck and 5 geese the day before.

The party, which consisted of Messrs Fitzgerald, Jewett and Gutterson, was to have been joined by Mr W Eyres, of Peterborough, who has been several weeks in the country looking after his farming interests. Mr Eyres told the Times on the eve of his departure that he was to join the party at Buffalo Lake, and spoke glowingly of the great sport that was to follow.

The remains are expected to arrive in Peterborough on Friday night, and the funeral will take place from his late residence on Saturday.

BRITISH CABINET MEETS

On Friday and Will Then Discuss What to Do With Kruger.

MORE BRITISH TROOPS GO.

Arrangements Completed for Sending an Army Corps to South Africa.

The Arrest of Boer Officials by the Portuguese is Likely to Create Serious Complications—Uitlanders are Weary of the Tension and Want Negotiations Broken.

London, Sept. 20.—The Transvaal and Orange Free State officials are urging the British residents to leave Pretoria, as they fear that the young Africanders may get out of hand.

More British Troops.

It is said arrangements have been completed for sending a full army corps to South Africa.

The Transvaal has just got 1,600,000 cartridges from Orange Free State.

Kruger Wants Mediation.

It is said Kruger has unofficially approached three Europea powers, asking for their good offices and also that the Netherlands is privately trying to arrange a peaceful solution.

Boers Indignant.

Pretoria became excited and indignant at the receipt of rumors launched in London that Great Britain contemplates proposing a new convention, demanding that the Transvaal forts be dismantled and burghers partially disarmed. If it was true, said Secretary Reitz, war would be inevitable.

The Free State commandants are discussing the position with the Transvaal commandant general.

The meeting of the Free State's Volksraad to-morrow (Thursday) will have an important influence upon the situation.

War With Afghans?

A curious rumor is spreading in the lower ranks of the army that Great Britain will be involved with Afghanstan as well as the Transvaal.

A rumor from Pietermaritzburg, Natal, says that the Boers have purchased cyanide of potassium to poison the streams in the Transvaal likely to be used by British troops.

Boer troops now control both the Beira and Newcastle railways as they enter Transvaal territory.

The Stubborn Parliament.

A despatch to the Central News from Pietermaritzbuag, Natal, says that trustworthy advices from Pretoria indicate that the Governments of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State are in favor of a peaceful settlement by the acceptance of the British proposals. The Volksraad of the Transvaal refuses, however, to sanction a settlement on this basis. President Kruger, knowing that he can depend on a large body of popular support, may resort to a coup d'etat, proroguing the Volksraad and continuing the negotiations himself.

Complications.

Cape Town, Sept. 20.—The arrest of Boer officials by the Portuguese is regarded as likely to cause serious complications.

The Bund of women is preparing a peace appeal to Queen Victoria.

Martial Law.

London, Sept. 20.—The second edition of the Times prints a despatch from Johannesburg, dated yesterday, saying: "Outwardly, Johannesburg is quiet. The prevailing feeling, however, is one of intense uneasiness, owing to the possibility of martial law being proclaimed at any moment. It probably will be proclaimed at the end of the week. It is said that when this is done the Government will insist on all persons unfavorable to the Boers leaving within 48 hours."

Chamberlain's New Demand.

The same correspondent says that a person having access to the inner circles at Pretoria tells him that a further despatch from Mr Chamberlain was handed to the Transvaal Government Sept. 13, demanding the dismantling of the Boers forts, and reduction of the armament by 75 per cent. The Boers are described as greatly perturbed and keeping the matter secret until they shouid have decided on a plan of action.

The same rumor was current in London yesterday, but nothing has been ascertained tending to confirm it, and, in spite of the Times correspondent's reiteration, it is looked upon as improbable.

BELGIANS AID BOERS.

London, Sept. 20.—A despatch from Pretoria says that at a meeting of Belgians there a corps was enthusiastically formed to help the Boers in case of war.

Secretary of State Reitz is quoted as saying that, in case of war, the aliens could remain in the Transvaal, provided they guaranteed their good behaviour.

The presence of the Orange Free States officers at Pretoria is confirmed. Numerous field cornets are at the Boer capital.

IN STATU QUO.

London, Sept. 20.—Great Britain's relations with the Transvaal remains unchanged, and, so far as the former concerned the situation is not likely to take on a new phase until after Friday's Cabinet Council. Whether the Boers will be content to wait, even that long before ending the suspense with hostilities appears open to a great deal of doubt.

A Post despatch from Pietermaritzburg, Natal, dated Sept. 19, says: "I have never known the situation to be graver. The Boers only await two day's rain on the veldt before the beginning of hostilities. They are determined on war, and consider they can expect nothing else after the last despatch, and are prepare to face the consequences."

FORMIDABLE ON THE BORDER.

The correspondent then describes in detail the Boers' elaborate border preparations which appear more thorough and formidable than heretofore believed.

He says the Orange Free State officers at Pretoria have devised a combined plan of action which includes seizing Majuba, Laing's Nek, and Newcastle, Natal, the moment the ultimatum arrives.

BOERS ARRESTED.

The correspondent asserts that the Portuguese officials at Rissanio-Garcia have arrested some Boer officials on the charge of constructing a laager in Portuguese territory.

OUTLANDERS WEARY OF DELAY

The Uitlander Council, as the result of meetings held at Pietermaritzburg and Johannesburg, has decided to address a communication to the British High Commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner, urging the Imperial Government to break off negotiations with the Transvaal. The reasons for this action are that: "The severe distress prevailing may compel the remaining Uitlanders to accept any compromise offered; that loyal British subjects are becoming discontented and that great unrest exists among the natives."

It should be born in mind, however that Pietermaritzburg has been the Mecca of the alarmists, and the Morning Post despatches are inclined to be sensational.

CHAMBERLAIN WORN OUT.

Mr. Chamberlain spent the day at the Colonial Office. He looked completely worn out by anxiety.

TROOPS REACHING NATAL.

Durban, Natal, Sept. 20.—The first battalion of the Manchester Regiment has arrived here on the steamer Goth, and immediately proceeded [illegible]. The crowds present cheered the troops, who responded.

JUST LIKE A DIME NOVEL

Is Holden's Recital of How He Robbed the Bank's Strong Box.

TESTIFIES AGAINST PONTON

And Alleges That the Latter Was an Accomplice and Him the Key

Roach and Witness Entered the Bank in February, 1897, But Failed to Open the Safe—Ponton Was to Have $5,000, No Matter How Much Was Taken.

Cobourg, Ont., Sept. 20.—When the court opened this morning Mr. Porter continued his cross-examination of Manager Baines as to the circulation of $10 bills at the time of the robbery, and his statement that no marks of violence were noticed by him. Mr. Baines stated that it was possible to identify the unsigned notes on account of the numbers, but the balance of the cash could not be identified.

To Mr. Osler Mr. Baines stated that he had been warned that the bank would be burglarized in May, 1897.

Frank Vanalstine was questioned by W. J. Harrington as to the movements of the tramps in the vicinity of Napanee during the latter part of June July and August, 1897, and recognized them as Pare, Holden and Roach.

Garnett Vanalstine, uncle of Frank, testified to seeing four men at Hawley's Point, Roach, Holden, Mackie, and Pare.

William H. Holden was informed by Mr. Osler that if he desired he could give further evidence. He expressed his willingness to be examined. Holden commenced his story by stating that in January 1897, the scheme to rob the bank was first mentioned. Robert Mackie told him that William H. Ponton wanted to see him in connection with the robbery of the bank. Ponton, witness claimed, said he could give the combination, but witness preferred that Ponton mark the lock so that he could bore a hole and use a plug and sledge. Nothing was done at this meeting, but at a later session Ponton gave him the key to examine the premises. He brought up a number of burglar tools from Montreal and stopped at Belleville with White Mackie and from this place was driven to Napanee.

It was arranged for the evening Ponton should leave the key of the office under the bank door. They key dropped into a crack, as was afterwards found out, and that was the reason the job was not undertaken. Some time afterwards it was decided to get a stranger in the game, and Holden went to Montreal and talked to John Roach. Afterwards he returned to Napanee and interview Ponton, telling him that it was impossible for him to open the safe. Roach and witness opened the bank about the 20th of February, 1897, but failed to open the safe. They went back to Belleville to see Mackie, but he having his feet frozen they decided to get back to Napanee and make another attempt.

They entered the bank quietly, but a dog there made such a noise they had to depart. Roach went after the animal, but could not catch it. They then decided to go into the office and to make all the noise possible, and to their delight the dog ceased barking, evidently accustomed to it. They worked till four o'clock in the morning, but could not get the safe open. Shortly after this Holden thought it prudent to leave the case.

This was in March 1897, and it was not until June that he saw Ponton again and discussed a new plan to open the bank. Roach had a talk with witness and stated that a man named Pare was in the game and that it would be foolish for him to drop out, but to come with them and share in the swag. He then told of the scheme to place Durand in the vault at the cemetery. This scheme failed. Then it was suggested that Pare be introduced to Ponton. This was done, and Pare and Ponton were afterwards seen together several times.

Holden was asked about his visit to Ponton's rooms. This took place in July, 1897, and he was there seven or eight times afterwards. Witness described the apartments in detail, the furniture in the rooms and articles hanging on the walls. The next time the bank was entered was by Pare alone. This he only knew from hearsay. In the middle of July when Mr. Baines was away, Pare told witness that Ponton was in charge and that the vault would be left on the day lock. They went down, but there were too many around and they had to give up.

Another day when Baines was away Pare and witness went to Ponton's room and waited until 4 o'clock, when after an inspection of the premises, they seperated. Pare went in the bank and got the combination, everything being left in shape for him by Ponton. They took a cartridge of coppers at this visit. The combination was shortly afterwards changed, and they were obliged to wait until the manager went away then. In the meantime Pare and witness were arrested. Holden identified a combination key as one in the possession of Pare at the time of his arrest as a tramp.

In answer to a question by Mr. Osler, Holden was not sure that Ponton had mentioned bonds being kept in the bank. The accused had on one occasion said to him: "It was pretty near all up with me to-day. I was short $100 [illegible] thing is all O.K."

On Friday, August 7, Mackie, Pare and himself went down and entered the bank. It was arranged with Ponton to occupy his rooms and wait till he came in. They waited till 12 o'clock, and then went down the back stairs leading to the yard. When they got into the shed a hole was bored in the partition and access was made for Pare to get in. They could not use the door safely as it was summer time. While Pare made good with the swag he looked after the locks and arranged the lock on Ponton's drawer, so that it would look the same as the others. The teller's apartment was opened by a key Pare had, but witness did not know wheter it was obtained from Ponton or not.

Mackie was in the shed during the robbery; when the string telegraph became broken came inside. In leaving witness fixed up the hole made in the partition, and Pare, leading the way, went up to Ponton's room and placed the money on the table. A blanket was placed against the window and the distribution commenced. Ponton was to have $5,000 no matter how much was taken. A bundle of 1,000 fives was placed beside him. White Mackie received $1,100; John Mackie received $100 to pay for their hotel bill. The money was paid to Robert Mackie for John. In leaving the bank he noticed Pare try to get the best of them by stealing a $50 bill from the bundle.

"No you don't," said Holden, and Pare put it back.

They each got their "divvy," and Ponton placed his share in the keeping of Holden. He planted this money at the first half-miles post east of the Napanee station. Mackie wanted to take care of Ponton's money, and in a conversation with Holden stated that if he got it for six weeks he would keep it all. Roach left the game in the beginning of August, but received $1,100 for what he had done. White Mackie got $1,100 to prevent any jealoury arising between the two. Holden while in Boston was informed that Pare had been in Napanee in October following the robbery, and, thinking that Pare was trying to do something "dirty," he decided to make an investigation.

He went to New Hampshire and saw Pare asking him what he was doing in Napanee. Witness stated that he thought Pare was trying to rob Ponton of the money that had been hidden for him. He decided to come to Napanee in the spring and get the money and give it to Ponton.

They put up for a time in Belleville in April, 1898, when witness went to the hiding place and dug up the money and returned $5,000 to Ponton, retaining the $2,000 unsigned notes, which Ponton said he would have nothing to do with.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

A MAN CHARGED WITH A VERY SERIOUS OFFENCE.

The Offender a Resident of Cavendish Township and is Now in Gaol—County Constable Cochrane Makes the Arrest.

A few days ago County Crown Attorney Wood was advised that a man named Olonza Switzer, a farmer living in Cavendish Township, was guilty of one of the most hineous crimes on record.

County Constable Cochrane was instructed to investigate, and to arrest the offender if sufficient evidence was forthcoming to warrant it. He returned yesterday afternoon with his man, whom he lodged in gaol.

The preliminary trial will take place in the Orange Hall, Buckhorn, on Thursday next, before County Police Magistrate Edmison.

The charge is that of incest, and the other party to the crime is his seventeen year old unmarried daughter, who has a baby a few months old. His wife is living and has a young family, the daughter above mentioned being the eldest of seven.

HARVEST FESTIVAL.

Annual Harvest Festival of All Saints' Church Held Last Evening.

A large congregation attended the harvest festival of All Saints' last evening. The service was bright and cheerful, the edifice beautifully decorated with seasonable fruit, flowers and vegetables, and the special sermon for the occasion was a masterpiece and was listened to with great interest by those present. The harvest anthem was "Great is the Lord,"—Lohr, and the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis Jackson's in F., which, together with special hymns were rendered by the choir in its usual fine style.

Besides the pastor, Rev W L Armitage, the following clergy were present: Revs. H Symonds, J C Davidson, E V Stevenson and W Archibald. The sermon was delivered by Rev Mr Symonds.

The Prize Winners.

The distribution of prizes given by the W.C.T.U., to four candidates attaining the highest percentage in physiology and temperance at the recent midsummer examinations, took place in the Women's Auxiliary rooms of the Y M C.A., on Tuesday night. There were two first prizes of $4 each, which were won by Miss Eileen Eyres, of the Central School, and Miss Marion Carveth, of the Convent, who each obtained 78 per cent. The second prize was won by Miss Florence Hallihan, of the convent, who obtained 67 per cent. The third prize was a ticket to the Y.M.C.A. William G. Ferguson, of the South Ward School, and Miss Mary E Rose of the Central School, made the next highest percentage—60. Each were therefore awarded a ticket to [illegible].

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 21, 1899

OUR EXTRAVAGANT COUNCIL.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I was pleased to read your reply to "Fair Play" in yesterday's issue of your valuable paper. It is notorious that the present Council are extravagant in regard to the great spending department—the streets and bridges. In this connection let me ask you a few questions, Mr. Editor, which you may either answer or not, just as you feel inclined.

Is it true that under the contract for the new walks, the contractors are required to leave the streets on which their operations extend, "as they got them"—free from yawning chasms at the corners, and with all the surplus earth carted away?

Is it true that the town has supplied men and teams to "clean up" after the contractors?

Is it true that alterations have been made, through the blundering of the engineers, entailing heavy bills of extras?

Is it true that a second engineer has been put in the engineer's office in the person of Mr. George Ranney, making two engineers for the town?

Is it true that the sidewalks are narrowed or widened in certain localities to suit the individual whose property is affected, in cases where such individual has sufficient of a "pull" with the chief engineer?

Is it true that while the contract for laying the walks calls for a certain sum the extra work in repairing the streets will run the total outlay to very high figures?

Is it true that the Murray street "Canal," which has been cut at a great expense, is a piece of uncalled for waste, and a positive injury to the street?

Is it true that the amount of money wasted by the town in connection with Ald. Neil's rubber company has not been repaid the town?

These are a few of the questions I would like to have answered through the Times. It is time the people took more interest in the affairs of the town.

VERITAS.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Good morning.

•• •• ••

Madame France has just made her appearance before the world in the second elaborate production selected from her repertoire for this season. The piece promises to have as successful a run as its predecessor, the Rennes farce.

•• •• ••

The Czar's alleged intention to close all Russian ports to all foreign ships will prove an excellent means of cutting off all foreign trade and placing Russia in a state of isolation that will hardly prove splendid.

•• •• ••

Mr. Bryan says "one of the great purposes of Government is to put rings in the noses of hogs." Most governments have hitherto had considerable to do with "rings," but in a different way to that implied by Mr. Bryan.

THE HORSE REVIEW.

Robert B, 2:14¼ trotting and 2:19 pacing, stands 17¼ hands high.

Harry Pennington, 2:15½, is on the road at Philadelphia, being driven by Tom Tunney.

Notwithstanding his severe lameness last season, Hans McGregor, 2:11¼, is reported in first rate form.

The Toledo Driving club will employ a regular starting judge this year, J. T. Dewey having been chosen.

Cora Tell, a 2-year-old filly by Axtell, out of Cora Belle, pole record 2:19¼, has been bred to Margrave, 2:15¼, and will be trained this season.

Irish Lassie, 2:16, the pride of the Hawaiian Islands, is being prepared at Honolulu for the June races. She is being trained by Jack Gibson.

It is said that Henry Fleischman will bring Derby Princess, 2:08¼, back from Austria. She has not done well since leaving Henry Sanders' stable.

Valney French has signed another year's contract with C. H. Anthony, Muncie, Ind., and will remove to that city. He will handle about 16 matinee horses for the local club.

W. B. Fisk, Coldwater, Mich., who owns Great Heart, 2:12¼, has sold Latitude, 2:15, to Mr. Johnson, Hubbard, O. Latitude is a great knee actor and may appear later in a bangtail costume.

George Dougherty, who trained Marion Mills, the late guideless pacing queen, has been engaged by E. R. Bulkley, Philadelphia, to educate the chestnut mare Lizzie Meyers and the bay mare Ravenwood to do the guideless act.

Helen K, 2:13¼, and mate, May K, who won the blue ribbon in the class for pairs to wagon at Boston horse show, are owned by W. M. V. Hoffman, New York. Helen was purchased by her present owner from the Forest City farm, Cleveland, and is a daughter of Patron.—Horseman.

FUNSTON AND HIS MEN.

General Funston has been in the swim.—Boston Herald.

Hail to General Funston, the unsocculated Hobson of the orient!—Detroit Free Press.

Ten to one, when Aguinaldo gets his last ditch ready, that man Funston will be on hand to swim it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

General Fred Funston, the Kansas cyclone in the tropics, is not a Chicago man. He didn't stop to boil the water.—Omaha Bee.

Judging by the elegant fight he puts up, Fred Funston must have been a member of some Kansas church choir.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Twentieth Kansas is showing itself ambitious, ambidextrous and amphibious. It is right in the swim all the time—Topeka Capital.

General Funston can have anything he wants in Kansas when he gets home, even Jerry Simpson's socks, if he can find them.—St. Paul Globe.

We will soon be hearing from the chaps who attended swimming school with General Fred Funston and tied knots in his clothes.—Washington Post.

General Luna is the first to see the sea serpent this season. Some observers say it was the Kansas regiment using a rope for a ferry.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

No wonder the Twentieth Kansas volunteers have invariably swept the Filipinos before them. Their battlecry is the Kansas university football yell of "Rock chalk! Jayhawk! K. S. U.!"—St. Louis Republic.

THE CYNIC.

All of us are very clever in finding excuses for not working more.

The most sensible woman will "put on" a little before a preacher.

A man is not really prominent until he has officiated at three prominent funerals.

Some women who never work for anything else will work like slaves for a church.

An old maid dearly loves to watch a quarrel between a husband and wife to see how it comes out.

If a man truly loves his wife, he is very apt to become confidential and tell her a lot of stories on the other fellows.

In talking it is well to know that people will not remember what you are saying unless they can use it against you.

A man always rises in his own estimation when he gets on familiar terms with a person of whom he once stood in awe.

There probably never was a woman too good to try to pass her children off as under age when traveling on the railroad.—Atchison Globe.

WEATHER PROPHETS.

Peacocks are reliable weather prophets. Before a storm the gaudy birds become restless and clamorous.

The green woodpecker is said to laugh his "Ya-ha-ha" in different, more liquid tones when rain is coming, and especially gifted persons claim his cry really changes to "rain, rain, rain!"

In Dorsetshire, England, they foretell storms by the flight of the rooks. When they are pitch falling or playing at tumbling, diving and wheeling in the air, they say a storm is due.

Sea fowl are very clever in foretelling a storm. To a sailor bad weather means wind, and to a landsman it means rain, but the screaming of the water birds usually foretells a change of some sort for the worse in the prevailing weather.

SISTERLY CITIES.

Minneapolis has lost a dam, but then the town was never worth one.—St. Paul Dispatch.

What is being done for art in Chicago is not much. What is being done for art by Chicago is infinitely less.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

If the New York gas war keeps on at its present rate of progress, consumers will soon get the stuff for nothing, with a chromo and a pound of tea thrown in.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

New Yorkers are talking of having a self propelling fire engine. Come up this way, neighbors, and see what the metropolis of Connecticut can show you in that line. You're years behind us.—Hartford Courant.

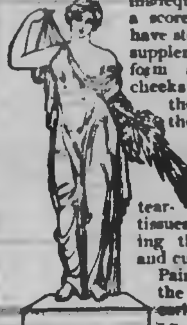
FOUL TIPS.

For Sale—One baseball team. Answers to the name of "Giants." Any offer will be accepted.—New York Herald.

The ex-prides of Von der Ahe haven't as yet had their batting eyes forwarded from St. Louis.—Cleveland Leader.

As in previous years, the Washington team, [illegible], will be known as a [illegible] club.—Chicago Record.

A perfect woman—perfect in form and in feature is a great rarity. Every woman realizes this as she stands before some beautiful piece of Greek sculpture. Social customs, tight lacing, improper food, inadequate clothing, and a score of other things have stolen the shape and suppleness of woman's form and robbed her cheeks of their roses and their roundness. For these things Nature avenges herself. Weakening drains establish themselves, tearing down the tissues and destroying the graceful lines and curves of the figure. Pains and aches help the wrinkles to come early. Displacements and bearing-down sensations weaken the entire system. Nervousness makes life almost unendurable. Mothers suffering in this manner impart their weaknesses to their children, and thus is kept up the endless chain of imperfect reproduction. A new order of things is being established, however. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the great non-alcoholic cure for women's diseases and weaknesses, is making hundreds of girls and women healthy. And it is also making the rising generation stronger and more perfect physically. Like produces like. A healthy mother has healthy children. "Favorite Prescription" makes healthy mothers.



Mrs. E. A. Bender, of Keene, Coshocton Co., Ohio, writes: "I never courted newspaper notoriety, yet I am not afraid to speak a good word for your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' I suffered terribly with prolapsus and weakness. After using one bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Pellets' I was a well woman. I have taken no medicine since and have had no symptoms of my former trouble."

A Great Doctor Book Free.—Send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., to cover cost of customs and mailing only and he will send you a free copy of his 1008-page Common Sense Medical Adviser. Cloth cover 50 stamps.

Heavy Street Expenditure.

We call attention to a letter in another column dealing with the expenditure in connection with the granolithic walks. The Times does not propose to answer the questions put by "Veritas," who, we think, probably taken an extreme view of the matter. The trouble in connection with building permanent walks, is in striking a grade. We are free to admit that the levels of some of the walks are bad, and that the engineer has frequently blundered in this regard, but it would be out of the question to strike a grade that would be satisfactory to everybody. We believe the town is spending altogether too much money on the streets, and that there will be an "awakening" in January that will rather astonish some members of the present Council.

The Transvaal parliament, having re-enacted the law empowering the government to confiscate gold mines of persons adjudged traitors, Kruger will now proceed to discover a remarkable number of traitors in the Transvaal, each one of whom will have shares in mines. But when the British troops get to work, there will be a good deal more than a few gold mines confiscated.

Sir Thomas Lipton has been honored with membership in fifty-one New York clubs. Why no make it fifty-two and proclaim him one of the best trumps in the deck?

Following are extracts from the report of Capt. T. H. Trethewey, M.E., upon the Company's properties which are now being vigorously developed, and upon which will be installed the 6 drill compressor plant, which was purchased from the Canadian Rand Drill Co. on the 5th inst. for immediate delivery.

MR. TRETHEWEY SAYS;

"The vein on these properties is well defined, and, where exposed by the workings near the line between the Western Hill and Virginia, averages fully 18 ft. in width. The gauge consists of a somewhat crushed and iron-stained quartz, sparingly mineralized with Galena, Copper and Iron Pyrites, with here and there small amount of Blend and Graphite disseminated throughout."

"On the Western Hill, a a shaft has been sunk to a depth of 27 ft. on the foot wall, and the ledge has been exposed by a cross-cut to its full width; it here appears to be divided into hanging and foot wall portions by a seam of somewhat decomposed clay material which appears to dip towards the hanging wall, cutting out the leaner and allowing the richer portions of the vein to increase with depth."

"Samples taken in this shaft, across an 8 ft. face lying next to the foot wall, gave an average return of $7.00 in Gold and $1.35 in Silver, making a total of $8.35 per ton, while the balance of the vein gave a return of $2.00 in Gold and 70 cents in Silver, making a total of $2.70 per ton for a width of ten feet, so that $5.25 may be considered a fair average for the full width of the vein."

"The conclusion I have drawn after a thorough examination and study of the facts as here presented is, that judicious development should locate extensive bodies of pay ore, as even if only the 8 ft. next to the foot wall be extracted, the values continuing in depth as there is no reason why they should not, while leaner portions may be encountered they could be left in the mine to support the walls, and you would still have a proposition of unlimited tonnage well worthy of judicious expenditure in exposing its resources."

"The general conditions, elevation, etc., are so favorable that mining operations can be carried on for many years by simply tunnelling into the mountain and following the trend of the vein, and hundreds of thousands of tons of ore can readily be made available without the use of hoisting or pumping machinery."

"Situated as these claims are about 2000 ft. above the bank of the Okanagan River, with a natural outlet for Ærial or other tramway, and only about three miles from the "Black Hawk" Claim, which is within easy reach of the river the question of transportation of ore from the mine to the mill could be easily arranged."

"With an electric plant established at Dog Falls, which is possibly ten miles distant, ample power could be generated at a nominal cost for all purposes, and by adopting the most modern methods of mining, milling and concentrating, together with an unlimited supply of ore, the cost of production should be reduced to a minimum."

"If the present promising assurances are borne out, the opening up of the three levels could develope at least a three years' supply of ore for a plant of large capacity, and I would strongly recommend the erection and installation of a mill of not less than from 250 to 300 tons daily capacity."

"With cheap power an unlimited supply of ore and a plant capable of handling the quantity I have suggested, the cost of mining and milling ought not to exceed from $1.50 to $2.00 per ton, and under capable management it should be kept within the lower limits."

"Thus even if the lowest values, $3.05 be taken as a basis of calculation and allowing that 85 p. c. of this can be saved, it would yield a profit of $1.09 for each ton of ore treated, but I am of opinion that much higher values may be confidently expected, and if there is a profit winner in the camp, all conditions considered, this one can be conscientiously recommended to the investing public."

At the next Annual Meeting of the Company, which will be held on the 6th of November next, several of Montreal's most prominent business men will acc Directorship.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of stiff and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up.

Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Tainter, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment is headquarters of the world for [illegible] and Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

THIRSTING FOR GORE!

York Rangers Very Anxious to Fight Aaginst the Boers

VOLUNTEER FOR SERVICE.

And Colonel Lloyd Goes Colonel Sam Hughes, M.P., One Better.

The Gallant Colonel Points Out to the Minister of Militia That the Regiment Has Always Been One of the Most Efficient Rural Battalions in the Country.

Toronto, Sept. 19.—Hurrah for the 12th York Rangers and Col. T. H. Lloyd, for they may go to war in South Africa and whip Com Paul. That is if they get a chance.

Col. Lloyd has written the Minister of Militia, Hon. Dr. Borden, asking that if Canada decides to send out a regiment to the Transvaal, the honor of being that regiment may fall upon the 12th York Rangers. In support of this request, Col. Lloyd pointed out that the battalion has always been recognized as the most efficent rural battalion in Canada.

In making this request the Colonel has gone Col. Sam Hughes one better. The latter offered to raise a regiment if the Government would sanction such action and send it out to the Transvaal. Col. Lloyd distances his brother colonel's offer for he is willing to produce a regiment well drilled and full of military ardour.

That this step of Colonel Lloyd's will evokke much interest in every circle in Toronto goes without saying, for the personnel of the regiment embraces this city and every town, village and hamlet in York County. No other battalion spreads out over so much country, no other battalion has members in so many different places.

The Conspiracy Charges.

Paris, Sept. 19.—It is expected that the work of the High Court investigating committee, appointed to enquire into the charges of conspiring to change the form of government brought against M. Deroulde and others, will take from four to six week. When the task is completed the High Court (Senate) will reconvene. It is expected its sessions will take up a month.

Work of the Peace Conference.

The Hague, Sept. 19.—The States General were convened to-day by Queen Wilhelmina, who in a speech from the throne referred to the great work of the Peace Conference.

Her Majesty said she had reason to hope that all the conferring powers would sign the treaties drawn up at the conference.

Prince and Princess Escape from Death.

Perth, Scotland, Sept. 19. — The Prince and Princess Hohenlohe-Langenburg narrowly escaped death while going to Balmoral to visit Queen Victoria. Their train collided with another train at the station. The royal saloon carriage was half telescoped. As the Prince and Princess occupied the rear end of the car they suffered only a severe shock, and proceeded to Balmoral. No one was seriously injured.

Ernest William Frederic Charles Maximilian, hereditary Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, married Princess Alexandra Louise Olga Victoria, third daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, April 20, 1896. His father is the Govern-General of Alsace-Lorraine.

Song Shots With a Graphophone.

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sung it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Write for catalogue No. 30 to THE COLUMBIA PHONOGRAPH COMPANY, No. 313 Main street Buffalo, N. Y.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemayer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican-Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

WILLING TO PAY FOR IT.

What Uncle Bill Wanted the Newspaper Publisher to Do.

A number of newspaper men were exchanging reminiscences a few days ago in a Court street inn. One of them, by the way, was an ex-publisher—that is to say, he once owned and edited a paper in the upper section of the state. One of his subscribers was William Makepeace Thackeray Willington, whose neighbors called him "Uncle Bill" to save time and labor.

"One day Uncle Bill walked into my office," said the former publisher. "He placed his whip in a corner and removed his hat. He asked if I was the editor. I pleaded guilty. 'Shake,' said he. 'I am glad to know ye. When I was a young feller, I used to do some writin myself.'

"Uncle Bill lapsed into silence and did some solid thinking for several minutes. Then he resumed the conversation. He said he liked the appearance of The Banner of Freedom mighty well and hoped it was not only bringing me fame, but money also. Naturally my bosom swelled with pride. The old man said he had only a few minutes to spare, and, before leaving, he wished to ask a favor. I supposed that he was about to spring a little poem which he had dashed off all by himself, but that wasn't the case. Uncle Bill said:

"'My son, I want to ask you a special favor. My eyes are not as strong as they were, and I would like to have you print my copy of the paper in a type two or three sizes larger than you use in the regular edition. Now, mind, I don't want you to do this for nothin. I'm willin to pay for it. Here's the money, and if that isn't enough let me know when my subscription is due again and I'll pay what's owin.'

"The old man dove his right hand into his pocket, fished out a silver half dollar and planked it on my table, saying: 'There's the money. If that isn't enough to cover the extra expense, let me know when I call in next spring, and I'll make it good. I'm willin to pay for any little favors.' Before I could explain the impossibility of his scheme he jumped into his buggy and started off for Deep Hollow."

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Philadelphia North American.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. E. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

The Unattainable One.

She—Indeed it's not an easy thing for a girl to get a husband.

He—Why, a pretty girl can make her choice of four out of every five men she meets!

She—But it's the fifth that she wants.—Harlem Life.

A bundle of spider webs, not larger than a buckshot and weighing less than a dram, would, if straightened out and untangled, reach a distance of 350 miles.
